FRED LUNDIN'S LIFE STORY

HOW CITY HALL 'MYSTERY MAN' PULLS STRINGS

Ballyhoos Politics as He Did Nostrums.

BY A POLITICIAN.

FOREWORD.

The following is the first of a series of articles descriptive of the career of Fred Lundin, the "man of mystery" in Illinois politics, the "silent boss" of the Republican city and state machines.

A rather obscure figure less than a decade ago, Lundin now holds in his hands the political and some of the other fortunes of 38,000 state, municipal, county, park board, school board, sanitary district and miscellaneous employes, to whom he awards through his "organization" the astonishing sum of $78,000,000 annually in salaries.

Nominally, these persons are the servants of the people; actually, they are the legionaries of "the machine," whom Lundin rules in the manner of a Herodian tax collector—with a tone of subservience to those whose good will he needs, but with ruthless despotism for those others who require his favor.

Remains a Mystery Figure.

Yet for all the power he exercises over the destiny of most of them, Lundin remains to the rank and file of his members, as well as to the public at large, a mysterious and not unterrifying figure. For he has contrived to build up by postures and poses a certain esoteric romanticism about his person that suggests a Voodoo priest.

He lives alone (or virtually alone, so far as human society is concerned), surrounded by mute and colorless retainers, who dart hither and yon on unannounced missions. His presence is difficult of access; his habits are matters of speculation; and time and silence have combined to weave about his past a cloak of uncertainty, which tends to heighten, rather than detract from, the bizarre fascination of the principal.

Calls Himself "Poor Swede."

Where did he come from, and whither is he bound? From the performance of what secret rites do his weird powers arise? And why do men of power and place seek him out to do his bidding—the "Poor Swede," as he delights to call himself, or "Insignificant Me"?

An investigation among his disciples will elicit many fanciful theories. He is an oracle who reads the future in the soft coal vapors of the loop. And he is something of a Svengali, too, because it is his mystic spell that causes Thompson and the other Trilbys of the current political theater to sing so sweetly.

But perhaps the answer is not so far to seek. At any rate, the following and the remaining articles of the series will address themselves to a solution of the enigma, and we would best begin, as is proper in all circumstances—at the beginning.

CHAPTER I.

Virtue Is Its Own Reward.

Of a summer evening, thirty years or so ago, a one horse truck moved slowly through a street on the northwest side in that political subdivision of Chicago known as Hertzville.

The impact of the horse's hoofs upon the pavement was accompanied by a shrill jingling of bottles, which became increasingly pronounced when the driver struck the reins upon the animal's conspicuous ribs to encourage it to greater endeavors.

The driver himself was a youth of odd appearance. A cowboy hat of colossal proportions topped a mass of yellow hair, and shadowed eyes that scanned the hurrying throngs on either hand, mysteriously, through huge amber glasses.

Weird Garb Marks the Man.

The occult effect of the glasses and the hat was enhanced by a full-tailed coat of black, which might have been designed for an undertaker, and did, in fact, embrace the wearer in the mournful manner of a shroud.

And yet not quite. For whenever he used his arms to guide his venerable vehicle, it opened and revealed a vest of pristine whiteness that ungraciously rebuked the frankness of its exposure by crying aloud to be relieved with a full dress suit.

A vista of snowy shirt front, a flowing black tie, and a rolling collar of uncertain lineage, completed the startlingly sartorial ensemble.

The wagon partook in no small measure of the bizarre aspect of its custodian. Its intimacy with its coat of paint had evidently been of several years standing, while one of its wheels

MARY SIMMONDS CHICAGO'S MOST BEAUTIFUL GIRL

Awarded First Prize in Tribune Contest.

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Strolling down the Boul Mich on a sunny day, or a rainy one, with an eye trained not to look too straight ahead, but to waver to the right and to the left slightly, one realizes Chicago has other features to brag about beside the new Field museum and the Wrigley building. It has pretty girls and many of them. So that to be chosen the prettiest girl in Chicago is no mean honor.

Mary Simmonds, 1129 Sunnyside avenue, opines it is a great honor. She further opines that the thousand dollar check she was awarded as first prize in THE TRIBUNE'S $20,200 beauty contest, is no mean check to find in an envelope addressed to you.

Eyes That Talk.

She has a pair of eyes that are remarkably beautiful. One of the celebrated judges in the contest went so far as to say she had the most beautiful eyes in the world. Which is saying quite a great deal for a pair of Chicago eyes. Big and black and of fine shape and setting, they just talk.

There is an animation, a vivacity, a daintiness and a charm about pretty Miss Mary that wins you instantly. These were the features that won the three celebrated judges, Pauline Palmer, Albin Polasek, and J. Wellington Reynolds. She is 22, 5 feet 5, weighs 115, quite slight in build, and has a pair of ankles and feet that any girl would love to own. In addition, she has two perfect rows of even, pearly teeth, and when she smiles she's still more lovely. Her hair is that dark brown that looks black at night. A finely chiselled nose and well arched eyebrows and a clear skin are other beauty features of the prize winner for Chicago.

A Born Chicagoan.

Born in Chicago, of Irish and English extraction, was Miss Mary. She lives with her mother and a younger sister.

A talent for drawing marked her school days. After graduating she taught drawing for a short while. Then went with the ordnance department during the war, changing later to the federal board for vocational education in the old Leiter building, where she is at present employed as an office assistant and clerk.

"Mary would like to have gone to art school and studied for that kind of work, but sickness at the time made it impossible for her to spend the money," her mother told me. "She had to get a position right away. She's a dear good girl and I hope now she will be able to take up the art work."

Crazy About Movies.

"There's only one thing I would like better than that," confessed Mary. "I should love to go into the movies. I'm just crazy about them."

"What will you buy with the $1,000?" I asked.

"Mother wants a vacuum cleaner, so I'll get that, and a new dress for her—and a couple of hats."

"Not any dresses for yourself?"

Makes All Her Clothes.

"I make all my own clothes, so I don't have to spend much on them."

She was wearing a black satin dress that looked like a young Paris model. My admiration went up twenty more notches at least when she admitted she made it herself.

Miss Mary can scrub and wash and cook and play the piano and draw and make dresses and hats.

BEG YOUR PARDON.

It was discovered after the rotogravure section had gone to press that one of the $50 prize winners, Byrd Maguire, 1300 Albion avenue, is married and consequently not eligible in the beauty contest. Miss Ruth Samuel, 4615 North Robey street, stenographer, will receive the prize award instead. Miss Samuel's photograph appears on page 4 of this section. The other prize winning photographs will be found in the rotogravure section.

MEMORIAL DAY BRINGS PRAISE OF YANK DEAD

Allied Chiefs Laud U. S. Part in War.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, May 28.—On Memorial day this year representatives of all the allied nations in Europe will bow their heads before the graves of the American soldiers to do honor to the memories of the valiant doughboys who sacrificed themselves in the cause of right and justice and who sleep their last sleep in the soil of Europe.

For the occasion military, political, and literary leaders of the foreign countries have availed themselves of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE to testify the gratitude and admiration of the whole world for the noble sacrifices of the American soldiers, and for the influential help which America gave Europe during the war.

Tribute from Marshal Fayolle.

MARSHAL FAYOLLE, former commander of the French armies on the Somme—The United States is about to render solemn homage to those of her children who fell on the battlefields of the great war in defense of right and liberty. America has never forgotten the intervention of Gen. Lafayette's soldiers in the revolutionary war. France will keep a grateful and lasting remembrance of the heroes who came to help her and who contributed in a large measure to the victories of 1918. France and the United States will be forever bound by ties of mutual friendship and esteem. This union will not only be for their mutual advantage but will be the safest guarantee for world peace.

U. S. Strengthened France.

GEN. GOURAUD—After having struggled almost alone against the barbarians from the beginning of the war, when, in spite of the heroism of the French soldiers, we began to feel exhausted, the entry of America gave us comrades in arms as resolute as we ourselves to fight the war to a finish to make right, justice, and liberty triumph. The American assistance gave us the necessary factors to win victory.

MARQUIS ROCHAMBEAU—Europe may be ungrateful, but the Americans know that France is too spontaneous to have this defect in common with many nations. They saw us crossing the seas in order to answer their call for help in their struggle. How can we forget the determination of the Americans who pushed aside business considerations and enlisted under our flag as soon as our country was endangered. They did not forget our common memories. How can we forget them.

Cannot Praise Too Highly.

GEN. DE GOUTTE, commander in chief of the allied forces on the Rhine—I can never praise too highly the generous help which the valiant American army gave us during the great war. I several times was able to verify the splendid military qualities of the Yankee soldiers, particularly at the second battle of the Marne, where they contributed in a large measure to the victorious offensive of the sixth army, of which I had the honor to command.

GEN. BERDOULAT, military governor of Paris, and former commander of the 12th corps—I had under my command the 1st and 2d American Divisions on July 18, 1918, and the following days during the glorious counter attack on Villers-Cotterets, which marked the definite decline of the German expectations on the battlefields of France. I am proud to do homage to their military qualities, to their determination, and to their spirit of sacrifice.

Anglo-American Friendship.

HORATIO BOTTOMLEY, member of parliament—I hail the new spirit of Anglo-American friendship and coöperation which was marked by the advent of Col. George Harvey, the new American ambassador to the Court of St. James. With America and the other branches of the Anglo-Saxon race working together the world will be safe."

CARTON DE WIART, prime minister of Belgium—Since the crusades. I do not know of any enterprise which has done more honor to mankind than the intervention of America in the great war. The children of the United States who fell are entitled more than our own children to the everlasting gratitude of those for whom moral law exists.

TAKE JONESCU, Roumanian minister of foreign affairs—The American assistance in the great war was not only of the highest material utility but also of the highest moral value.

Managers of Non-Partisan Ticket Call for Volunteers at Polls

AN appeal for volunteer workers for the Coalition Non-Partisan Judicial ticket, the names of whose candidates will appear in the Democratic column on the ballot on Monday, June 6, has been issued by Chairman Robert M. Sweitzer and Secretary Charles W. Peters of the campaign committee. This appeal, directed to all men and women voters of Cook county, follows:

To the Men and Women of Cook County:

When in 1776 our forefathers, revolting against the political tyranny of that day, established a new government dedicated to freedom, it was upon the VOLUNTEER that they depended to maintain it. In every crisis in our history, in every war, the same dependence has been placed upon the VOLUNTEER, and he has never been lacking.

Today the people of Cook county face a crisis which in many respects resembles that which led to the revolution.

As in 1776, the liberties of the people are menaced by political tyrants whose arbitrary acts know no bounds. Some of these acts may be enumerated:

A courageous and honest judge who dared to make a decision in accordance with the law, but displeasing to these tyrants, was threatened with being driven from the bench and told he had better "hire a law office." As far as it has been in their power these tyrants have made good on this threat.

Public school teachers who from conscientious motives opposed legislation which was desired by these tyrants were threatened with decreases in their pay, and so brazen are the tyrants that the threat was actually put in writing on the stationery of the board of education.

Public employes who have difficulty in feeding their families on their pay were compelled to part with their money to buy tickets sold to accumulate an enormous political campaign fund and were threatened with the loss of their jobs if they did not "come across."

Election returns have been withheld from the people and counted in private by the minions of the machine, who made known what results they desired to report to the public.

Tax increases have been piled upon tax increases, bond issue upon bond issue, forcing raises in rents and increases in the cost of living, in order that the revenue controlled by the tyrants might be sufficient for their desires.

In short, government "with a club" has been established.

To perfect their tyranny, our Chicago King Georges are now seeking to control the courts, seeing in them only another weapon to hold over the heads of their subjects and foes, another menace with which to "threaten" when the need may be.

Against this army must be pitted the VOLUNTEERS of today, and we, as the managers of the campaign of the coalition nonpartisan judicial ticket, appeal to the people of Cook county to furnish them.

We want men of courage and intelligence, men who can be depended upon to know their rights and stand up for them. They are needed to get the vote on election day, Monday, June 6, and to see that it is counted fairly.

We want women who will encourage these men and who will aid them.

We need thousands of them, enough to man the 2,500 precincts in the county and to watch every polling place on election night.

Tomorrow is Memorial Day, a day consecrated to those who have died that the nation might live. To these dead on an occasion similar to that of tomorrow our great president, Abraham Lincoln, made an immortal pledge which we ask the people of Cook county to repeat tomorrow:

"That we hereby resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain, that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom and that the government of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the earth."

We ask not only that they repeat the pledge, but that they make it effective by signing their names to the following enlistment:

Coalition Non-Partisan Judicial Campaign committee.
Room 314, Hotel Sherman.

I hereby offer my services in behalf of the Coalition Non-Partisan Judicial ticket as a volunteer worker at the polls on the day of the judicial election, Monday, June 6, between the hours of .... and ...

HARDING CALLS JURY OF KIDS TO DECIDE ON MURDER BIRDS' FATE

Washington, D. C., May 28.—President "Judge" Harding impaneled a youngster "jury" today to determine what fate should befall birds that prey on other birds. To be strictly up to date about it, "Judge" Harding named girls as well as boys on his jury and ordered it to study the problem and report in two weeks.

The kids called at the White House as members of the John Burroughs club to present a book on "Birds in Washington" in connection with the closing day of the American Forestry association's forest protection week. They told the "judge" how birds eat up bugs that otherwise would eat up trees and crops. Then Mr. Harding asked about the birds that kill other birds and nobody could answer, so he named the jury.

Business thus disposed of the "judges," the "jury," and Laddie Boy, White House airedale, went owl hunting at a big pine tree in the executive mansion grounds.

MME. CURIE TO VISIT CHICAGO, BUT NOT COAST

New York, May 28.—Mme Marie Curie, co-discoverer of radium, on advice of physicians, today canceled her plans for a trip to the Pacific coast, scheduled to begin next Wednesday.

She will, however, leave next Wednesday for Chicago to fill dates in the west and will visit the Grand Canyon.

Two physicians examined Mme. Curie, and although they did not make public their diagnosis it was learned she was suffering from an anæmic tendency and a slight affection of the kidneys.

TO BE HONORED AT N. W. U.

Mme. Curie will be in Chicago for the commencement exercises at Northwestern university next month. This was announced yesterday by Prof. W. Lee Lewis.

Mme. Curie will receive the degree of doctor of science, and will be fêted by President Walter Dill Scott. Following the ceremony she will rest at the home of Mrs. George S. Bridge, 570 Milburn street, Evanston.

Mme. Curie's two daughters, Irene, 20 years old, and Eva, 15, will be entertained by the girls of Willard hall, headed by Miss Raymonde Barthelemy daughter of the French consul.

Mrs. Russell Tyson will have Mme. Curie and her daughters as guests during their three day visit.

Rickenbacker Ends Flight at Washington

Washington, D. C., May 28.—Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker completed his transcontinental flight here early tonight, landing at dusk at Bolling field. He was forced down by a thunderstorm in the West Virginia mountains at 3 o'clock, but resumed his flight in one hour and arrived here without further incident.

Rickenbacker arrived at 6:15 p. m. after officers at the field had decided he had been forced down and would not reach Washington tonight. He went immediately to the officers' quarters for a brief rest, but refused to discuss his trip, saying that he was "all in."

Only Two Mishaps.

There were only two mishaps during the flight. Arriving near Cheyenne, Wyo., after dark on the night of May 26, the landing flares were badly set, and he came down so that his plane turned over and was smashed.

Crawling out of the wreckage, Rickenbacker said, "That's nothing." The following morning he resumed his flight in one of the air mail service planes. He reached Chicago that evening.

Sleeps in an Airplane.

He had changed planes at Omaha and made the trip from that city with W. C. Hopson. During that time he slept. Arriving in Chicago, he praised Hopson as a careful pilot.

Starting from Chicago at 7:35 this morning, he reached Dayton, O., shortly after 10 a. m., taking off from that city for Washington at 11:06. A rainstorm forced him to land in the West Virginia mountains, and that prevented his reaching Washington about 2 o'clock in the afternoon as he had intended. After landing he went to the flyers' quarters to rest.

Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker left Chicago yesterday morning on an army plane, borrowed from Chanute field at Rantoul, Ill. The plane was brought from that place at his request by Lieut. H. G. Woodbridge, who accompanied him as far as Dayton, O., where Rickenbacker changed to his own plane and made the remainder of the trip alone.

CARUSO'S VOICE STILL "GOLDEN"; OFF TO ITALY

New York, May 28.—[Special.]—That Enrico Caruso's voice has withstood the ravages of his illness this winter the noted tenor proved today on board the steamer Presidente Wilson, which is carrying him to Italy for a rest. In reply to a question as to whether he had done any singing since his convalescence, he burst into one of his golden notes, a particularly high one, and held it without apparent difficulty.

Caruso, protected by twenty-five private detectives, was half carried up the gangplank amid a crowd of admirers. The tenor and his entourage took possession of the $35,000 suite of rooms especially fitted up for him. Seventy-two pieces of hand baggage and forty-six trunks constituted the luggage of the party.

Entering his own stateroom, Caruso found every available space filled with floral tributes, while hundreds of letters and telegrams from friends in all parts of the world were on the table.

Child of Poor Kidnaped; $2,500 Ransom Demanded

New York, May 28.—[Special.]—Giuseppe Varrotta, 5 year old son of poor parents, was kidnaped while at play last Tuesday afternoon from the doorstep of his home. The kidnapers have demanded $2,500 ransom, threatening death to the child and all his people.

CHICAGO LABOR GRAFT SET AT MILLION A YEAR

Clyne to Call Jury; 12 New Bills Near.

Assistant State's Attorney George E. Gorman yesterday set the annual tax which corrupt union business agents levy on building construction work in Chicago at $1,000,000. He charged at least $5,000,000 had been collected in the last five years. He based his estimates on the week's investigation of the Chicago building situation.

Mr. Gorman announced an immediate grand jury investigation of a $200,000 "yellow dog" defense fund said to have been collected for their own defense by the twenty-five indicted labor leaders last week.

$100,000 Graft on Four Theaters.

Other developments in the day's war on building graft were:

Uncovering by the Dailey commission of evidence said to involve six union business agents in the collection of $100,000 graft from four loop theaters. Seizure of books of Standard Piping and Equipment company.

Announcement by District Attorney Clyne that he would ask Judge Landis to impanel a special grand jury Tuesday to investigate new angles in the building industry.

Report that new true bills are pending against twelve contractors and union business agents before the special grand jury working under Attorney Gorman.

In announcing his new grand jury, Mr. Clyne declared that while in New York he had obtained evidence tending to incriminate several Chicago firms. He said that the alleged lumber, brick, glass, sand and gravel combines would be investigated this week. While in New York he conferred with members of the Lockwood commission, which recently exposed grafting fire insurance companies.

Union Men Aid Inquiry.

In his review of the building graft situation Mr. Gorman said:

"Members of local labor unions have come to me within the last few days with reports that agents of indicted business agents had been attending local meetings and appealing to members to support the men named in true bills. I have information the fund is intended to reach $200,000.

"Union men say they are tired of the crooked business agents and would be glad to get rid of them. We are ready to help them, and to that end I advise all union men to refuse to contribute to the defense fund, on the ground they will be laying themselves open to prosecution."

Seize "Dummy Firm's" Books.

The books of the Standard Piping and Equipment company, 25 North Elizabeth street, were seized by the Dailey committee during the afternoon after Thomas L. Cook, president, and Alexander K. Brown, 3813 West Van Buren street, had given contradictory testimony regarding a steamfitting contract on the Corn Products Refining company's plants at Argo and Pekin, Ill.

The questioning tended to show that the Standard company was a "dummy" corporation organized to take over the steamfitting subcontract on the Argo plant after the steamfitters' union had refused to supply men for the contractors, the E. Baggot company. The incorporators of the Standard company, Cook said, were himself, Frank Ferrara, and George A. Atkins, son-in-law of Charles M. Rau, business agent of the steamfitters' union. The company was organized in October, 1919, and the subcontract was signed with the Baggot company on Nov. 1, 1919.

Scheme Nets $18,000.

"The trouble began at the Argo plant about thirty days after we started work," said Brown, a superintendent for the Baggot company. "I couldn't get steamfitters. I went to see Rau. He told me he couldn't furnish men because I wasn't a member of the Master Steamfitters' association. He advised me to put in an application for membership, which I did. I was told I couldn't get in.

"Rau then advised me to sublet to a steamfitting contractor. I finally met Cook in the union office. Cook said he was thinking of going into business and maybe we could fix it up. I took him out to see Baggot, and Baggot told me later he had agreed to give Cook's concern 2 per cent of the contract price. Cook in addition drew $65 a week from Baggot.

"All he did was to furnish the men. The Baggot company paid them and furnished tools, while the Corn Products company furnished material. The entire amount collected by the Standard company was between $18,000 and $20,000."

Joseph Lotko, owner of the Brighton theater at 4227 Archer avenue, set the ball rolling at the Dailey committee's hearing with a story of how labor graft had raised the cost of construction for his theater from $151,000 to $190,000. He attributed the difference of $39,000 to extortion by union agents. His story involved the plastering contractors' association, the plasterers' union, the lathers' union, and two contractors. Strikes, faulty construction, and destruction of property were the weapons used, he said.

He testified that, after he had let the original contract for plastering for $12,500, under orders of Roman Svionak, the price was raised to $23,400. This he refused to pay. He said he was then ordered to stop work.

Names Plasterers' Agent.

At this point Attorney Joseph B. Fleming, counsel for the committee, interrupted with: "Who gave you the orders?"

"'Bud' Riley, business manager of the plasterers' association," was the reply. "The outcome of this was that I was forced to give the contract to T. Graf, 2542 West 51st street. The contract called for $17,000. Later Graf said he could not go ahead because another increase was coming. I agreed to pay him a reasonable amount, but refused to pay the $8,000 he demanded."

Lotko said he then was taken before Riley again and ordered to pay. He finally paid $700, but the men went out again. Graf then reduced his demands to $5,000, he said. When he still refused to pay, another contractor, Frank Jaros, was introduced. Jaros worked awhile, then stopped, saying the Employing Plasterers' association had called him off the job.

A New Start, More Trouble.

Then Graf asked for workers, saying he would finish the job with day laborers. A business agent of the name of Dolan got the men for him. The next day Lotko said he found them tearing out the angle irons from the stage.

"Why?" he asked.

"Wrong size," he was told. When he protested, the lathers quit work.

Lotko then decided to dispense with lathing and engaged plasterers to slap on the mortar the best they could. The lathers become threatening, he said, and police had to be called to stop the fights that followed.

Plate glass windows put in by Lotko were insured. The day after they had been put in place they were broken, according to his testimony. He hired guards and a bulldog, and finally completed the building.

Sift "Plot" Next Week.

Attorney Fleming announced that next week the committee would investigate charges material men and contractors have conspired to keep building materials out of Chicago.

CORDON GIVES FAREWELL FOR JANE ADDAMS

"We will not have real permanent peace in the world unless women have a part in the making of it," Bishop Charles P. Anderson of the Episcopal diocese made this statement last night at the farewell banquet given for Miss Jane Addams of Hull house by the Society of Midland Authors at the Cordon club.

Miss Addams will leave for Europe on Saturday to attend the conference of the Woman's International League for Peace and Freedom. The third international congress, at which Miss Addams will preside as president, will be held at Vienna, Austria, in July. Women delegates from twenty-two nations will be present, among them fifty delegates from America.

Miss Addams said the convention would cover such subjects as education as a way to peace, efforts against war animosities, transit and communication, and women in international affairs.

25,000 GERMAN HOUSES TO GO UP IN ANCRE VALLEY

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, May 28.—Approximately 25,000 wooden houses will be constructed by German labor with German material in the valley of the Ancre, where the British fought the Teutons inch by inch in the 1916 offensive, Louis Loucheur, minister for the liberated regions, has decided.

This marks the beginning of intensive reconstruction of the war shattered area. It is expected the Aisne and Meuse regions will be the next undertaken. These includes Chemin des Dames, Soissons, Reims, and farther eastward to the Verdun sector, where the Americans fought.

MAID'S A "SLEEP WALKER" WHEN FOUND WITH COAT

Mrs. Edward J. McCarthy, wife of an insurance broker, living at 5432 Kenmore avenue, heard a noise in the house yesterday morning. When she tiptoed into the hall she saw her newly hired maid, Mary McDonald, ascending the stairs with a $700 fur coat. Mrs. McCarthy called the police.

"I am a somnambulist," the girl explained when detectives found her fully clothed and "asleep" in her room on the top floor with Mrs. McCarthy's coat and a fur choker. Members of the family told of hearing an automobile outside, and said they believed the maid had an accomplice waiting for her. Miss McDonald said she came here from St. Paul.

50 DRY AGENTS TO FACE JURY ON GRAFT CHARGES

Fifty prohibition agents in four states are involved in evidence which will be presented to the federal grand jury here next week, federal investigators announced yesterday. Internal revenue operatives for several weeks have investigated prohibition enforcement agents in Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, and Michigan.

Organized grafting among the prohibition enforcement officers, by which saloonkeepers were systematically "shaken down," was uncovered.

The evidence has been turned over to the district attorney, Charles C. Clyne, by Col. A. C. Emshaw, who was in charge of the investigation.

MOTHER IDENTIFIES DROWNED BOY.

The body of a boy drowned Friday in Sherman park was identified yesterday by his mother as that of Alexander Siemon, 9 years old, 4511 South Laflin street. Mrs. Mary Siemon went to the Stockyards station to report her son was missing and was sent to view the body.

GREAT PARADE TO HONOR CITY'S DEAD WARRIORS

Veterans of Many Wars in Line Tomorrow.

As three guns boom the signal tomorrow afternoon, traffic on Michigan avenue will give way to an army of thousands that will march down the boulevard in memorial tribute to the other thousands who marched to their death in defense of the nation.

In the parade will be men who are fit to fight many another winning fight; men whose step has lost much of the spring that carried them to victory in '98; men to whom battle and strife are but a dimming memory, and to whom enduring peace and eternal rest are almost a reality.

They will all be in line—veterans of the world war, Spanish-American war veterans, and veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Women Will March, Too.

Men will march. And women, also. Women who faced fire in the front lines with their brothers, binding wounds and frying doughnuts, and the women who "kept the home fires burning," offering a tear, a prayer, a son to their country—the Gold Star Mothers, the proudest soldiers of them all—will have places of honor.

The Memorial parade is scheduled to start at 3 o'clock from Chicago avenue. In other years the march has led up Michigan avenue, but tomorrow it will be south to 12th street. The reviewing stand will be at Michigan avenue and 9th street, in front of the Logan monument.

"Gen. John A. Logan was the father of Memorial parades, and the placing of the reviewing stand this year is in special tribute to him," said Brig. Gen. James E. Stuart, grand marshal of the parade, last night.

Pershing May Review Parade.

Gen. John J. Pershing and his staff, en route to Lincoln, Neb., will stop in Chicago a few hours tomorrow. It is probable the former A. E. F. commander in chief will review the parade.

Reviewing the parade from the stand will be Gov. Len Small, Gen. Frank S. Dickson, chief of staff; Mayor William Hale Thompson, and others. Capt. Adam E. Otto, mounted color bearer, will take a position at one side. Maj. Gen. Milton J. Foreman will review the marchers south of the stand.

An escort of police, under command of Chief Charles C. Fitzmorris, will head the parade. Following the grand marshal, his staff and aids, will be the Chicago band, William Weil, conductor.

With Charles H. Davis as marshal, J. W. Latimer as adjutant general, and H. E. Colvin, chief of staff, G. A. R. veterans and members of auxiliary units will constitute the First division, forming at Randolph street and Michigan avenue.

Historic Chain on Float.

Next will come Sons of Veterans, Daughters of Veterans, Women's Relief corps, Ladies of the G. A. R., Daughters of the G. A. R., auxiliary to Sons of Veterans, and members of the Chicago Historical society, and a float bearing the iron chain used at West Point to prevent the British from coming up the Hudson river.

The second division, with John Wold commanding, will be ten posts of Spanish-American war veterans, and will form at Oak street, west of Michigan avenue.

Members of the World's War Veterans and the American Legion, with Capt. George F. Lee commanding the latter, and Charles V. Falkenberg as adjutant, will lead the third division, forming on Lake Shore drive, east of Michigan avenue. Three women's posts and 118 posts of the American Legion will be in line. Gold Star mothers and fathers, members of the Service Star legion, the American Legion auxiliary, British and Canadian, French, Belgian, and Italian veterans, all assembling at Lake Shore drive and Walton place, will follow. D. H. Grant and G. A. Bowler will head the British and Canadian veterans.

Others in line will include:

Fourth division—The United States naval reserves, Capt. Edward E. Evers, commanding.

Illinois national guard—Maj. Gen. Milton J. Foreman, commanding; Brig. Gen. Abel Davis commanding 1st brigade; Brig. Gen. Henry J. Reilly, commanding 2d brigade.

Heroes' Graves to Be Decorated.

All graves of soldiers will be decorated tomorrow. Exercises will be held in all cemeteries at 10 o'clock. The American Legion will take an important part in the decoration of more than 11,000 graves in Cook county.

A unique memorial service will be held at Mount Carmel cemetery at 10 o'clock tomorrow over the grave of Nurse Carmelita O'Connor, the only woman killed in action whose body rests in a Chicago cemetery. From an altar erected at the headstone, Monsignor Foley, Great Lakes training station chaplain, will celebrate a military field mass. The Rev. Father D'Arche, French chaplain, will deliver the memorial address.

Thomas A. O'Shaughnessey is chairman of the citizens' committee arranging this special tribute to the valor of a woman. A detail from the Second regiment, Company A, under command of Capt. Joseph E. Brady, will be at the graveside.

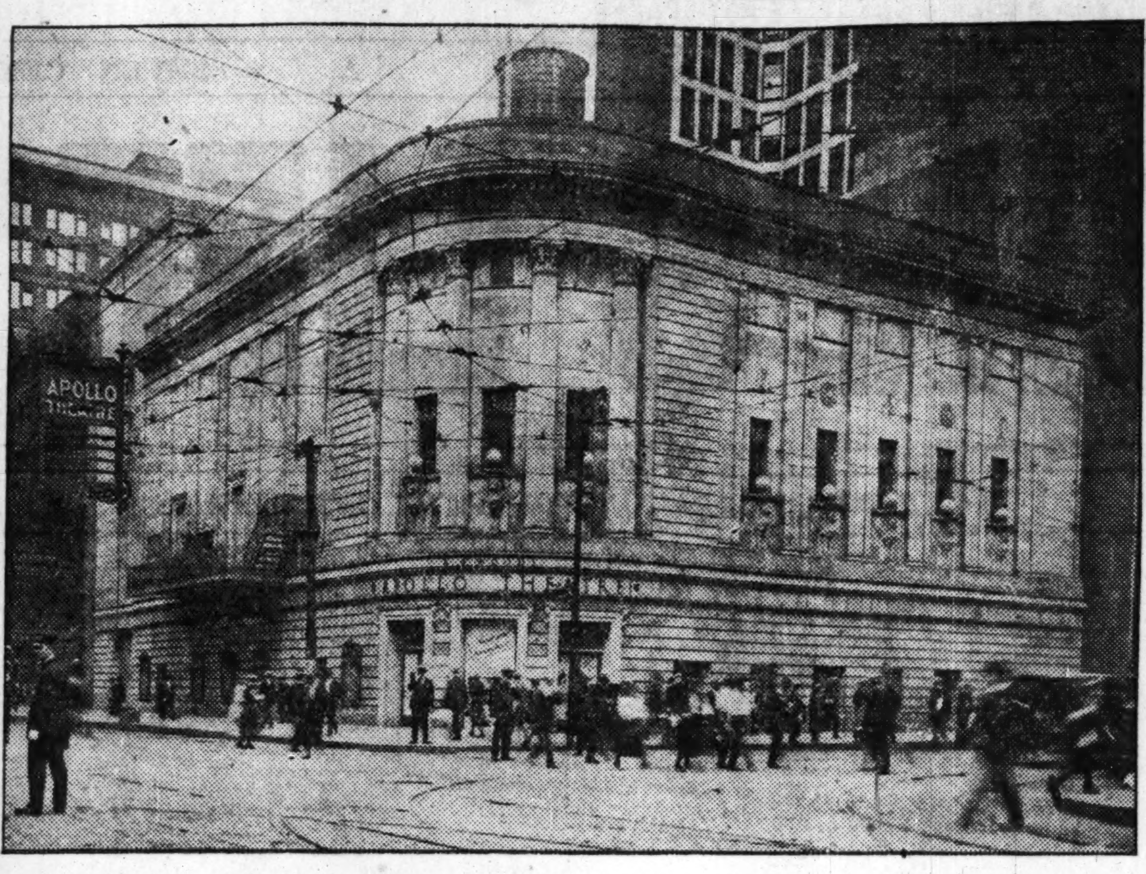
Senator McCormick to Speak.

United States Senator Medill McCormick will deliver the Memorial address at services to be held in the Oak Park and River Forest High school auditorium by Phil Sheridan post, No. 615, G. A. R. These services, arranged by the Patriotic League of Phil Sheridan post and women of the post, will begin at 10:30 o'clock.

Families of all Yellow Cab employés who were killed in the war will be furnished cabs tomorrow to visit cemeteries. The company will send floral pieces to each grave of its soldier dead. Thirty-four of the more than 800 drivers and mechanics who enlisted fell in France or died of wounds.

James Hamilton Lewis will be the principal speaker at the Memorial day celebration in Glen Ellyn, under the auspices of the newly organized Community club. A dinner will be served the veterans and widows of veterans in Glen Ellyn public library.

CHICAGO'S NEWEST THEATER



A. H. Woods' new Apollo theater at Randolph and Dearborn streets, which will be opened tomorrow night with "The Passing Show of 1921" as the initial attraction.

MILLIONS WILL WEAR FLANDERS POPPIES MAY 30

Gen. Logan's Widow Reviews Past.

New York, May 28.—[Special.]—The inauguration of a new Memorial day custom, the wearing of Flanders poppies in commemoration of the hero dead of the world war, has brought from Mrs. John A. Logan, widow of the Union general who founded Memorial day, the story of its origin.

The first Memorial day was observed May 30, 1868, according to Mrs. Logan. It was during Gen. Logan's first term as commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Visit Rebellion's Fields.

"Col. Charles L. Wilson of Chicago invited his niece, his fiancée, Gen. Logan, and myself to make a visit to the battlefield of Virginia.

"We were often deeply touched by the devastation and ravages of war seen everywhere. In a churchyard near Petersburg every foot of the inclosure seemed to be occupied by the graves of confederate dead. Upon them lay the withered flowers and wreaths that had been placed there by loving hands.

"On returning to Washington, I described as best I could what I had seen, dwelling especially upon the evidence of devotion to the memory of their dead as expressed by the faded flowers on their graves.

Logan Issues Mandate.

"The story of the churchyard, with its silent but reverent dwellers, stirred Gen. Logan's great heart with sympathy. He declared that as commander in chief of the G. A. R. he would issue an order for the floral decoration of the graves of the Union dead.

"On May 5, 1868, he issued the first order."

Mrs. Logan has expressed the hope that the custom will some day extend around the globe.

Millions of artificial poppies, made by French war orphans, have been received in America. They will be distributed by the American-Franco Children's league to various patriotic societies throughout the country for sale on Memorial day.

WASHINGTON NEWS
—IN BRIEF—

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 28.

Senators are growing concerned over the long delay enforced by house leaders in bringing an end to an action on the peace resolution, and the charge is now being freely made that the house is jealous over senate leadership on foreign affairs.

Warning was given by H. A. Wallace, son of Secretary Wallace, that a wave of Populism is destined to spread over the middle west unless proper stabilization of the currency is soon accomplished.

Senator Penrose, chairman of the finance committee, declared today that prohibition enforcement is inefficient and wasteful, and that it must be rehabilitated.

Senator Cummins conferred with the president today on the railroad situation, but would not discuss details of the conference. At the same time, Senator Cummins' railroad investigating committeee was being assailed as engaged in an effort to "hammer down" wages of railroad employés.

Secretary of Commerce Hoover and Senator Rrelinghuysen of New Jersey, author of pending coal regulation bills, will confer here in June with representatives of the coal industry to discuss measures for extending a degree of federal supervision over coal production and distribution.

Charles L. Pack, president of the American Forestry association, said today that the "roads of remembrance idea, thanks to THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE," was being taken up all over the middle west.

Farmers' organizations, suspicious because the packers are not fighting the packing control bill now before the house, have appealed to the agriculture committee to put more teeth in the bill before its passage.

Scores See Boy Drown as Auto Tire Life Belt Fails

Norfolk, Neb., May 28.—[Special.]—William Frye, 11 years old, was floating around in the swirling rapids under the mill dam here this afternoon on an inflated tube of an automobile tire when a patch on the tire slipped off, letting out the air. The lad drowned in sight of scores of his companions, who thought the boy was joking with them.

BRITAIN WOULD CUT ARMIES AS WELL AS NAVIES

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, May 28.—Great Britain is willing to coöperate to the fullest degree with the American suggestion for general military as well as naval disarmament, and will welcome any conference at which the whole question of world disarmament will be discussed.

A leading British official pointed out that Great Britain was the first to set an example immediately after the armistice by being the first European power to reduce its army to prewar strength. As a matter of fact, it is now below prewar strength, there being under 300,000 men in the service.

"Great Britain's chief interest now is the restoration of the world's commercial prosperity," said the official, "and that is impossible while the nations waste money on bloated armaments."

More of G. C. Bergdoll's Property Seized by the U. S.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 28.—Additional funds belonging to Grover C. Bergdoll, convicted draft dodger now in Germany, were seized here today by representatives of the alien property custodian. The amount was not disclosed. Yesterday the custodian seized all of Bergdoll's property in this city, valued at approximately $832,000.

Mrs. Emma C. Bergdoll, mother of Grover and Erwin R. Bergdoll, the latter serving a term of imprisonment in Leavenworth prison, left today for Erwin's country home in Delaware county, near here.

Before going, Mrs. Bergdoll said she planned to make a final appeal to President Harding to have government agents stop bothering her.

ALL MIDDLE WEST TAKES UP ROADS OF REMEMBRANCE

Forestry Official Praises Tribune's Activity.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., May 28.—[Special.]—"The Roads of Remembrance idea, thanks to THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, is being taken up all over the middle west," said Charles Lathrop Pack, president of the American Forestry association, today, commenting on reports coming to the association of memorial tree planting activity. "Everywhere," he continued, "plans are now being put under way as never before for memorial tree planting in the fall.

"Next Armistice day will see a record breaking memorial tree dedication throughout the country.

"'We want to get ready for memorial tree planting in the fall' is the main idea in scores of letters coming to the American Forestry association asking for instruction in tree planting and for registering memorial trees on the national honor roll the association is compiling."

Lively Interest at Topeka.

According to information received at the association's headquarters, Winnetka, Ill., is making plans for planting 500 memorial trees. At Topeka, Kas., plans for the victory highway are being pushed by George W. Stannsfield and Dr. C. F. Menninger. Under the auspices of the Coöperative club of Topeka there has been a meeting of representatives of the California Good Roads association, Topeka Automobile Dealers' association, Kansas Good Roads association, and the Topeka Automobile club. Ben Blow of the California organization made the trip from San Francisco to Topeka for the meeting.

Dr. Menninger has taken up plans with the American Forestry association for the memorial tree planting.

Planting to be Annual.

The Hodgman County Industrial club, through S. C. Olson, the secretary, informs the association that more than 1,000 trees have been planted in the city park at Jetmore and on farms and that the club has decided to make the tree planting an annual affair.

Elizabeth West, corresponding secretary of the Women's Club of Gothenburg, Neb., today applied for registration for memorial trees.

At Charlotte, Mich., the city, according to a report made by Mayor George M. Fenn, has just planted trees in an eighteen acre park which has been named the United States Veterans' Memorial park.

W. P. Sutter of the Kiwanis club of Connersville, Ind., registers eighty-seven memorial trees for the soldiers of Fayette county and the American War Mothers have planted a memorial row of thirty trees. Mrs. W. Ochiltree registered the thirty trees with the association.

At Lew Wallace's Old Home.

At Crawfordsville, the Hi-Y club has planted memorial trees and the dedication ceremony was lead by Dumont Kennedy, the mayor.

Mrs. Edwin I. Poston of the Women's club of Martinsville, Ind., registers trees for that organization.

Keokuk, Ia., is taking the lead in that territory in memorial tree planting through the Civic league, which has planted fifty Gold Star trees and registered them through Miss May Tumelty, the secretary.

PERSHING, WEEKS, URGE NATION TO PRESERVE IDEALS

Memorial Day Messages Issued.

Washigton, D. C., May 28.—Memorial Day messages, bespeaking a reaffirmation of loyalty and service to the nation on the part of the American people, were issued tonight by General Pershing and Secretary of War Weeks.

General Pershing declared that memorial day "should symbolize a new consecration of our lives to service" while Secretary Weeks said it was on memerial day "in the presence of our dead, that Americans can renew their faith in our ideals and institutions and reaffirm their pledge of unceasing loyalty to the republic."

"Memorial Day each year comes to us in the height of springtime with all nature in blossom" said General Pershing. "In the midst of these surroundings our thoughts turn to the memory of loved ones, and we gather to honor the service and the heroism of those who gave their lives to their country.

"The season should symbolize a new consecration of our lives to service. It should cause us to reawaken our own patriotism, and renew our ideals of brotherly love and devotion to country. It should teach us to understand that each one is called upon to contribute to the well being of mankind and that the greater our devotion and our sacrifice, the more worthy will be our contribution to our fellow man."

"Lest we forget," said Secretary Weeks, "there comes a day when we turn our faces to the past instead of the future and recall the deeds of the heroic dead, whose sacrifices have made and preserved us a nation.

"It is on Memorial day, in the presence of our dead, that Americans can renew their faith in our ideals and institutions and reaffirm their pledge of unceasing loyalty to the republic."

y Germans Are Making Trouble.

BULLETIN.

BERLIN, May 28.—(By the Associated Press.)—An entire British division, instead of four battalions, is being dispatched to Upper Silesia at once. It will travel with full field equipment.

LONDON, May 28.—[By the Associated Press.]—M. Briand has presented a note to the British foreign office pointing out that the Germans are continuing their operations in Upper Silesia and suggesting that the plebiscite decision await the restoration of order and the arrival of British effectives.

The French premier is further of the opinion that, since the reports of the allied high commissioners are not unanimous, it is desirable the question be submitted to a special commission, including lawyers and diplomats, who would communicate their findings to the supreme council.

MEET FOR PEACE

BY L. C. WALTER.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

POLISH INSURGENT HEADQUARTERS, May 28.—German and insurgent plenipotentiaries are assembling to negotiate an armistice under the auspices of the interallied commission at Oppeln. More than 54,000 German troops are known to be concentrated in front of the rebel forces.

Five distinct groups, the largest 20,000, are operating in the Leschintz-Annaberg salient, according to information obtained by the insurgent intelligence service. At least 12,000 were rushed to the front from Landsberg, on the Polish border, south through Rosenberg and Lublinitz to the Kolonowska railway junction, where, during the last few days, the Germans attempted to split the insurgents' northern group by driving through the center of the right wing against the Polish border.

Where Fighting Was Fierce.

Nine thousand men is the estimated strength of the German forces which attacked the left flank of the Poles, beginning at Kolonowska to a point where it joins the Oder group. The bloodiest fighting occurred in this region after the Germans had launched a counter offensive a week ago in an attempt to separate the insurgents of the northern and center groups. After two days' fighting the German salient here reached a ten mile depth, with Gross Strehlitz, and later with Gleiwitz as objectives in the turning movement.

Two further concentrations, one estimated at 9,000 bayonets, to control the line from Ratibor south to the Czecho-Slovakian border, facing the southern insurgent group, and the other force, about 4,000, holding the sector between Ratibor and Cosel, are reported.

German Planes Bomb Towns.

A German airplane dropped bombs over the insurgent lines in the Rosenberg and Annaberg sectors yesterday, the missiles exploding in villages just behind the front. The population of the towns were thrown into terror, but there were few casualties.

An airplane hovered for fifteen minutes over Beuthen, dropping appeals to the population to overthrow Korfanty, while another machine dropped pamphlets over Friedenshutte. The insurgents, lacking anti-aircraft guns, were not able to drive off the raiding machines.

At Friedenshutte the Polish insurgents interned fifty Germans suspected of plotting counter revolts. No Germans were permitted to leave town after the aeroplanes appeared.

Local attacks were made by fresh German troops in the northern sector against Rosenberg and Annaberg, but the insurgents repulsed all attempts, inflicting heavy losses.

TO DIVIDE SILESIA

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, May 28.—The first official step toward a solution of the Upper Silesia problem was taken at a special session of the council of ambassadors this morning when that body instructed the plebiscite commission at Oppeln to make unanimous proposals for splitting the disputed territory into three portions, one to be administered and occupied militarily by Germany, another by Poland, and the third to be made into a neutral zone under an allied commission.

The action of Paul Cambon, the French member of the ambassadors' council, in agreeing to the scheme marks the beginning of French acceptance of a compromise plan which, when presented several weeks ago by the British and supported by the Italians, they rejected.

The success of the Anglo-Italian project after it had been repeatedly rejected by the French is taken to mean that Quai d'Orsay came to the conclusion that the United States backed the independent zone plan, especially since Ambassador Wallace voted in favor of it this morning.

It is expected the status of Upper Silesia will be left thus until the supreme council meets at Boulogne in an attempt to solve the problem.

Passport Office in Chicago Rests with Committee

Washington, D. C., May 28.—[Special.]—Chicago's first opportunity to secure a passport agency rests with the appropriations committee of the senate. Appropriations for the maintenance of the bureau established at New York in 1915 and San Francisco in 1917, and the creation of similar bureaus at Chicago, Seattle and New Orleans, failed of inclusion in the legislative, executive and judicial bill, and were inserted after reconsideration in the urgent deficiency bill, from which it was stricken in the house on a point of order raised by Representative Blanton of Texas. The question now rests with the senate committee.

HONEYMOONERS

MISS HESSERT AND MISS YATES BECOME BRIDES

Two Church Weddings Mark Week End.

Two of the prettiest of the late spring weddings were those of Miss Louise Hessert and Taylor Strawn, and Miss Katherine Yates and Norman Smith, both of which took place yesterday. Miss Hessert, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gustav Hessert of the Webster hotel, became Mr. Strawn's bride at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon at St. James' Episcopal church, in the presence of a large and fashionable assemblage.

The Rev. Dr. James S. Stone read the service. Following the ceremony there was a reception at the residence of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Rehm of 1525 Astor street. The bride's gown was of white satin and duchess lace and her tulle veil was held in place with a coronet of the lace. She carried a shower bouquet of gardenias and valley lilies.

Sister Among Attendants.

Her attendants, her sister, Mrs. De Forest Hulburd of Lake Forest, Miss Mary Hincks of Bridgeport, Conn., Miss Beatrice Sniffen of Brooklyn, Miss Vivian O'Gara, Miss Marion Clow, Miss Catharine Bartholomay, Miss Catherine Rehm and Miss Louise Rehm, wore taffeta frocks in rainbow colors, leghorn hats trimmed with ribbons to match their gowns in color, and carried spring flowers.

Mr. Strawn is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester H. Strawn of Ottawa, Ill. He and his bride will live at 311 Belden avenue during the summer.

Wed in Oak Park Church.

Miss Yates, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David M. Yates of Oak Park, was married to Mr. Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Smith, also of Oak Park, last night at the First Presbyterian church in Oak Park. Following the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Dr. George N. Luccock, there was a reception and dance at the Oak Park Country club.

The bride wore a gown of white satin and crystal and a tulle veile with a coronet of lace. The matron of honor, the bride's mother, wore a gown of turquoise blue, and the honor maid, Miss Helen Meyer, wore a flame color frock. Some of the bridesmaids wore gowns of jade green taffeta and the others wore burnt orange frocks. They all carried colonial bouquets of spring flowers.

"Reds" Get Bruised Heads in Battle with Police

A meeting of radicals in Washington square, Walton place and North Clark street, was broken up by the police last night after two of the radicals had been arrested. Many others carried away bruised heads and black eyes as the result of a fight with the police, who responded to a riot call after Patrolmen Burke and Sammon, had been attacked when they attempted to stop the speaking. John Loughman, 64 West Elm street, and Elmer McNally, 1924 North Clark street, were arrested.

ULSTER TO OPEN ITS PARLIAMENT WITH MUCH POMP

King or Prince of Wales May Attend.

BELFAST, May 28.—[By the Associated Press.]—Sir James Craig, premier designate for Ulster, has gone to London to arrange the details of the ceremony attending the opening of the new northern parliament June 7. The Ulster Unionists still hope that either King George or the Prince of Wales will open the proceedings.

The Unionists, however, probably will have to be satisfied with some lesser dignitary, among those mentioned being the prime minister, Mr. Lloyd George; the viceroy, Viscount Fitzalan, or even Sir E. Clarke, the viceroy's representative in Ulster.

The ceremony will be held in the Belfast city hall, one of the finest edifices in Ireland.

RAID SINN FEIN QUARTERS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

DUBLIN, May 28.—The British military suspended all traffic for three hours today in an area covering a block in the Grafton street district while they made a house to house search which resulted in the discovery of the suspended Sinn Fein hadquarters. The office furniture and equipment was removed.

Nearly £2,000,000 worth of securities were destroyed in the customs house fire. The vaults containing whisky escaped damage.

Freeman's Journal estimated that since January 800 persons have been shot dead in Ireland and hundreds wounded. The figures include British and Irish troopers and noncombatants.

Black and Tan Trial Opens.

DUBLIN, May 28.—[By the Associated Press.]—The court martial of eighteen auxiliary cadets, charged with looting in Antrim on Feb. 9 last, in connection with which Brig. Gen. Crozier, former head of the auxiliary, or "black and tan" forces, resigned, opened here today.

The indictment covers two separate raids, and charges conspiracy for the purpose of robbery, actual theft, and the receiving of stolen goods. The crown counsel described the offense as mean, despicable, and a discredit to the crown forces, and asked for conviction of all the men.

An examination today of the ruins of the customs house, parts of which still are smoldering, revealed the fact that all the safes were undamaged. One oblong room was intact, and the large stone roofed vaults, containing important documents, escaped.

GRAVE DIGGER KILLED BY AUTO; DRIVER IS HELD

Gustave Sundquist, 3328 North Harding avenue, a gravedigger, was killed by an automobile last night at Milwaukee and Crawford avenues. James Hurley, 4444 Sunnyside avenue, who drove the machine, was booked on a charge of manslaughter. He said he did not see the man.

Edward Wolff, 2856 North Hamlin avenue, sustained a skull fracture and is believed to be dying as the result of an accident at North avenue and the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul tracks, when an automobile in which he was riding crashed into a moving train.

Leo F. Brady, 1444 North Paulina street, the driver, who also was injured, said the bars were not down. Investigation revealed that the bars were not broken. Three other men were injured.

BLAIR PLANS TO ENFORCE DRY LAW BUT NO CRUSADE

Favors Palmer Ruling on Beer.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., May 28.—[Special.]—David H. Blair, the new commissioner of internal revenue, admits he is no crusader. He will insist on strict enforcement of the prohibition law, he says, but he is not going to undertake to write into the law anything that congress might not put there. He also proposes to issue in the near future regulations for the use of beer and malt liquors as a medicine.

This is disturbing to the prohibition forces, who were further stirred today when they heard that the new commissioner favors the transfer of prohibition enforcement eventually from the treasury department to the department of justice.

"The present enforcement system," said Senator Penrose, "is wasteful, ineffective, and demoralizing in many of its aspects and requires drastic treatment in order that it may be rehabilitated and freed from the scandalous conditions which now surround it."

He declared he would confer with Commissioner Blair to determine on new legislation to more adequately enforce the laws.

Blair Favors Shift.

Commissioner Blair has said nothing for publication about his ideas on the subject, but Senator Penrose, chairman of the finance committee, said today that the new commissioner was for shifting enforcement to the attorney general's shoulders. Prohibition leaders do not want this and are fighting against it.

"I shall not undertake to legislate," said Commissioner Blair today. "That is the business of congress. I shall demand of the agents of the internal revenue office a strict enforcement of the law as it is passed by congress or interpreted by the department of justice or in the courts."

Many important questions await the attention of Mr. Blair. The first of general interest is the framing and promulgating of rules to regulate the use of beer and other malt liquors for medicinal purposes.

Doctors May Prescribe.

Mr. Blair said that he would issue the beer regulations within the next few days, and that they would comply with the law as interpreted by Mr. Palmer. He considered it his duty to make it possible for physicians to provide beer for their patients if they deemed it necessary.

The most trying problem confronting Mr. Blair is the one raised by the demand for jobs. Congress will provide $200,000 to carry on the prohibition work till July. That means that Mr. Blair will have to fill the places of those employés recently dismissed. Thousands of regular jobs in the internal revenue bureau are open to "deserving" Republicans, and applicants far outnumber the places to be filled.

Kramer Retires Soon.

It is generally understood at the treasury department that Prohibition Commissioner John F. Kramer will go within a few weeks. No one has been selected to fill his place.

Mr. Kramer told the senate committee today that the country is becoming more "dry" and the Volstead law easier of enforcement.

INDIAN "RUSTLING CATTLE" KILLED; UPRISING FEARED

Salt Lake City, Utah, May 28.—Fear of an uprising of the Ute Indians following the death of an Indian in a fight with a sheriff today, was contained in a message received by United States Marshal Aquila Nebeker from George Adams, former member of the Utah legislature from San Juan county.

"One Indian was killed when County Attorney Keller and Sheriff Hyde attempted to arrest Utes for stealing cattle," the message read. "Posse leaving Monticello and Blanding. Wires cut between Bluff and Blanding."

Mail service airplanes are being held ready to carry some of the posse, if necessary.

GOLDEN CARAVAN LEAVES BERLIN IN TREK TO PARIS

850 Million Marks in First Consignment.

BERLIN, May 28.—Germany has completed her first payment of war reparations.

En route to Paris today, in charge of heavily guarded special messengers, were twenty treasury bonds of $10,000,000 each, representing 850,000,000 gold marks. This completes the initial payment of 1,000,000,000 marks.

The cabinet has now turned its attention to carrying out the disarmament provisions of the treaty. The question of demobilizing the Bavarian civic guard was first taken up.

The reparations commission will receive on May 31 the balance of the payment of 1,000,000,000 gold marks, stipulated in article 5 of the schedule of payments which Germany is to make as reparations. The commission is discussing with the German government arrangements whereby the German treasury bills, in which the payment will be made, may be met in dollars or other allied currency, at the option of the reparations commission.

Boy Climbs Pole After Hoop; Electrocuted

A number of boys were playing with a hoop in front of 2938 Arthington street last night. One threw it over a telephone pole. Clifford Auringer, 11, of 2902 Arthington street, went up the pole after it. His hand encountered a live wire. He was instantly killed.

Widow Draws Cash from Safety Box; Thief Gets It

Mrs. E. Maloney, 4706 Ellis avenue, a widow employed by the telephone company, drew $525 from her box in the safety deposit vaults in the Chamber of Commerce building and put it in an $85 mesh bag. A thief snatched purse and money as she reached the street.

FIRST PLANE RIDE AT 81, NOW SAYS, HE'LL PILOT ONE

In all his 81 years, Edward Scharenberg never took an airplane ride until yesterday. But that ride, over Evanston, convinced the octogenarian he would have to start now and take up flying as a pleasure.

EDWARD SCHARENBERG.

"I have been driving an automobile," Mr. Scharenberg said, as he alighted from the plane and cast off his headgear. "It's not near as thrilling as riding in an airplane. I actually feel young again. We went up 5,000 feet, where the air was rare.

"I am going to start taking lessons right away and learn to pilot one of the things. There is no more danger to this than driving a car, as far as I can see."

Mr. Scharenberg lives in Morton Grove, Ill. His son is cashier of the Morton Grove Trust and Savings bank.

His pilot yesterday was C. E. Lossong of Evanston.

3 LAKE COUNTY FOLK BEYOND 80 DIE IN ONE DAY

They are Mrs. Mary Barrett, 90, of Waukegan, who is survived by five children, nineteen grandchildren, and fifteen great-grandchildren; Mrs. Diana Wheeler Tompkins of Waukegan, 81, survived by six children, twenty-six grandchildren, and six great-grandchildren; and William Hanks, 86, of Winthrop Harbor, born on the site where his death occurred.

YOUTH SLAIN AS POLICEMAN WITH REVOLVER FALLS

Finger on Trigger, Drops; Ball Player Victim.

John T. Laughlin, a probationary policeman, last night accidentally shot and killed James Fleming, 23 years old, of 6810 Morgan street, while chasing some boys who had been playing dice.

Fleming was playing ball in a vacant lot near his home. The crap shooters veered toward the prairie. Laughlin and his partner, Tepper, fired in the air. The fugitives did not stop.

Falls, Gun Explodes.

Then Laughlin, his finger on the trigger of his revolver, stumbled and fell, striking his elbow on the ground.

The revolver discharged. A bullet struck Fleming in the cheek and passed out through his neck.

Laughlin and Tepper had driven to the spot in the Englewood police "flivver." Into this they placed the wounded boy and took him to St. Bernard's hospital. Fleming died a few minutes after his arrival.

Bluecoat Voices Grief.

"Laughlin has been on the force only five months," said Capt. James Allman, commanding the Englewood district, "but he is a good policeman and I am satisfied he was not to blame."

"I'd give anything in the world," Laughlin said, "if I could bring that young man back to life."

30 WHEELS OF FORTUNE HALTED AT FOREST PARK

"Step up, gents, and take a chance on a basket of fruit, a box of candy, or a doll," cried the "barkers" in charge of thirty wheels of fortune at the Forest Park amusement grounds last night. Twelve men elbowed through the crowd and the leader, Deputy Sheriff Otto Gnewuch, ordered the "barkers" to quit business.

The deputies then sought the management of the park and directed that all the wheels of fortune be stopped, on orders of Sheriff Peters, who had received many complaints.

Twenty-one slot machines, the results of raids on sixteen places in Cicero, Hawthorne and Clyde, were taken to the sheriff's office by Deputy Gnewuch and aids. Following complaints from citizens, Sheriff Peters had instructed the deputy to "clean up the places."

"I took forty men in ten automobiles," Gnewuch reported. "We raided 10 places and got twenty-one slot machines. Other places evidently had been tipped off, for the machines reported in them had disappeared."

PARK DROWNING AN ACCIDENT.

Accidental death was the verdict yesterday at the inquest into the death of Henry Herbes, 11, of 3705 South Paulina street, who was drowned Friday night in the McKinley park lagoon.

LUNDIN, 'MAN OF MYSTERY'—WHO AND WHAT HE IS

swayed toward and away from its business associates in a fashion reminiscent of the barrel houses and similar thriving institutions of the period.

But principally the wagon was remarkable in a vocal sense. Besides the bottles' raucous chorus, which ascended at each inequality of the pavement and untoward movement on the part of the hoary steed, it emitted every now and then shrill complaints in various keys from an uncountable number of bearings and joints—as if in proclamation of the fact that it had found its burdens too great to be endured and intended to lie down and die upon the spot.

And, indeed, the plaint of the conveyance appeared in all respects justified by its plight, for an assortment of billboards, attached in all available places about its feeble person, gave it the proportions of a moving van.

Attracted by the sounds that emanated from the curious rig, pedestrians paused (for the evening was young) to give it more than passing inspection. And when their vision had dwelled compassionately upon its staggering bulk, and with simple wonder on the driver in his funereal coat tails and full dress vest, and had appraised sympathetically the mortal expectations of the ancient horse, their gaze wandered to the placards, where in circus type appeared the legend:

"JUNIPER ADE."

The cryptic import of that message, as well as the ancient wagon's mission, was in part explained by the presence of two Negroes, who perched upon the tailboard, flanked on either hand by gasoline torches, at which they looked from time to time with an air of expectation, while their fingers picked snatches of tunes from banjos, and they softly hummed the words.

It was not long, however, before the driver, quietly observant of the human tide upon the sidewalk, noticed an eddy in its orderly ebb and flow, and brought his vehicle to a sudden halt alongside.

Instantly, aboard the van, all was activity. The Negroes, jumping up from the tailboard, stood grinning at the crowd in the full flare of the torches. The driver, not to be outdone in promptness, secured his reins and swung himself likewise into the body of the cart with a flourish of long legs and his undertaker's Prince Albert.

The Driver Swings Into Action.

Then, casting aside the plainsman's hat, and easing the pressure of the flowing tie upon his throat, he beckoned the bystanders to draw close, and raised his voice in substance as follows:

"Step up closer, ladies and gentlemen, the great, free show starts right away!

"It costs you nothing to hear the Black De Reszkes—the sweet singers of the south—direct from New York's matchless Academy of Music, habitat of art and beauty, where they sang for the nabobs of Fifth avenue. Offered for the first time as an open-air attraction under the auspices of that wholesome, delicious, incomparable, refreshing, foaming, but non-alcoholic beverage—Juniper Ade!"

Gets the Crowd with Him.

The crowd moved in.

"I thank you, madam," the speaker continued, in an aside, improving the interlude by erecting a small table in front of himself, and deftly stocking it with bottles. "By stepping closer, you've made room for someone else.

"Remember, my friends, that all is free!" he resumed, addressing the crowd at large.

"It costs you nothing to hear the Black De Reszkes, whose marvelous vocal powers charmed the greatest art critics of the new world.

"This wonderful attraction is arranged exclusively for your benefit by the most surpassing of all surpassing drinks—Juniper Ade! By Juniper Ade, my friends, which is itself a human boon—delightful and refreshing alike to young and old. Recommended by physicians!

"But as yet, folks, nothing is for sale! The Black De Reszkes are free—as free as the breath of the summer night!

"Hurry—hurry—HURRY!" His tones increased in volume until their booming filled the street. "The big free show starts right away! The Black De Reszkes, folks, are about to sing!

Now the Immortal Ballad.

"They are about to sing the most immortal of all immortal ballads! The ballad that has brought tears alike to the eyes of tramps and potentates—the ballad that wrings all hearts! Give ear, folks, to the Black De Reszkes!"

A hush ensued. The white man stepped back, and his Negro aids stepped forward, their banjos in place, their faces gleaming in the torch light. In concert, they threw back their heads, struck an introductory bar, and began:

Mid pleasures and palaces, though we may roam;
Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home.

Historians agree that whatever else might be said of them, the Black De Reszkes certainly could sing; and it followed that, on the night in question, when the last of the familiar stanzas had risen to the moon, there were moist eyes among the recently expatriated Irish, Germans and Scandinavians, who comprised a large part of the street corner congregation.

And Then to Business.

And seizing this psychological moment, the orator of the evening, who scrutiny revealed to be himself a Swede, went to his principal business. He spoke fondly of distant lands, in tones that had the mournful reverberations of cemetery bells; of mothers, wives, and sweethearts; of fathers made old before their time by grim struggles against poverty and despair, of former friends and once familiar scenes.

"And our hearts are hungry, my friends!" he cried. "And we're thirsty, too—thirsty——"

This was the climax toward which he had builded. His eyes seemed suddenly to dart through their amber masks and to transfix the bird-like crowd. His form towered to an amazing height; his arms flew out in the all-embracing gesture of a windmill, while his mortuarian's raiment, sorely beset by these unexpected movements, struggled desperately to keep its grip upon him.

"Thirsty," he thundered, "for the old home drinks our mothers used to brew! Remember the pitcher that stood in the sink! Remember how you used to go to it when tired and dusty, and how its magic coolness made new life surge through your veins! Remember how you drank—— Ah! Deep and full!

"That wonderful drink—that life giving, invigorating drink—is with us tonight! The historic libation of our forefathers—the old home beverage—Juniper Ade! Juniper Ade, my friends—delicious, wholesome, refreshing, foaming, but nonalcoholic! Recommended by physicians! Good for young or old! Liked by all! Can be prepared by any housewife in a few moments!

"Step right up! I thank you, sir! Add a teaspoonful to a gallon of water. The bottle contains enough to last your family for a month! Who'll be the next? Next? NEXT? . . ."

Same Style Coat Today.

It is unnecessary to recount the remaining transactions of the night. Enough has been said at least to dismiss some of the mystery that surrounds Fred Lundin.

The coat, which served him on the summer evening in the early '90s when the Black De Reszkes marshaled the idlers on the corner, has long since been dust, but its erstwhile owner wears its prototype today.

The cowboy hat, which he laid aside when he started in to sing the virtues of the juniper bush, departed to the ragpicker an age ago, and so did the collar and tie, the white shirt, and the full dress vest.

Yet these habiliments, which proved so fascinating to the public under the flare of the gasoline torch, have their counterparts upon his person at this moment; and like the amber glasses (which, for all I know, may be the original) they serve an identic purpose.

Same Methods in Politics.

For Lundin has found that the technique which stood him in such good stead when he hawked at the crowd from a cart tail is equally valuable in politics.

Gone now are the Black De Reszkes; gone the wagon and the infirm horse.

Gone, too, is Juniper Ade, the refreshing, non-alcoholic beverage, which attained such wide and merited popularity among the thirsty souls of the pre-Volstead prohibition states.

Gone also is Lundin's malt preparation, a non-alcoholic companion decoction of Juniper Ade, which, according to the maker's friends, was the original ancestor of the now nationally famous "Old Home Brew."

Gone are his buckets of fish (for the manufacturer of thirst-quenching beverages also did a brisk business in thirst producing sea food on the side.

Gone are all the impedimenta of yesterday, because times have changed and Lundin—though precluded from changing his spots—has changed his business with them.

Expands to Five Ring Circus.

From his medicine wagon and his "sweet singers of the south," the former vender of nostrums has attained the proprietorship of a five ring political circus, featuring among the most extraordinary of his talent "Big Bill" Thompson, Chicago's cowboy mayor, and Gov. Len Small, whose genius at jumping through hoops and other antics required in the Lundin arena is press agented as fully as great as the veteran stars.

The ringmaster and general manager has retired out of the heat and dust, but the public has lost nothing.

Ballyhoo Methods Still Used.

The ballyhoo, which Lundin formerly raised in behalf of his patent pills, is now duplicated in all essential particulars by Big Bill's outcry in behalf of the late lamented (and as yet unresurrected) 5 cent fare—a remarkable panacea for the cure of all the people's transportation complaints, not a whit less potent than the specifics for rheumatism, indigestion, and falling hair which bore the Lundin trademark.

So, too, the tears that the ex-medicine vender invoked by singing the blessings of Juniper Ade to the good old tune of "Home Sweet Home" may still be shed by believing souls at the spectacle of Big Bill's "persecution" by the "trust press," the "vested interests" and other figments of hocus pocus.

But Political Nostrums Are Costly.

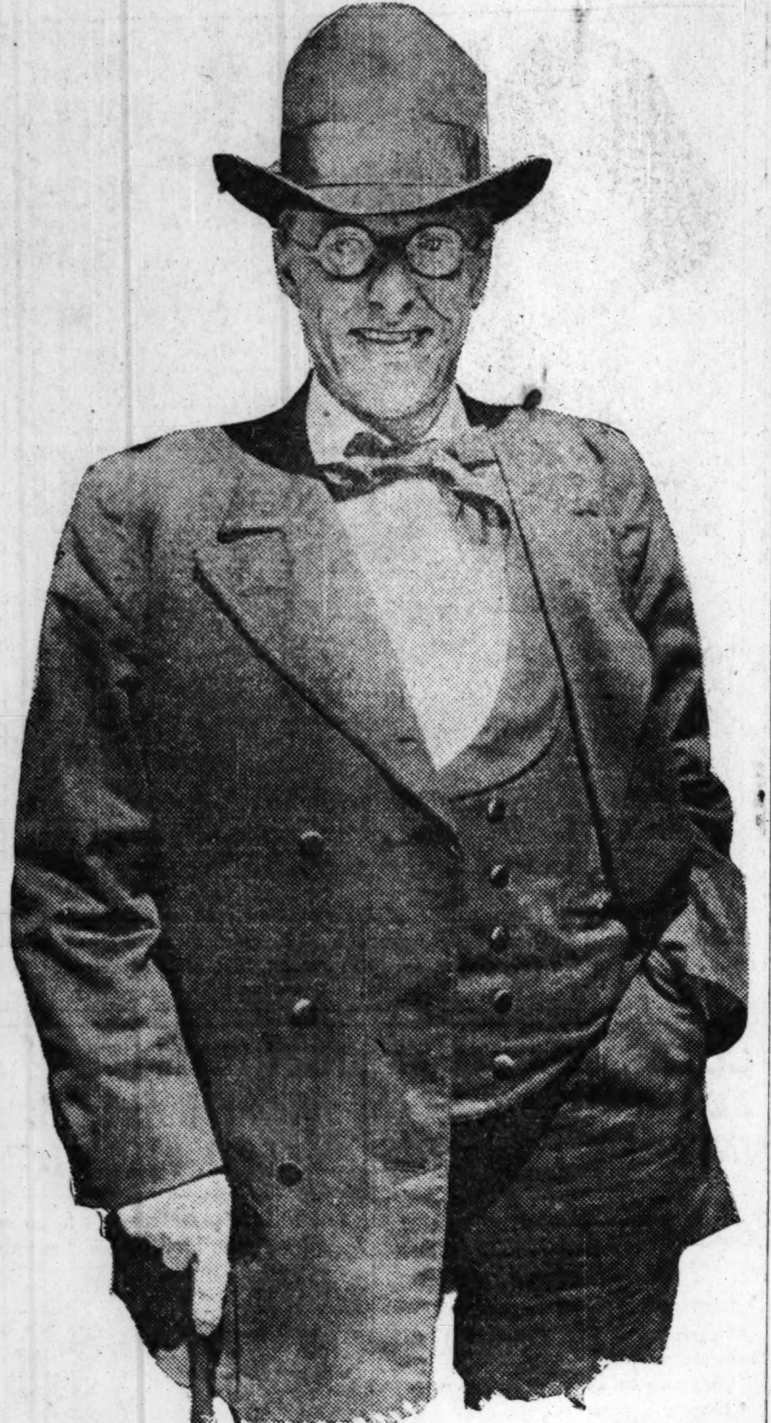
And again, in "Big Bill, the Children's Friend," another rôle of Lundin's creation, an echo of the latter's past, is heard—an echo of the hearty, welcoming tones that hailed the populace to the Black De Reszkees. The outings for the little ones are as free as the tuneful melodies that issued from under the gasoline flares. But like the bottles of Juniper Ade which passed out of the cart when the singing was done, Lundin's political quackeries are not so inexpensive.

He will tell you (if he reads the riddle of his own success) that in both politics and medicine it's the old stuff that's always good. And the raison d'être of the whole business—from Lundin's Patent Pills to Lundin's Pageant of Progress—was neatly put by the late P. T. Barnum when he said:

"There's a new one born every minute."

(To be continued tomorrow.)

"JUNIPER"



Silent, ghostly, and mysterious no longer, here is a picture from real life—right in Randolph street—smiles, antiquated garb, and everything—of Fred Lundin, the master of the city hall machine. When he sold "Juniper Ade"—that soothing beverage of the '90s—he created the enticing smile and whimsical sartorial mannerisms which still distinguish him.

FARMERS PLAN HUGE CONCERN TO MARKET GRAINS

$100,000,000 Institution Is Outlined.

New York, May 28.—[Special.]—The farmers of the country have undertaken to create a great financial institution with $100,000,000 capital under their control and ownership.

The plans were announced by the executive committee of the United States Grain Growers, Inc., who came from Chicago today to arrange for chartering the Farmers' Finance Corporation.

Gustafson Heads Committee.

The committee which met at the Old Colony club will file papers of incorporation in Wilmington, Del., next week. Those present were:

Bernard M. Baruch of New York, C. H. Gustafson, chairman, president Farmers' union, Lincoln, Neb.; J. M. Anderson, president Equity Coöperative Exchange, St. Paul, Minn.; P. E. Donnell, president Farmers' Grain Dealers of Missouri; William G. Eckhardt, president Illinois Agricultural association; C. H. Hyde, vice president Oklahoma Farmers' union; Frank M. Myers, president Farmers' National Grain Dealers; W. F. Schilling, president Coöperative Milk Dealers' union, and R. C. Obrecht and Clifford Thorne of Chicago.

21 Shares Control.

The capital stock will be $100,000,000 of preferred dividend paying, but nonvoting stock, and twenty-one shares of nondividend paying common stock, in which the voting powers of the organization will be vested. Title to net profits will be entirely with the holders of the preferred stock, but the common stock may be held only by the directors of the United States Grain Growers association, whose directors, it is explained, are elected by the various organizations throughout the country.

A committee of seventeen was created, in conformity with a resolution passed by the Coöperative Marketing conference held in Chicago in July, 1920, to prepare a plan for the marketing of the grain crops. The finding of this committee were reported and approved at the national ratification conference held in Chicago last April.

IVIC BODY FINDS AST WASTE IN FEES TO EXPERTS

Citizens' Association Bares Result of Inquiry.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

The Citizens' association published yesterday "a statement of facts" regarding "the vast payments to city experts."

It characterizes the payment of $2,742,666.09 within approximately one year—out of aggregate claims of $4,891,526—to three real estate and two building experts by the city hall as "an enormous and appalling waste of public money."

"So far as we have been able to learn no other municipality has ever, in a like period, paid out sums for expert services approaching these in magnitude," reads the association's statement.

Asked Hoyne to Investigate.

But the association, established in 1874, apparently believes there may have been more than "appalling waste" in the payment of $1,004,586 to Austin J. Lynch and Frank H. Mesce as city building experts, because the association asked the state's attorney to investigate these fees when the game of collecting them was still young.

"The payments to Mesce and Lynch increased to such an extent," says the bulletin, "that this association investigated the matter as fully as it was possible for a private organization to do and on May 24, 1920, called the attention of State's Attorney Hoyne to the fact that $127,000 had been paid to each of these two experts since the beginning of that year.

"We suggested that the state's attorney make such further investigation as might be in his power for the purpose of determining whether the interests of the city had been properly protected."

Reason for Declining to Act.

The report states that the prosecutor, after considering the matter at some length, declined to investigate further because the city council had authorized the employment of these particular experts and had fixed the percentage basis of compensation.

Now the payments to these two experts total at least $1,004,586. The Tribune company also believes that the payments involved more than "appalling waste" and has charged in its suit that there was a conspiracy to cheat and defraud the city. Progress in that suit has been stopped because Mayor Thompson and the city proper have obtained a continuance until ten days after the legislature adjourns.

$50 a Day Under Harrison.

The Citizens' association says that it has been informed that during the Harrison administration the experts received $50 a day, plus cost of their aids. Then it adds:

"In our opinion that plan should never have been abandoned by the city. We are convinced that if it had been followed, even on the basis of a much higher per diem rate, the appraisal work above mentioned could have been done for a mere fraction of the great sum it has cost during the last two years."

The association summarizes what the city has done and contemplates as follows:

"According to official statements the total compensation to be allowed Mesce and Lynch for services as building experts on the bond issue street improvements will aggregate $2,876,063, of which amount $1,004,586 already has been paid them by the city and $1,871,575 is yet to be paid.

"The total compensation of the three real estate experts (Ernest H. Lyons, Edward C. Waller Jr., and Arthur S. Bergold) will amount to $2,015,464, of which $1,738,079 already has been paid and $277,385 remains to be paid. Thus the total compensation of the five experts for this work is to aggregate $4,891,526, without including their fees for testifying in court."

Big Hole in Bond Issue.

The association shows that the total bond issue for the street improvements was only $26,600,000, and then adds:

"So that the $4,891,526 allowed to the five real estate and building experts represents no less than 18.4 per cent of the total amount of those bond issues."

Regarding the responsibility for the payments, the association says that the city council passed an order naming the experts and fixing their fees on Feb. 5, 1920, on the recommendation of President Michael J. Faherty of the board of local improvements.

When the payment of $127,000 each to Lynch and Mesce last May and June caused so much comment, the association credits the city council with revoking its authorization last August. Then it says that on Nov. 10 Mayor Thompson vetoed the rescinding action of the council "on technical grounds," and adds:

"Enormous payments to experts followed during the closing days of the year."

Contrast with Other Cities.

The association contrasts the payments to Mesce and Lynch as city building experts with the rates of the Chicago and the Cook county and other real estate boards of other cities; and also with those of H. B. Riley of the Chicago Title and Trust company of Chicago. That comparison follows:

Mesce and Lynch	$2,876,063.68
Chicago R. E. board	296,310.34
Cook Co. R. E. board	165,904.34
H. B. Riley	142,226.12
Omaha R. E. board	160,020.12
Detroit R. E. board	545,417.12
Milwaukee R. E. board	147,309.36
Boston R. E. board	153,058.92

Similar comparison is made of fees of the real estate experts with rates of others.

The association points out that a large part of the payments to the experts was made from appropriations which were not made for that particular purpose. The Tribune company in its suit says such appropriations were void for the purpose for which they were used.

BREAKING THE "SOLID SOUTH"

VOTE FOR NON-PARTISAN
JUDGES

For the first time since William Hale Thompson took office there is a widespread revolt against him in the Second ward. One of the big factors in this refusal to rubber stamp city hall tickets is a flying squadron which every night goes through the ward holding street corner meetings. From left to right they are: Alexander Shelly, R. E. Parker, editor of the Advocate; James Hale Porter, and Thomas W. Allen. Wherever their automobile stops it is soon the center of a gathering of hundreds of colored citizens, who cheer denunciations of city officials' refusal to see their representatives pleading for protection from bomb throwers. One of their slogans is taken from the "Line o' Type" column—"Throw away your hammer and get a bomb," a paraphrase of Mayor Thompson's plea to the voters to help toot his horn.

LEONARD WOOD LEAGUE BACKS NONPARTISANS

Unfettered Judges' Election Urged.

Remarkable gains of strength continue to pile up behind the coalition nonpartisan judicial ticket.

The united and active support of the Leonard Wood Ex-Service Men's league, which in the last presidential primaries materially aided in carrying Cook county for Gen. Wood by more than 40,000 plurality, lined up yesterday.

John Lyden, who made the canvass of service hospitals for the Henry Blair Keep post of the American Legion, and Fred Girton, who had charge of the Fort Sheridan memorial, were the officers of the league who extended its services to the coalition campaign committee. The headquarters were opened in the Hotel Sherman.

League Issues Statement.

In a statement the league declared:

"The Leonard Wood organization is determined to arouse the voters to the need of a clean and just government for Chicago and Cook county. They realize that the best results for all the citizens and taxpayers can be obtained only by electing to the judiciary men who are pledged to serve the whole people instead of those who have aligned themselves with a political machine.

"The old bunk emanating from the city hall holds no allurement for ex-service men and women. They have been fed up on promises and catchy slogans which but add burdens to the taxpayers and citizens. A clean government can only result from a clean administration of the law, and such hand-picked and hog-tied candidates as the city hall machine has placed on the Republican ballot are not the medium by which such a result may be obtained.

Selected for Ability.

"Nonpartisan candidates, selected from both the Republican and Democratic ranks, not because of political allegiance, but because of ability—qualifications proved by the fact that out of the twenty candidates, seventeen at present hold positions on the bench—should be the standard by which the intelligent mass of vaters cast their ballot and in this is found the reason why the Leonard Wood organization has entered the fight.

"If every law-abiding and decent citizen of Chicago and Cook county can be brought to the realization of just what this election means there will be no doubt of the result, and the ex-service men and women have taken the duty upon themselves of bringing home the truth and unmasking the trap in which the Lundin-Thompson machine is endeavoring to catch the unwary voters."

LATE SULTAN IS UNLUCKY UNLESS SKULL IS FOUND

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BERLIN, May 28.—No matter how good its intentions, Germany may never be able to fulfill the clause of the treaty of Versailles regarding the ghost of Sultan Mkwawa. This conclusion comes from a perusal of the government document, "How Germany Is Fulfilling the Peace Treaty."

It seems that Sultan Mkwawa, although dead, was important enough to have a special clause in the treaty, as article 246 says Germany shall deliver over to the British government the skull of the late monarch. East African Negroes declare Sultan Mkwawa's ghost will roam the streets of hell until his skull is restored to rest in his native land, and the British wanted to gain the favor of the Negroes by making such restoration.

Now the German foreign office admits it has not found the skull and does not know where it is. Likewise it cannot find the original koran of Caliph Othman, which article 246 of the treaty says was stolen from Medina by the Turks and presented to Kaiser Bill. So the peace treaty may never be fulfilled and German officials want to know whether the Ruhr basin will be occupied as a result.

"GUARD PENSIONS OF MOTHERS OF CHICAGO FROM MACHINE'S GRIP!"

MY MRS. WM. S. HEFFERAN.
Second Vice President of the Woman's City club.

No more beneficent law is on the statute books than that which is known as the "mother's pension" law, which provides a widowed mother of minor children with sufficient funds to keep her little family together, instead of putting them in institutions. Among these widowed mothers are many foreign born, who, speaking and understanding English poorly, are easily exploited by the charlatan and the unrighteous.

The mother's pension fund, approximately a quarter of a million a year, is administered by the Juvenile court, and it is imperative, therefore, that the Circuit court, which appoints the judge of the Juvenile court, be kept free from the domination of any machine which would divert the use of this fund or administer it unwisely.

Every voting mother should cast her vote for the coalition judicial ticket, for the election of this ticket will insure the continuance in office of the present judge of the Juvenile court, who has shown himself a true friend to the needy mother, and a kind and wise counselor to the erring and thoughtless youth who come before him.

Protect the needy, the dependent, and the unfortunate by voting for the coalition judicial ticket, not dominated by the Thompson machine.

LOST HEIRESS TO LARGE FORTUNE IS SOUGHT HERE

Duel, War, Romance, and Gypsy Life in Story.

The Lost Heiress

Daughter of Beautiful "Rose of Cuba" Sought So She Can Come Into Large Fortune.

HELEN OWEN, OR GORDON.

Helen Owen, child of romance and adventure, mysteriously missing, is being sought in Chicago. Wealthy relatives wish to bestow upon her a large fortune that has been left to her by an uncle.

Three other fortunes have been pooled in the attempt to find her and a large reward has been offered for information that will lead to the desired result.

The girl disappeared after escaping from the home of her custodian, Mrs. Condley of 4615 Drake avenue. Previously she had fled from the Home for the Friendless.

Story Reads Like Novel.

The tale, as told last night by her uncle, Clyde Owen of Pittsburgh, Pa., an official of the Pressed Steel Car Co., who with his wife is stopping at 1926 Washington boulevard, might make the theme for a novel.

Helen is 17 years old and the image of her mother, a famous beauty, known as "The Rose of Cuba."

Helen's mother was the daughter of Don Esteban Garcio, a retired major of the Spanish army and member of one of the oldest families of Spain.

Her father was Warren D. Owen, who fought a duel with Don Esteban before he won "the Rose." He died a year ago last April in New Bedford, Mass., leaving his daughter an orphan.

Helen was born in St. Louis, and after her mother died was placed in an orphanage in Boston. Her father took her from that place one night and sped to Chicago with her. Her grandfather wanted her and had sent agents to take her back to Spain.

Gipsying and Trouble.

They traveled all over the country, changing their name to Gordon. But the girl was growing up, and must be educated. The adventuring ceased. The former rough rider established himself in Oak Park as a painting contractor.

Helen managed the house, and did as she pleased. She went to movies, dances, and cabarets. It was thus she came into the hands of the Juvenile authorities. She ventured into the loop one night with a girl friend. It was late. A policeman stopped the girls and questioned them. Helen's Spanish blood caused her to make angry comment.

She was placed in the Home for the Friendless. She escaped and was taken back. Later she was given into the care of Mrs. Condley, and when she left it is said she took some trinkets that did not belong to her.

Four Uncles Hunt for Girl.

Her four uncles—Clyde Owen of Pittsburgh, Perry Owen, superintendent of a large bakery in the east; William Owen, wealthy resident of Cairo, Ill., and Edward Owen of Boston—sought her in vain. A few months ago Edward Owen died and left his entire estate to her.

"The three of us who are left have vowed to find her," Clyde Owen said last night. "She must be in Chicago. There will be no prosecution by Mrs. Condley. There will be no trouble with the Juvenile authorities. There will be no vexation from her grandfather in Spain.

"A great house, six acres of land, and many thousands of dollars waiting for Helen—but, to tell you the story properly, I must take you down to Cuba.

"It was some time after the battle of San Juan hill and my brother was recuperating from his wounds, when he met 'The Rose o' Cuba'.

"Helen's grandfather was bitter toward all Americans. Rose said he would kill the Americano who asked her hand. She said it was best to wait until the war was over and her father's hate had cooled.

Fights Duel with Don.

"But he would not have it so. He faced the don and demanded his consent to the marriage. The old don sprang at him with a knife. Warren caught him by the wrist and took the knife from him.

"He carried it with him to his hospital cot and that night he sent it back, accompanied by a formal challenge to a duel.

"A few days later my brother and Don Esteban met as dawn was breaking. On a rustic bench, covered with a cape, were two revolvers, one loaded, one empty. The principals in the duel were to reach under the cloth and take a weapon. Their choice was fixed by the drawing of straws. Warren got the long straw and took first pick.

"The two men were placed back to back. A voice counted out ten paces and bade them turn and fire at will.

"You will understand that neither knew whether his revolver was the loaded one. Neither knew whether he had a chance for life. Both were good shots.

Don Esteban Loses.

"They raised their weapons at the same time and Don Esteban fired. There was only a click.

"He threw the revolver on the grass, made the sign of the cross, folded his arms, looked at the sky, and waited for his death.

"My brother threw down his weapon. The two fireeaters embraced, and there were Spanish and American flags at the wedding.

"Helen's mother died of consumption a few weeks after Helen was born. Warren also died of consumption."

UNREGISTERED CAN QUALIFY BY AFFIDAVIT TO VOTE ON JUNE 6

Instructions were issued yesterday to election judges and clerks authorizing them to allow unregistered persons to vote by affidavit in the election of Monday, June 6.

In brief, the law is that any person who is not on the poll books of his precinct, but who has the citizenship and residence qualifications required by law, may "swear in" his vote. A person who has moved within the boundaries of the same precinct since the last registration must have two householders from the precinct at the polling place to make supporting affidavits for him.

In all other instances only one householder's affidavit is required.

Fire Fighter Hurt as Shop Glass Is Shattered

Lieut. Joseph Sullivan of the fire department was injured about the arms last night while fighting a small fire at the restaurant of Cunard Nielson, 722 West Randolph street. Lieut. Sullivan was directing his men when a plate glass window was broken and pieces of it struck him on the wrist, severing an artery. He is not badly injured.

ASSOCIATION OF COMMERCE HEAD URGES BIG VOTE

South Side Churches Back Coalition.

Nonpartisan forces of tremendous strength continue to step into the judicial battle to an extent that almost causes the backers of the coalition ticket to break into loud cheers.

This morning a number of ministers, who have concluded that great moral issues are at stake at the election on Monday, June 6, will urge from their pulpits that the coalition ticket be warmly supported. This is especially true of churches in Hyde Park and Woodlawn, where several church organizations already are actively participating in the campaign.

This action is not entirely unprecedented, but precedent for another big piece of news for the anti-machine elements could not be found in the files. This was the action of President Joseph R. Noel of the Association of Commerce, in urging all members of that big organization to take an active part in the election.

Committee Proposes Action.

The citizenship committee, which proposed the appeal, consists of the following:

Clifford W. Barnes, Clarence S. Pellett,
William A. Bond, Marvin B. Pool,
Abel Davis, Edward M. Skinner,
Carl R. Latham, Melvin A. Traylor.
John P. McGoorty,

"There is, and has been for years," read President Noel's letter, "a need of a civic awakening in Chicago. Instead of leaving it to the few who always vote, we must all participate in all elections, and bear our full share of responsibility as citizens. We urge you to do your utmost to secure a full expression of the wishes of the voters at this coming election.

Employés Urged to Vote Early.

"All employers are asked to notify their employés that they are expected to vote before leaving their home precincts on Monday morning, June 6, and to have it fully understood that any who do not vote before coming to work will be sent back to vote before the polls close.

"Each member is asked to coöperate by calling at least ten persons on the telephone on Monday to remind them to vote if they have not already done so. A tag to remind you of this duty is inclosed herewith. Tie it to your phone."

Woodlawn Church Folk Active.

In Woodlawn a meeting of men and women of Seventh ward churches will be held Tuesday night at Woodlawn Methodist Episcopal church, 64th street and Woodlawn avenue. At the meeting a committee, of which Arthur Chittick is secretary, will make a report. The following notice of the meeting has been sent out:

"Certain members of the various churches in the Seventh ward met with the Methodist Men's Bible class of the Woodlawn Park Methodist Episcopal church to consider the issues involved in the election of judges on Monday, June 6.

Resolution on "Stay at Homes."

"At a meeting of the committee of ten appointed by the chairman to assume direction of efforts to get church members to vote at this election the following resolution was passed:

"Whereas, the charge has been repeatedly made that the better element of voters, especially the church members, are 'stay at homes' when needed in elections, and whereas great moral issues are involved in the coming judicial election to be held on Monday, June 6, 1921, as follows:

"Whether judges to be chosen shall be free, experienced, independent, and uncontrolled by any political machine?

"Whether the Juvenile court of Cook county and the administration of the pension fund shall be maintained with present standards.

"Whether the jury commission shall be uninfluenced by partisan considerations.

"Whether partisans shall take control of the South Park board.

"Whether the number of employés in the fee offices of Cook county shall be fixed according to the will of a partisan faction.

"And whereas we regard these issues as vital and important, be it

"Resolved, That committees of ten be appointed in each of several churches to inform their fellow members of the importance of this election, and to the end that the largest possible vote

OMAR WRIGHT TO HEAD U. S. BUDGET BUREAU, BELIEF

DREAM OF LOVE FADES AS I. W. W. SPOUSE DICTATES

Parisienne Bride Tells a Weird Story.

New York, May 28.—[Special.]—In the legal story of a love dream that faded, Andrée Emille Simon White, beautiful Parisienne, bride of four months, revealed today "The Rev." Bouck White's plot to overturn the government of the United States.

Mrs. White brought her sadly eclipsed honeymoon into the Supreme court of Dutchess county and filed suit for divorce against the famous clergyman, revolutionist, alleged Socialist, I. W. W. leader, and ultra-Red.

Mrs. White is the daughter of a chemical engineer in Paris. She is a graduate chemist. Her talents keep pace with her personal charm.

Result of Chance Meeting.

Her meeting with Bouck White was a mere chance. He went to Paris last February on some mission.

In the maze of a bazaar a courtly man, polished and well dressed, was presented to her.

They were married in Paris on April 21. There intervened the honeymoon journey by sea to New York, and the last day of April found them in the Hotel Holly, New York.

There the mask dropped.

The suave, courtly lover stood before her as a plotter designing national ruin. Her beauty and grace was not to be the attraction of a love nest but the soft disguise for the operations of a Hypatia.

She was to become the Hypatia, taking her cue and character from Kingsey's book of that name. Hypatia was to sit at the feet of the queer men and women who came to White's hotel and learn the underground plans and the destructive principles that were to put torch and dynamite where she had anticipated kisses and roses.

The pretty French woman, dazed by her experiences, next found herself in the mountain side home. The insistence of the "revolution" was constant. She refused to listen.

Only "Mental" Wife.

White revealed a new aspect. She was only a mental companion. Hers was the lot of a fellow plotter, only a comrade of the revolution.

And then, on May 4, he drove her from the mountain home to seek shelter in the home of William McElrath, a neighbor.

Such was the remarkable narrative of the divorce action by which she sought freedom. It was set off with some minor details. White had demanded that she go back to Paris and had taken her diamond engagement ring to get the money for her return passage.

Bouck White has long been a local firebrand. In the days preceding the war he was known as an advocate of the most revolutionary type of I. W. W. War upset soap boxes and their orating ornaments. With the fall of the soap box tumbled likewise the "Rev." Bouck White.

But, in the falling, he paused long enough to be one of a motley gathering that trampled upon the American flag, tore it, and reviled it in a public meeting. Magistrate McAdoo at that time sentenced White to a term on Blackwell's Island.

PRISONER SLAIN IN INMATES' FIGHT AT BRIDEWELL

Peter De Angelo and James O'Connor, short term inmates of the house of correction, quarreled over which one should carry a basket of bread for the noon meal yesterday from the prison bakery to the dining room. O'Connor knocked De Angelo down. The latter, striking his head on the stone flagging of the courtyard as he fell, suffered a fracture of the skull. He died thirty minutes later. His assailant probably will be charged with murder.

Both men are bakers. O'Connor, single, lives at 938 West 58th street. He was committed to the house of correction Feb. 3 to serve a one year sentence for larceny. According to Supt. Joseph Siman, this was his fourth term at the house of correction.

De Angelo is survived by his widow and six children living at 1022 West Harrison street. Sentenced April 25, he was serving six months for assault with a deadly weapon. The attack was on his wife. She shot him, inflicting a flesh wound.

SOVIETS EMPLOY 14,000 AT TULA MUNITION PLANT

Washington, D. C., May 28.—The Russian bolshevik government in April was maintaining approximately 14,000 munition workers at Tula, the most important pre-revolutionary arms factory, according to reports received here today in official quarters.

Approximately 50,000 workers, it was estimated, were employed there before the bolshevik régime.

There were found in good condition at the factory 35,000 Russian rifles and 2,800,000 rounds of ammunition, 15,000 officers' Nagen revolvers, and 1,500,000 rounds of ammunition, 18,000 soldiers' Nagen revolvers, 35 machine guns, and 3,800 hand grenades.

HOUSE, SENATE AT WAR OVER THE PEACE PROJECT

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., May 28.—[Special.]—Differences of opinion between the house and senate threaten to keep the United States in a technical state of war with Germany for an indefinite period and jeopardize the movement for naval holiday, approved by the senate on Wednesday.

The Knox peace resolution, repealing the declaration of war, was adopted by the senate a month ago. The house foreign affairs committee has not yet held a meeting on it, but Republican members of the committee do not like the repeal feature of the Knox resolution, and have agreed to substitute the resolution drafted by Chairman Porter of their committee. He, like Senator Knox, is from Pennsylvania. His resolution simply would proclaim the end of the war.

Angers Some Senators.

Some senators, when they heard of this action today, were indignant at what they characterized as merely a "jealous trick" on the part of the house. They said any peace resolution, if effective, automatically would repeal the declaration of war. They blamed personal jealousy between Representative Porter and Senator Knox, both from Pittsburgh.

President Harding, it is understood, will accept the solution reached by congress. But an even sharper issue is being drawn between the two houses over the naval holiday conference question. Again and again the senate had declined to entangle the straightforward proposition of curtailing naval building with the idea of general military disarmament.

Now, it appears, house leaders have decided to "enlarge the scope" of the Borah amendment requesting the President to enter negotiations with Great Britain and Japan for an agreement to cut down naval building.

Want World Conference.

They propose to bring all other important powers into the conference in order that the whole question of disarmament on land and sea, in the air, and under the sea, may be discussed. Representative Mondell, Republican leader of the house, has had a conference with the President on the subject, and reports that the President is not adverse to that "enlarging."

"Oronoko," a summer camp for children of all ages, founded and conducted by St. Chrysostom's church, 1424 North Dearborn street, is about to inaugurate its twelfth season on the south bank of Lake Chapin, Berrien county, Mich., under the leadership of Frederick Chase Spalding, campmaster of "Oronoko" and other camps for the last twenty years or more.

Among last season's guests were undernourished women and children recommended by the "Central Free Dispensary," girls and women from the church, and the cathedral choir.

With its guest list open to many outside the church, the subscription list is likewise open to any one who would guarantee the assurance of renewed life and larger beneficence to the youth of Chicago.

ECHO OF QUINN SATIRE HEARD IN BILL TO GENERAL

Washington, D. C., May 28.—[Special.]—Secretary of War Weeks today stated that he had directed Maj. Gen. Peter C. Harris, the adjutant general of the army, to pay into the federal treasury about $12 to cover the government cost of printing a booklet commemorative of the general's son, Capt. Charles D. Harris, who was killed in France during the world war.

That Gen. Harris had used the printing office of the adjutant general's office to print this commemorative publication was one of the allegations made in counter charges filed against the general by Robert J. Quinn, a $2,400 clerk, employed in the adjutant general's office. Quinn was dismissed by Secretary Weeks on recommendation of Gen. Harris, for statements contained in Quinn's serial novel, critical of civil service conditions in the department.

The novel was entitled "The Lair of the White Lion," which has not been completed, but has been running in "The Reclassificationist." It had as its two principal characters "Maj. Inkinpen" and "Capt. Rarehorse." Charges filed against Quinn by the adjutant general set forth that "Maj. Inkinpen" was "intended to characterize Peter C. Harris," now the adjutant general of the army, and that "Capt. Rarehorse" was "intended to characterize Frederick W. Lewis," a colonel in the army, who is attached to the office of the adjutant general.

Most of the charges made by Quinn Secretary Weeks regards as trivial or not founded on fact, but Gen. Harris' action in having a private memorial booklet typed at government expense he regarded as improper.

One of Quinn's charges against the adjutant general is that he required a clerk of the war department to write invitations for a luncheon given by Gen. Harris to Newton D. Baker, retiring secretary of war.

RUSSIA A TOTAL WRECK; BRITISH BLAME LENINISM

White Paper Discloses Complete Collapse.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., May 28.—[Special.]—Russia is helpless and ruined under the bolshevik economic and political experiment. The policies inaugurated by Nicolai Lenin, the soviet president, have collapsed, and there is no possibility of economic regeneration in Russia without the assistance of outside help from capitalist countries, according to a report made by a British official committee appointed to collect information on the Russian situation.

This information is brought together in a British white paper, a copy of which reached Washington today containing the British official report, which declared that "the power of bolshevism in Russia has developed on a scale to which there is no parallel, and represents an attempt to control completely the conditions of work and leisure, of food and drink, of education and amusement, of travel, and even the home life of every individual in a nation whose population even now exceeds 120,000,000." The report added that recent evidence shows that the tendency towards state control is increasing rather than diminishing.

Must Stop Propaganda.

The report deals with the economic and political situation in Russia; the final conclusions reached by the committee are given as follows:

"1. That the complete renunciation by the soviet government, by the Russian Communist party, and by the Third or Communist Internationale of propaganda directed toward the destruction of the political and economic order existing in other countries is the fundamental premise, without the acceptance of which there can be no question of capitalist aid in the economic reconstruction of Russia.

"2. That the possibility of extending credit to Russia on a scale in any way commensurate with her minimum needs will be dependent upon the faithful observation of the above condition.

"3. That the coöperation of the peasantry is indispensable.

"4. That the settlement of the agrarian question on a basis which will provide inducements for agricultural production, now lacking, is essential to the provision of adequate supplies of food for the industrial workers in the towns.

Must Restore Transportation.

"5. That the restoration of rail and river transport is necessary.

"6. That the state of administrative incompetence and corruption into which the departments of the soviet government have fallen militates against the proper distribution of available supplies among the population and must be remedied if the Russian worker is restored to health.

"7. That if the extraordinary commissions continue to exercise their present irresponsible powers, foreigners whose services in Russia may be necessary to execute contracts between the soviet government and foreign capitalists will be deprived of those guarantees accorded to foreigners in other civilized countries."

For Soviet to Decide.

The report continues:

"It would appear, therefore, that the soviet government must decide whether they are going to maintain a policy of political repression at home and aggressive bolshevist propaganda abroad, which will inevitably, whatever international treaties they may make, lead in practice to a continuance of their present economic isolation or whether they will accept and honestly carry out the fundamental condition which can alone obtain for them the outside aid they so urgently need.

"If they decide to maintain the campaign for the violent destruction of capitalism in other countries and the policy of ruthless repression which makes it impossible for foreigners to live and to do business in Russia, then Russia will be of necessity left to her own resources. Then will the future show whether or not the combined effect upon the worker of persuasion as to the merits of communism and of persuasion by payment for work done, with the shadow of imprisonment and the bayonet ever present, can restore the old productive power of Russia within the short time available for the experiment. If it does not, Trotzky himself admits that the Russian Socialist society is on the way to ruin, however it may twist and turn, and with the conclusion of Trotzky we agree.

Responsible for Misery.

"It is maintained by the bolshevists that the soviet government has existed too short a time for considered judgment to be passed upon its success or failure, and that during the greater part of this period they have been prevented from laying the foundations of economic reconstruction owing to the civil war and the foreign intervention which accompanied it. We are prepared to agree that their time has been short and their opportunities restricted. We doubt, however, whether so much human misery as has existed in Russia during the last three years has ever been the lot of any people within so short a time in the history of the modern world.

"While we are prepared to admit that the European war, the events following the first revolution, the civil war, and intervention are contributing factors in causing the misery, it is impossible to disassociate the soviet government from a large measure of responsibility for the recent suffering of the Russian people."

$1,000,000 FOR U. S. HISTORY STUDY

Knights of Columbus leaders in convention yesterday voted to launch a million dollar movement "to make American history safe for Americans." Left to right are shown Thomas P. Flynn, Chicago; Ernest J. O'Brien, Detroit; William J. McGinley, supreme secretary, New York; John H. Reddin, supreme master, Denver; Dr. W. J. Macmillan, Charlottetown, P. E. I., and Patrick E. Burke, New Orleans.

The first American historical convention of the Knights of Columbus supreme assembly, in session yesterday at the Hotel La Salle, voted to launch a national movement to popularize the study of American history from American sources. John H. Reddin of Denver, supreme master of the fourth degree, estimated the movement would require an endowment of between $500,000 and $1,000,000, which the K. of C. will pay from their private funds.

Mr. Reddin will name the historical commission at a meeting of the K. of C. national directors in Chicago June 26.

"It is our aim to enlist a commission of leading historians of diverse racial extraction and religious denominations," Mr. Reddin declared. "This commission will prepare a cycle of twenty-four pamphlets, covering critical periods in the nation's history, the matter to be written direct from original sources. The entire organization of the Knights of Columbus, consisting of 800,000 members and 2,200 councils, will be aligned to support the movement.

"The pamphlets will be distributed in millions of copies to schools and colleges, legislatures, and newspapers throughout the country. No matter what it may cost the Knights of Columbus, we are determined to present the story of America as it should be presented—the plain, unvarnished facts."

Edward F. McSweeney of Boston, former historian of the Massachusetts Chamber of Commerce, told the convention that if half the American history text books used in our schools were destroyed, American history would benefit.

State Deputy Edward Houlihan of Illinois pledged the support of his jurisdiction to the historical movement.

WHOLESALE MILK PRICE ONLY 8 1-4C POOLE CHARGES

Declaring that Chicago milk distributors are delivering milk in bulk as low as 8¼ cents a quart, Russell J. Poole, secretary of the council committee on high costs, launched a new inquiry into milk prices yesterday.

The committee recently completed an investigation of the Milk Producers' Coöperative Marketing company and turned alleged evidence of attempts to throttle the city's milk supply over to the state's attorney and the district attorney.

Letter Tells of Prices.

In a letter to Ald. Sheldon W. Govier, chairman of the committee, describing the committee's new drive on the distributors, Mr. Poole says:

"The price being paid the farmer for milk—4.06 cents per quart—is not exorbitant.

"During peak prices the farmer received $3.70 per 100 pounds and today is receiving $2.05. The peak retail price was 16 cents a quart and 10 cents a pint. Today it is 14 cents a quart and 8 cents a pint with the wartime price of 17 cents for a half pint of cream still prevailing.

"During peak prices the distributors made the statement themselves that each time milk went down 45 cents a hundred pounds they could go down 1 cent a quart.

Should Be 12 Cents a Quart.

The wholesale price of milk has dropped $1.65 a 100 pounds, which, according to their own statements should have made them reduce milk from 16 cents a quart to 12 cents a quart.

"Rockford, Elgin, Janesville, Waukesha, and Milwaukee have 9 and 10 cent milk.

"A thorough investigation by this committee would bring out facts that would take the tricks out of the milk trade and put the milk in the stomachs of poor children who sadly need it."

Mr. Poole recommended that a conference of the big milk distributors be called this week, offering to demonstrate to them that a reduction of milk prices should be forthcoming at once.

OBREGON REPLY TO U. S. EXPECTED EARLY THIS WEEK

No Official Comment in Mexico City.

Mexico City, May 28.—[By the Associated Press.]—George T. Summerlin, the American chargé d'affaires, who recently returned here from Washington, called at the foreign office this morning, but it was explained his visit was merely to thank Foreign Secretary Pani for the courtesies extended incidental to Mr. Summerlin's return here.

With the memorandum of the United States regarding recognition of Mexico in his hands for consideration President Obregon, it is stated semi-officially, will communicate with Mr. Summerlin early next week regarding the document. Mexican officials declined today to be quoted on the subject, declaring the matter was entirely in the hands of President Obregon.

Preceding Night's Conference.

Last night's conference between President Obregon and Mr. Summerlin was hurriedly arranged as soon as the foreign office was advised that such a meeting was desired by the American chargé d'affaires. Mr. Summerlin, accompanied by a foreign office representative, met the president in Chapultepec castle and for more than an hour discussed the memorandum with him. The conference is said to have been extremely cordial and it is stated President Obregon expressed the desire for an amicable arrangement.

Mr. Summerlin is understood to have told President Obregon that Mexican affairs had occupied the United States state department for some time and that especial concern had been felt in Washington over rumored bolshevik activities in Mexico as exemplified by the recent tragedy in Morelia and the invasion of the chamber of deputies by radicals.

Obregon Most Affable.

President Obregon, according to reports, is declared to have assured Mr. Summerlin that the radical movement was being watched closely and that all safeguards were being taken to prevent its assuming menacing proportions.

Mr. Summerlin today maintained his policy of reserve and the only comment he would make on his conference with President Obregon was that "the meeting was extremely pleasant and the president was most affable."

A CALL TO BATTLE.

Chicago one week from tomorrow—Monday, June 6—will decide its future. On that day its fate will rest in the hands of its citizens. Whether it will retain and safeguard its rights and independence through the election of a free, uncorrupted, and incorruptible judiciary or will deliver itself bound, blinded, and gagged into the hands of a political machine mad with the lust of money and power will be determined at the polls.

The greatest political, social, and economic crisis in the history of the city is upon us. It is a high privilege, a privilege which no citizen of Chicago can afford to neglect, to take part in the battle which will see this crisis safely passed and the city once again moving forward on a path of untrammeled justice, independence, and honest endeavor. In years to come this campaign will be recognized as a turning point in the history of the city, the beginning of the end of a selfish and corrupt boss rule, the essential first step toward a better, greater, and finer Chicago.

Young men who put aside their business and took up their guns to fight for the safety of their homes and their country, sacrificing health, wealth, life, or limb, had no more inspiring cause than that which is offered to them today. Children and grandchildren of those who rally to this cause will recognize and appreciate a quarter of a century hence the vital signifiance of this crisis even more clearly than those who are so close to the issues can do today. They will give thanks with pride to the men and women who fought this battle in their behalf as certainly as they will give thanks with pride to the fathers who fought at Yorktown and Gettysburg.

There is inspiration in the cause; stirring leadership, unselfishness, unity of purpose, and a practical altruism which goes to the roots of good citizenship. Coalition means more than the mere gathering of an equal number of Democratic and Republican candidates on one ticket. It means a united front against the force of corrupt power aiming to make itself more corrupt and more powerful.

It is an opportunity which no one can fail to grasp and hope to retain a full measure of self-respect. The days are numbered—eight. Those who fail to enlist for the fight and for the victory will never again have such an opportunity. There must be no slackers. Let the crosses appear before the names of all the coalition judges and so mark the graves of the city hall's evil political forces. Otherwise they may mark the death of hope for those who love their city.

A CAMPAIGN LIE.

Republican voters are being told that if they vote the coalition judicial ticket which will be printed in the Democratic column of the ballot, they will not be entitled to vote at any Republican primary for two years.

This is a campaign lie.

Under the election law a voter is free to vote any ticket or for any candidate in any column without in any way losing his or her right to vote at his or her own party primary.

The prohibition refers only to party primaries. If a citizen votes Republican at a primary he or she is not entitled to vote Democratic at any primary for two years. But a Republican may vote a Democratic ticket or any other ticket or for any candidate at an election without losing his or her membership in his party or his or her consequent right to vote Republican in a subsequent primary.

There is no primary before the election of June 6. The prohibition referred to has nothing whatever to do with this election. Republicans may vote the coalition ticket in the Democratic column and vote Republican at the next primary.

The city hall machine is simply trying to deceive uninformed voters, especially women voters.

WHY NOT GIVE THE FIVE CENT FARE NOW?

Representative Smith of Chicago calls the attention of the house at Springfield, the governor, and the hundreds of thousands of sweating straphangers in this city to a campaign promise made by Mayor Thompson at the last state election, but never carried out. It is the promise of the 5 cent fare in Chicago, on the strength of which the mayor has put various henchmen into positions of advantage, and by which, with the approval of Mr. Small, he unquestionably elected the governor.

Yet we have no 5 cent fare. Exactly the same conditions obtain as existed when this promise was repeatedly made to Chicago voters. Costs of operating the traction lines are no greater, and probably less, than during the campaign of 1920. The public utilities commission has the same power to lower rates now that it had to raise them. Yet five months under the new administration elected on this issue have passed and the commission has not reduced the rates as promised.

The explanation is simple. Neither the mayor nor the candidate for governor ever intended to reduce the fares immediately to 5 cents by the action of the commission as suggested. The immediate 5 cent fare promise was merely invaluable election propaganda. After it had been used to accomplish the purpose of the campaign it was put aside for something else.

In the case of the governor this "something else" was other administrative and legislative matters which he considered more important. In the case of the mayor the "something else" was a traction plan which gave him a large fund for immediate disposal, and which promised to give him millions more while at the same time continuing the possibility of the 5 cent fare slogan for use in future campaigns.

His traction plan is now before the legislature. At best it puts off the granting of a 5 cent fare for from two to five years. At the same time, it admits that a 5 cent fare may not be sufficient to operate the traction lines, and provides for taxation to make up the deficit. But it still maintains the promise of a 5 cent fare as a beacon light with which to lead the voters to the polls.

It is time that the straphangers of Chicago should have done with such useless promises. The machinery which the mayor said would give us 5 cent fares at once is still in existence, though probably not for long. Let the mayor make good on his promise or admit that he bunked the voters.

PARTISANS AND NEWSPAPERS.

No newspaper of general circulation can survive and prosper for any considerable length of time unless it serves the general public interest.

This is the basic law of newspaper existence.

The bulk of criticism of the great dailies is directed at them because they are obeying this law. In every community, in the whole country, there are many minorities. They range in numbers from a handful to minorities of formidable size. Some represent very powerful interests and classes. Some are very highly organized, having expert representatives whose livelihoods depend upon the cultivation of discontent in the group or class they are employed to represent, to stimulate its suspicions, to intensify its belief in its own wrongs and magnify its sense of its own special interests.

This is a statement of fact, an outstanding fact in American affairs. It is indeed a necessary proceeding. It represents probably the only practical means by which a democratic people express and defend and further their various interests. It accomplishes a great deal of good, but, like all things human, it has its defects as well as its merits.

The chief of these is that in proportion as the demands of a minority are organized and inflamed, the minority becomes heedless of the general good, resentful of criticism or dissent, and determined to enforce its interests without consideration of others' rights or of the general welfare.

It consequently comes into conflict with any newspaper which obeys the basic law of the newspaper's existence, the first duty of the newspaper, which is to try always to see the whole field and to pursue the general good rather than that of any special interest or group. Never do these impassioned minorities give credit to a newspaper which does not accept their views for fulfilling its duty. If in a controversy between farmers and railroads, the interests of transportation or of the general public in transportation are considered and asserted, the farmers attack the newspaper as agent of the railroads, conspiring for pay against the farmer. If the newspaper urges the farmers' measures there is the charge that it is playing the demagogue for the sake of circulation and resultant profits. Every group, whether its interest be financial, political, religious, or social, wishes the newspaper to express and further that interest and interprets any presentation of opposing consideration as evidence of the newspaper's venality.

Especially in a period such as that through which we are passing, partisanism is rampant. The war has created or rather revived in a highly inflamed state all sorts of loyalties drawn from the traditions and sentiments of minorities having nothing whatever to do with American interests. These minorities are impassioned and highly organized, and they represent a considerable disturbance of our political affairs and if they did not counteract one another would have an influence upon American policy in no degree directed by American interests.

Toward the newspaper which grounds its thought upon an American basis and tries conscientiously to see things from the viewpoint of American interest, these minorities turn a resentful and uncomprehending hostility. As in the case of the other groups referred to, each demands partisanship of its own variety and if it is not forthcoming charges bias, conspiracy, and venality. The Irish patriot accuses the paper which does not make itself a partisan of his views with being bought by British gold. The British partisan charges demagogy. German, Polish, French, Italian, Greek partisans are of the same temper.

If all these minorities combined represented public opinion and their partisanism were as influential as it is intense, no newspaper conscientiously representing general American interests and trying honestly to take the general view could survive. But the contrary is true. As we have said, the newspaper of general appeal must present all sides in its news report and in its editorial policy must be faithful to what it believes to be the common good. In proportion as it is true to this duty, it is attacked by all partisans, at one moment or another, is charged with disloyalty when it is most faithful, with venality while it is most incorruptible.

Obeying this law, it serves its purpose in the community and prospers. Disobeying it, it eventually dies.

Editorial of the Day

JUSTICE AND CIVILIZATION.

[Journal of the American Bar Association.]

There are none but a misguided and negligible few who propose to abolish our judicial institutions, but there are more than a negligible few who propose to gain control of them by stealth, for selfish and sinister purposes. Such attacks are more insidious and dangerous than the direct attacks of blatant anarchists, for they are more likely to succeed, and so far as they do succeed they destroy the judicial institution. A court that is not absolutely free of all domination cannot exercise the true judicial function. It becomes an instrument of injustice. Better by far the abolition of courts than their surrender to private or political control. There can be no civilization without justice and no justice without judges free from every other control than that of law and conscience.

A LETTER TO B. L. T.

Dear Judge: Old P. S. W., who thinks clearly and writes with skill, says, referring to you, "Our Caesar was past master in the art of bantering." It was a keenly descriptive line, and I told him so. "The Judge," I replied, "was the World's Greatest Banterer. He often thumbed his nose when others knelt to pray." To false gods, of course, but I did not need to diagram a sentence to old P. S. W. But you detected the falsely pious so easily, though you were always more gentle than I could ever be with them. I love best to follow the leadership of men of the Charles G. Dawes type—men who would spit in the eye of devils and bid them do their worst.

Why do men fear? What have we to lose that we cannot regain? Very little! What cravens we be—how we fight tomorrows in the cold sweat of terror and so spoil many fine todays! Why worry, if one does his best and may now and then seek the sympathy and applause of a friend? The world likes a climbing man and always aids, but deserts the man who fails simply because he believes he is foredoomed to failure. Failure is often a success, if a man read his signs aright, and what the world often calls success is often sheer failure.

I priced a wrist watch the other day. It was a work of art, with numerous small diamonds. Seventeen hundred dollars was the market quotation given me in a bored manner by the princess in attendance. "The thing is beautiful," I said, "but there is no woman's wrist, however fair and virtuous she may be, worth so much squandering. The late-lamented war is over; what have you for five bucks?" But the damsel was greatly incensed, even intrigued, and swore there lived men who would buy such watches. And, damme, Judge, I believed her, so earnest was she that the art of saving was not practiced by those of sound wits. As for women, well, they do not greatly vary. All of them are wonderful—and erratic. URSUS.

FEARING YOU skipped it in The Trib. society items a regiment of faithful contribs hastens to assure you that Mr. and Mrs. Otto B. Schott of Lake Forest announce the marriage of their daughter, Ophelia Pulse, to A. Schlob Jr. of New York.

SHADOWS.

Why is it that the May can never bring
Unshadowed happiness, complete delight?
No matter how the flocking warblers sing,
Some old-time sadness lingers, and the light
Is clouded by the thought of coming night—
November's bareness, when the wind shall blow,
And golden gardens vanish from our sight.
Why is it that the bleakness of the snow
Must haunt our vision when the summertime's aglow?

Sir: My bow to your friend Dictionarius who called out the gendarmes because I said "She has touched her lips to the icy iron of life. Her tongue has been scalded by its freezing grip." And will you please tell him for me that literature has to do with sensation as well as with fact. I'll explain. When I was a little girl my winter's admonition used to be: "Look here, honey, don't you all never touch 'at tongue of yourn to no iron knob. You'll jes natch'ly have it scalded right off." Maybe it wasn't scalding when it ripped a strip off of a finger tip wetted by a tongue which obeyed orders, but still I was curious about the "scalding." It wasn't burned, I admit, but it felt like it. If we translated every one of our sensations into fact there wouldn't be any poetry or any writing in the world. It's my story that a tongue can be scalded by the freezing grip of icy iron, and I'm going to stick to it. FANNY BUTCHER.

MAKING OYSTERS SAFER.

THANKS to a process recently tried out by the New York state conservation commission, we may shortly be eating oysters all the year round with safety and satisfaction. An old rule arrived at in some slipshod way was that oysters should not be eaten in months in which there was no R in the name as spelled. This means no oysters between May 1 and Sept. 1.

A close study of the life of the oyster proved the general soundness of the rule of thumb edict. Whenever the temperature of the water in which oysters live falls below 45 degrees Fahrenheit the oysters stop eating. When the temperature approaches 45 degrees they eat little. Therefore, oysters forked up during the cold weather have not been eating for some time and have had a chance to get rid of all the typhoid bacilli which they may have swallowed during the warm weather.

The plan tried out in New York harbor is to float oysters in a weak chlorine water for eighteen hours before marketing them. When this method is followed oysters become safe all the year round, provided they are shipped cold and kept cold until sold, and never are sold except when fresh.

A more important gain still, especially from the economic standpoint, is that by employing this method oysters can be grown in waters now prohibited because of the high degree of pollution.

In good feeding times an oyster drinks about fifty gallons of water a day. As the water passes into the interior the bacteria and organic matter is filtered out and passes down the oyster's digestive tract. Sand and other indigestible matter is thrown out violently.

In the experiment about fifty bushels of oysters were "tonged up" and loaded in an oyster floating scow, being spread on the floor to a depth of about six inches. Intakes were opened and sea water was taken in until the water was about ten inches deep. This meant about fifty gallons of water for each oyster. Enough hypochlorite of lime was added to the water to make a strength of about five parts per million free chlorine.

The oysters did not like the taste of this chlorine water, and in their efforts to spit it out they threw out most of the bacteria, dirt, mud and other foreign matter.

At the end of six hours the oysters are given a second dose of chlorine water. They lie in this second water twelve to eighteen hours. They are then washed off with clean, fresh sea water. Then they are ready for market. The washing improves the appearance of the oyster. Chlorinated washed oysters are white, clean and fat. It in no way affects the flavor unfavorably. The chlorine all goes to destroy the organic matter, or if any is left it evaporates into the air.

The number of bacteria in the oyster is reduced 90 per cent. The skill required is in determining the strength of the hypochlorite to be used. It must be strong enough to kill the bacteria, but if too much is used the oysters will not drink it and the "liquor" may taste like chlorine.

Dr. Carmella of the United States public health service, who had been detailed to watch this experiment, thinks that eventually oyster growers will treat all thir oysters this way, just as practically all milk sold in cities is pasteurized. He believes this would improve the demand for oysters as pasteurizing milk has done for milk by increasing public confidence in the safety of the product.

MANY CONQUER T. B.

M. G. writes: "1. I would like to know if a person, after being cured of t. b., will really be able to work? 2. Do such people live very long? 3. Is there a chance for them to regain their health?"

REPLY.

1. Yes. I know many cured consumptives who do a man's work.
2. Many live a long time. Statistics show that on the average they do not live out the full expectancy of men of their age.
3. Yes.

NEW SCHOOL OF HEALING.

N. S. writes: "I notice that Mrs. F. S. asks regarding her daughter, who has pain in the heels, without any cause of which she knows. About three years ago I had that trouble, only worse. At last I found the trouble was in my eyes. I went to a good eye specialist, had proper glasses fitted, and my troubles were over. But if I go without my glasses for one week the trouble returns."

REPLY.

Pain in the heel is often referred there from some other part of the body. Heel pain due to eyestrain is about the limit.

THE CANNY SCOT.

A. L. P. writes: "It may interest you to know that my son and only child was 15 years old yesterday, as finely built and healthy as can be found anywhere, and he is a condensed milk baby. My two sisters, who were fed on cow's milk, were puny and are dead many years ago. Doctors differ in many ways and disapprove of condensed milk for babies, but throughout our family it has produced plump and healthy children. I would like to tell Mrs. W. D. how to bring up children with coffee and tea as part of their daily diet, as I am from Scotland."

REPLY.

You Scotch are a wonderful people. You drink lots of things not good for you and live healthy in spite of it. Condensed milk is a badly balanced ration, but as between condensed milk and old, dirty, warm, liquid cow's milk the former is to be preferred.

WHO WANTS MORE BOILS?

E. S. O. writes: "I have read many times that it is dangerous to poultice a boil, but still I hear it is recommended right along. Am I under the wrong impression? I have a boil on my lip."

REPLY.

It is not especially dangerous, but it is an exhibition of bad judgment. Poulticing begets other boils, and is not one enough?

Chicago, May 24.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Along the side of the golf course at Garfield park are some benches. If a person was sitting on one of these benches and a player on the course sent the ball in his direction, striking him, without warning, who is responsible for personal injury to the person hit? P. If the injury was done through the player's failure to give warning, which the ordinary prudent person would give, the player would seem to be liable.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

FOR DISARMAMENT; BUT NOT FIRST.

Chicago, May 23.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I admire Mr. W. J. Bryan for trying to keep us neutral in the world war, and I am strongly against United States waging a war to obtain oil in Mexico, or to help high finance hold on to the land it has gained by war. However, I do not agree with the people who claim that if we disarm we are making a step toward peace any more than I believe that if I leave my door unlocked I shall reduce the number of robberies in Chicago.

Disarmament, as I see it, is based upon the idea that there is good will and trust among nations, and this we know is not true. England, for example, has been working to regain us as her colony ever since we separated, and if she had the power she would dictate to us as to how we should trade.

If Mr. Bryan and his co-workers would bring about good will and fair play among nations, which although almost impossible to obtain, is at least worth working for, then disarmament would naturally and easily follow. C. C.

A SPORTING PROPOSITION FOR THE FARMER.

Chicago, May 23.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—What's all this talk about anti-board of trade legislation? If the farmers have got a proposition [a business or sporting one] why don't they come in and compete with the board of trade in a strictly business way? There are 1,000 farmers and $1,000 for every board of trade operator and dollar, and it seems to me if the farmer had any sporting blood, and with the proposition he claims to have [he at least owns the commodity in question] he could build a building, organize a rival business to the board of trade, and if he could render a greater service than the present board all the business would be his in a short time without legislating the other fellow out of business.

It would be a pretty how-do-you-do if all businesses were started the way the farmer wants to start his; first legislate the other fellow out of it, then start up without competition. Surely a sporting way to get into business and one worthy of the man with lots of money and lots of influence, both of which the farmer has. B. STUART WATTS.

"ART ALONE ENDURES."

Chicago, May 23.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I am driven to writing upon the conservation of such progress as Chicago has made in art and architecture since the awful days of the early eighties.

What Chicago needs is an artistic "nurse" for its public officials and some of its business men in high places.

I will not comment upon this "small-town stuff" of which the "Chicago Boosters" are guilty, or on the too obvious impropriety of bulletin boards on either side of the water tower so as to face the boulevard going in either direction.

What I have in mind are two recent matters, one an accomplished vandalism and the other a contemplated crime.

The first is the putting up of the cheap "Main Street" shops between the marble columns of the Peoples Gas building. What encouragement is there for an architect to design a building which stands out somewhat from the hopeless sameness of most of Chicago's commercial buildings when the responsible men connected with companies like the Peoples Gas building permit the whole effect of the building to be destroyed by useless and cheap destruction of the artistic quality of the building?

The second is the contemplated destruction of the magnificent granite monolithic columns on the front of the Illinois Trust and Savings bank. Most of the columns of this kind in Chicago are built up, as you know, and with the present ordinances no such columns can again be brought through the streets. The building should be preserved and the necessary room gotten by the bank on the Clark street side or the present columns should be incorporated in the La Salle street façade of the new building. It is inconceivable that large town bankers and business men should destroy trademark value which they have built up in that structure in advertising for a quarter of a century. In addition to that, a distinctive building of that kind in the long run will attract more attention than any office building which may be overshadowed at any time. A board of directors who would be guilty of doing it would, if the opportunity offered and the authority were theirs, wreck the Parthenon to secure rubble for a modern moving picture "palace."
NATHAN WILLIAM MACCHESNEY,
Member Chicago Plan commission.

"ADVERT, SIR, TO THE DUTIES OF A JUDGE."

Chicago, May 20.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Chief Justice Marshall of Virginia in "The Debates of the Virginia Convention," 1829-'31, page 616-619, says:

"Advert, sir, to the duties of a judge. He has to pass between the government and the man whom that government is prosecuting; between the most powerful individual in the community and the poorest and most unpopular. It is of the last importance that in the exercise of these duties he should observe the utmost fairness. Need I press the necessity of this? Does not every man feel that his own personal security and the security of his property depends on that fairness? The judicial department comes home in its effects to every man's fireside; it passes on his property, his reputation, his life, his all. Is it not to the last degree important that he should be rendered perfectly and completely independent, with nothing to influence or control him but God and his conscience?

"I have always thought, from my earliest youth till now, that the greatest scourge an angry heaven ever inflicted upon an ungrateful and a sinning people was an ignorant, a corrupt, or a dependent judiciary."
A LAWYER.

BUT NOW HE'S IN HOBART, IND.

Hobart, Ind., May 23.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I see in THE TRIBUNE of May 22 that Walter Ahlschlager, architect, has said that all architects are grafters. I wish to state that he is mistaken, as I was in Chicago in the building business for thirty-five years and not one cent in graft was given or taken. If the architect is free from graft there is not much danger of graft in the building. I think it would be wise for the commission to look into the architects' association and weed out the grafters. J. I. DOAN.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

DIRGE FOR A SOLDIER.

By George H. Boker.

Close his eyes; his work is done!
  What to him is friend or foeman,
Rise of moon or set of sun,
  Hand of man or kiss of woman?
Lay him low, lay him low,
In the clover or the snow!
What cares he? He cannot know;
    Lay him low!

As man may, he fought his fight,
  Proved his truth by his endeavor;
Let him sleep in solemn might,
Sleep forever and forever.

. . . .

Fold him in his country's stars,
Roll the drum and fire the volley!
What to him are all our wars,
  What but death bemocking folly?

. . . .

Leave him to God's watching eye;
Trust him to the hand that made him.
Mortal love weeps idly by;
  God alone has power to aid him.
Lay him low, lay him low,
In the clover or the snow!
What cares he? He cannot know;
    Lay him low!

EUGENE G. O'NEILL is accepted by this time as the white hope of American playwrighting. Even the most anti-highbrow critics proclaim his power, and talk of the day when he will write the Great American Play. "Beyond the Horizon" was, despite its faults and its failure, an honest groping for greatness, and even those who didn't like it respected it. Mr. O'Neill is a young man. He has written for the specialty theaters, the little groups of earnest amateurs. Until Richard Bennett did "Beyond the Horizon" his plays never got into the hands of the "commercial theater." Even that was more or less accidental. "Beyond the Horizon" was given at special matinées until New York's passion for seeing it had to be satisfied by regular performances.

Only a few—and those eager students of the drama—have read "Thirst," that terrible dramatization of the body's demands, which is comparable to Knut Hamsun's "Hunger," and is in a way a finer thing, because it is short, sharp, cruel. "The Moon of the Caribees," a collection of one act plays, all of them short, sharp, cruel, is known to others, and should, I think, be stored in the mind of every one who is interested in one act plays. Such grewsomeness, such power, such inevitability is rarely found.

Now there appears "The Emperor Jones," a volume containing three plays. The title play has had much the same theatrical history as "Beyond the Horizon," except that it has not as yet become the tool of a popular actor. It was given first by the Provincetown Players, with Charles Gilpin, a Negro, taking the part of the Emperor Jones. It was soon grabbed by a passionate New York audience for a regular theater. "The Emperor Jones" is the most powerful dramatic study I have ever read of the psychology of fear and race superstition.

The Emperor Jones, an escaped North American Negro convict, ruling as emperor over the natives of a little island in the West Indies, patent leather booted, in a "light blue uniform coat, sprayed with brass buttons, heavy gold chevrons on his shoulders, gold braid on the collar, cuffs, etc. His pants are bright red, with a bright blue stripe down the side. There is something not altogether ridiculous about his grandeur. He has a way of carrying it off." He has been a cruel emperor, hoarding wealth by his subjects' sufferings.

A revolt comes as the play opens. Prepared against such a time, he leaves the palace and makes his way through the forest to the place where he has hidden food. The action of the play takes place during the night when, failing to find the food, losing his way in the jungle, he succumbs little by little to the insidious voodoo of the natives' curse upon him. He has always declared that he was charmed, that nothing but a silver bullet could ever kill him. He owns the only silver bullet on the island. With five ordinary bullets it nestles in the barrel of his pearl-handled revolver. As his mania calls before his eyes fantastic visions he shoots the visions into eternity. Finally, whimpering with fear, he shoots the silver bullet just as dawn comes and the natives surround him, stripped of his gay makeup, crazed with superstitious agony. The leader of the natives proudly says, when he is brought in dead: "Lead bullet no kill him. He got um strong charm. I cook um money, make um silver bullet, make um strong charm, too." It is the most amazing exposition of the power of the "charm" over primitive minds that is imaginable.

"The Straw," one of the other plays, is a tuberculosis camp play, lacking—to me—his usual power, but much better than most of the plays one sees. It is to be produced this fall, they say. The other play is called "Diff'rent." It is the dramatization of inhibition, the story of a woman who refused to marry a man because he wasn't "diff'rent" from his fellow townsmen, and who, a generation later, clutched at love and had it torn from her by the man's nephew, a low, lying boy. It is as inevitable in its situations as the thunder after lightning.

"Too Old for Dolls" is the title of a novel which caused much comment in England. It is by Anthony M. Ludovici. The theme of it is the hatred which a more beautiful, more fascinating younger sister engenders in a girl who is still unmarried and past her—to her—fascinating years. It is an awfully good book in one way. It is honest. The child, too old for dolls, young enough to be completely unscrupulous in her allure of men, intoxicated by her power, a mother gallantly clutching youth, insisting that her children call her Edith instead of Mother, the mother's yearning for love, which a clever psychologist interprets as her longing for the love of a grown son—it's all outspoken and honest, a rare quality even in these days of using spades as scalpels. Sometimes I think that we are too frank nowadays to be honest. We are blunt when we meant to be delicate. We use a dull heavy outspokenness when a knife edge of implication is what the situation demands. Mr. Ludovici has managed somehow to be completely honest without giving the impression that he has tried to be. We all admire honesty. It is only obvious, inartistic frankness that sometimes bores us.

Save Tuesday evening for the Whitman celebration at Abraham Lincoln center. To steal the stuff of famous restaurant advertisers, dine and dance in the moonlight of Whitman's memory. Become a member of the Whitman fellowship, whose dues are an interest in the old gray poet and nothing a year, whose qualifications for membership are an interest in the old gray poet and nothing else, whose constitution and bylaws are concentrated in a phrase, "We want Whitman"—the only organization I ever knew that wasn't organized, that just grows spontaneously each year to celebrate the poet's birthday. Come one, come all. Addresses will be given by Francis Neilson and Clarence Darrow. Dr. Morris Lychenherm has charge of the evening.

"The Kingdom Round the Corner" is the first novel which Coningsby Dawson has written since the late unpleasantness which furnished him with limitless copy. It is the story of a group in the after war frenzy which was once the only topic of conversation and which has now given way to such international topics as the Volstead act and the partisanship of judges. The title comes from the philosophical proposition of the hero that just around the corner is the kingdom which every one is praying for—in other words, that the rather scarcely garbed young gentleman who carves initials on hearts and then pins 'em together with an arrow is waiting just round the corner to fix up the world.

Returning from the war as a lieutenant, after enlisting as a Tommy, he finds that the girl he loves and who had promised to marry him as soon as he came back is in love with a general who proves to be his former valet. That his housemaid considers herself engaged to the former "man" only adds to the complications. Mr. Dawson is too good a business man to have his story come out any way but happily, so you needn't refrain from the book for fear it's gloomy.

Strange thing, this book. Now and then there is some exceedingly good writing in it, something that sets you to thinking—hard. You say to yourself, "Maybe this is a big book after all." And then it gets careless. It goes all watery like a custard that suddenly wheys. Anyway, "The Kingdom Round the Corner" is an entertaining story, and perhaps that's all Mr. Dawson intended after his passionate volumes on the war.

"Marge Askinforit," by Barry Pain, that brisk satire on Margot Asquith's autobiography, has reached this country. It is a bald burlesque of the Memoirs, and to any one who read them with memory sitting on his shoulder, immensely amusing. It starts with "I was christened Margarine, of course, but in my own circle I have always been known as Marge. The name is, I am informed, derived from the Latin word margo, meaning the limit. I have always tried to live right up to it." She certainly does in her skittish diary.

"A Chair on the Boulevard" is the title of the latest addition to the uniform Leonard Merrick. In it are twenty of his best short stories, those deft dusty modelings which bear such a semblance to life and yet are wholly art. To my prejudiced mind nothing of Merrick's can have the charm, the fascination of "Conrad in Quest of His Youth." But next to that—his short stories. I shall never forget my introduction to Merrick—these same short stories which are in "A Chair on the Boulevard." In those days a few devotees bought him in that forgotten Tauchnitz edition—and made more by lending the comfortable little red volumes. This volume has an introduction by Neil Lyons, who, if you will take the trouble to search him out, will be a joy to you. Try his "Clara" for that all-gone, bored feeling.

Theodore Maynard, who has been known in these parts by his poetry and his lectures, has elected to make America his home. He has accepted the chair of English literature at the Dominican college of San Rafael, Cal. Mrs. Maynard and his two children have come to America to live. His novel, "The Divine Adventure," is, with Michael Williams' "The High Romance," a story with religion, the search for God, and the finding of Him in Catholicism as the theme. Mr. Maynard is known to the more secular minded as the compiler of a famous group of drinking songs called "A Tankard of Ale."

OUR GIFTS TO MANKIND

by Edward Goldbeck

III.—INDUSTRIAL LIBERTY.

WE saw that we have done our share with regard to religious and political liberty. If the motto, "Noblesse oblige," is right we shall feel in honor bound to follow the same line in future, too. A policy that is founded on a glorious past cannot be entirely mistaken. If past and present and future participate in one great purpose, what a wonderful unity in our national history, in our spiritual life! After having helped so vigorously in endowing mankind with political and religious liberty, wouldn't it be a beautiful idea to do the same for industrial liberty? We can hardly doubt that according to the opinion of the civilized world that is the next, the most desirable and necessary step.

Let us look a little more closely at the idea of "industrial liberty," and ask ourselves what it may mean. For it cannot be denied that the word "liberty" lends itself to many misunderstandings and misinterpretations. Magnificent and inspiring as it is, it is equivocal and iridescent, too. But in our special case we shall have a reliable guide in our past. What we have striven for we shall strive for again, only on another domain of human activity.

Religious liberty is the inevitable result of the theory that every human being has a soul, that this soul is subject to nobody, free, sovereign, and that to "save" it is the highest task set to us for our earthly life. If we accept this principle—and I don't see how it could be gainsaid—we have only to apply it to the conditions which industry has created for all who are working in it. These workers are mostly separated in two classes as capitalists (and their employés, the managers) and the laborers.

Let us begin with the workers who are doing manual work. When, about seventy years ago, the German poet Friedrich Hebbel visited England he heard the laborer mentioned as "hand," and this matter-of-fact expression aroused the indignation of the genius whose father had been a nonskilled laborer himself. (The Russians used to call their serfs "souls," although the nobles certainly did not care much about the immortal part of their subjects. Was it fiendish irony, or was it the unconscious expression of the mysticism which is the most characteristic feature of the Russian?)

The Changing World for the Laborer.

AT the time when English industry was in its first flush of success the laborers were indeed not more than "hands," and the word, crude as it is, stated only a condition of real life. For a long time labor was but a commodity bought and sold on the market. The so-called "free contract" meant freedom to starve, as the supply of labor was always greater than the demand. The reward for the work was a minimum of existence. All day was work, and no time was left for relaxation, for meditation. The "soul" of the workman was not marketable, therefore it did not exist.

We are glad to say that conditions have changed for the better. The hours are shorter, the reward is higher. Lots of laborers are able to save money, many of them have a little house and a little lot. They have pleasures. They are interested in political and social conditions. Their children are getting a better education. The soul of the laborer is an acknowledged fact now. We have not to open a new path any more, we have only to advance on it.

There is still room for improvement, certainly; there will always be. Mankind will never be satisfied with its condition, and it ought not to be, for satisfaction means stagnation. But it is clear that we are on the right way and that the "soul" of the laborer is as safe as it can be made by environing conditions. We may need more of the progress which makes the life of the working man worth living, but we have found the direction.

What is political liberty? According to American principles, it is a government which is founded on the consent of the governed and guarantees to everybody life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. Here we are confronting the great problem of the immediate future. Is it possible to apply these doctrines to industry? It seems desirable, necessary, inevitable, and we conclude that therefore it must be possible.

The industrial régime, as it is, is not founded on the consent of the governed. Who is doubting the fact that referendum would show an overwhelming majority against the present form of individual government? It is autocratic; an autocracy mitigated by the influence of public opinion (which must not be overvalued) and the pressure of the workmen's organizations. The laborers want a voice in the management, they want to direct their own destinies.

Prefer Democratic Blunders to Autocratic Efficiency.

THEIR argument is this: "For centuries kings have ruled their subjects as fathers their children. Sometimes they were kind, sometimes they were cruel, but they always remained in supreme authority. However, the peoples who had been treated like minors for such a long time one day declared themselves to be majors. They compelled the kings to let them participate in their power. Every ruler complained that such an arrangement would make the machine of government much clumsier and that he would be dreadfully handicapped in his foreign policy. Competition (and foreign policy is nothing else) demands secrecy, quick action, unity of action, and these are irreconcilable with publicity, parliamentary debates, and irresponsible opposition. But the nations simply answered that sooner or later the other rulers would have to make the same concessions, and that anyhow they preferred democratic blunders to autocratic efficiency."

There is nothing to be said against this argument as long as we want to stand by our time honored theory that the consent of the governed is necessary to legitimate authority. I, at least, cannot see any reason why this theory should not be applied to industry, too. Moreover, I am absolutely convinced that the laborers have the power to enforce such an application and that wisdom advises us to perform the necessary changes in free coöperation, instead of courting disaster by stubborn resistance.

As soon as the laborers are participants in the management of industry, they will take care of the rest of the program themselves. They will arrange matters so that their right to "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness" will never again be called in doubt. Indeed, we can leave these cares to them.

But another question arises. Does industrial liberty apply to the manual laborer only—doesn't it exist for the owner of the factory or for those of his officials who do the brain work? They are entitled to all the rights mentioned in the declaration of independence, are they not? They are entitled to "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness." You say that nobody is threatening them? Well, it depends.

No Single Class Must Dictate.

AS long as the aim of the "class conscious" masses is only collaboration and coöperation, as long as only those concessions are demanded which may be necessary for the undisturbed progress of our society, they will readily consent to the changes which are deemed necessary for the public good. But will they consent to a dictatorship of the workman? They may be compelled to do so, but that is no real consent, and as long as they refuse this consent, where is—according to our constitutional theory—the legitimate authority of the government?

The laborers will answer that the decision of the majority is the only test and that the majority is on their side. That is possible, but not absolutely sure, and even if it were sure it would only lay open the sore spot of democracy, the suppression of the minorities. If we want to be guided by the past, it seems clear that we must take our stand against the dictatorship of any group or class whatever. There are people who claim that we are living under a dictatorship of "capital" now. If this should be so, there is at least an appeal possible to the decision by majority. But under a dictatorship of the proletariat, no appeal is possible, because the proletariat is the majority. There is no higher instance. The proletariat says: I am the state.

We fought, worked, and suffered for the right of the individual in religion and politics. If we want to adhere to our tradition, we can only do the same in industry. We cannot tyrannize the manual worker and we cannot victimize the brain worker. We cannot degrade the laborer and we cannot suppress the owner. We have to attain a compromise which would enable all "to live, to be free, and to pursue happiness." We have to find a mode of government to which all the governed will give their consent.

Why should not that be possible? For more than a hundred years our political constitution remained absolutely unchallenged. But whether it be possible or not, this much may be stated, that any kind of "dictatorship" is a crime of lese majesty against the American spirit as it manifested itself in our gifts to mankind.

JAIL THREAT IF BRITISH STRIKE IS NOT SETTLED

Lloyd George Warns the Miners and Owners.

BY AMBROSE LAMBERT.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, May 28.—Prime Minister Lloyd George served notice on the striking miners and the mine owners, during separate meetings today, that if they did not end their dispute the government would introduce legislation to enforce settlement. It was remarked that such action might mean sending the miners to jail, whereupon the prime minister said it might mean the owners as well if they stood in the way of settlement.

The prime minister talked straight from the shoulder to both parties, and then handed each the government scheme with the intimation that it must be accepted, or they would have to take the consequences.

Miners Will Take Vote.

The owners decided to refer the proposals to the district organizations with instructions to report on Wednesday. The miners also referred the matter to their district organizations.

The miners will meet on Friday to consider the reports, and the matter is then expected to come to a showdown, as it is expected the extremists and the moderates will fight it out for control. The extremists want to fight it out with the mine owners to a finish, while the moderates are ready to make certain concessions.

On the other hand, the miners' funds are exhausted and their property is mortgaged heavily. For instance, the Yorkshire miners owe £400,000 on food vouchers, while the Lancashire miners owe £500,000.

The Government's Plan.

The government's plan for a permanent settlement follows:

There shall be a national wage board, on which the miners and owners will have equal representation, with a neutral chairman—a tribunal of three—or a single arbitrator.

The decision will be binding for twelve months thereafter, subject to three months' notice from each side.

The national pool will be eliminated from consideration, and wages will be determined upon in each district, and not on a national basis, for which the miners contended.

A Flag for Our President

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Before the last presidential election Mrs. Belle M. Ocker of 6424 Kimbark avenue declared that if a Republican was elected president he would receive a nice present. When President Harding triumphantly entered the White House Mrs. Ocker got out her crocheting needles, her silks, etc., and began work on a giant flag, 4x8 feet. Yesterday it was finished.

Mrs. Ocker also made flags for President Wilson, Theodore Roosevelt Jr., and others.

Mrs. Harding will receive a little flag when the large one is presented to the President.

STANLEY FIELD'S $300,000 DEAL IN LAND ATTACKED

Charging Stanley Field, Lake Bluff and Chicago millionaire, has purchased 120 acres of land, valued at more than $300,000, from squatters, and therefore has no clear title, John J. Melody of Chicago yesterday filed suit for partition against Mr. Field in the Circuit court at Waukegan.

Melody says his father, Patrick, who owned the property, was uneducated and therefore didn't know whether several tenants were paying the taxes or merely rental; that he permitted them to stay there and thus they finally obtained possession of the property as squatters. The original renters are named as John Mines and Martin Alders.

The property includes the Wolff and McNulty estates, the Lake Bluff school site, and Lake Bluff Heights subdivision. The Northwestern railroad's right of way title is not attacked in the bill, but that of the Chicago North Shore and Electric railroad is. The elder Melody died in 1890 and his wife died two years later. The renters paid the taxes and thus acquired title to the property, after which they sold it to Stanley Field, who did not know of the existence of Melody's claims.

ELECTRICAL MEN ROUSED BY NEW CITY FEE PLAN

Oppose W. G. Keith as Appliance "Boss."

A proposed ordinance which would require all types of electrical apparatus "used in the generation, transmission or utilization of electricity" to be approved by W. G. Keith, commissioner of gas and electricity, before being offered for sale in Chicago has caused a stir in the electrical industry. It is reaching even to large manufacturers in the east.

Local concerns selling electrical devices are planning to voice their objections before the council committee on gas, oil and electric light next Thursday.

Electrical Men Mobilize.

"Representatives of manufacturers in New York and other eastern cities will be present and the council chamber will be necessary to hold all those who wish to protest," said Paul A. Westburg, chairman of the electrical subdivision of the Association of Commerce.

"I know of two Chicago concerns handling 4,000 different electrical devices which, under the proposed ordinance, would have to be submitted to Mr. Keith for approval. The fee for such an inspection would be $4,000, a dollar for each device.

"If this ordinance should pass, plumbers and even builders may be called upon to submit their materials to the city hall for approval.

"Manufacturers are interested because, if other cities should take up the plan, the manufacture of standardized electrical equipment would be made impossible."

Arbitrary Powers Given.

The ordinance was forwarded to the council by Mr. Keith and was drawn up in his office. Electrical dealers declare it would give him power to decide what manufacturers' goods may be sold in the city and would permit the use of arbitrary methods and the stifling of competition.

Resolutions protesting against the proposal have been adopted by the Associated Manufacturers of Electrical Supplies and by the American Washing Machine Manufacturers' association.

HOTEL MEN FREE ON LARCENY CHARGE

Charges of larceny against Ignatz Buchbinder, owner of a hotel at 175 West Van Buren street, and his son, Fred Buchbinder, were dismissed for want of prosecution yesterday. They were arrested when Julius Walter of Booneville, Ia., charged them with taking $16,500 in checks, $850 in Liberty bonds, and $150 from his room.

JAPAN HOPES TO END YAP TANGLE WITH AMERICA

TOKIO, May 28.—[By the Associated Press.]—Japan, it is said, has not replied formally to Secretary of State Hughes' note on the mandate question. It will start an exchange of memoranda, it is asserted, to find a way for direct settlement of the question of the island of Yap between Japan and the United States. The opinion is expressed that Japan will offer some form of internationalization of the cables affected.

The Jiji Shimpo thinks the legal matters involved must be settled between America and the allies.

JAPAN'S PROBABLE STAND.

Washington, D. C., May 28.—Proposals from Japan, it was said here today, probably would be on a basis of some kind of international control of cables, arranged without impairing the political control of Japan over Yap.

It was believed Japanese newspaper reference to "legal issues" dealt with the stand of American representatives at the recent communications conference that they preferred to settle once for all questions as to legality of the mandates under which Japan holds possession of Yap and the British occupy Mesopotamia.

It was said if instructions from Tokio were on the way to that effect, however, there was no reason why another effort should not be made to secure a special arrangement for the joint or international operation of the Yap cables, leaving the supreme council to consider the political question involved in the mandates at its leisure.

made better by Flex-a-Tile

All roofs—everywhere—old or new—on cottages or mansions—are made better when covered by Flex-a-Tiles. This is the roofing backed by half a century or felt and roofing manufacturing experience.

Flex-a-Tile Housetops are asphalt shingles or rolls—a wonderful weather-resisting, fire-resisting, durable, beautiful combination of asphalt, slate and felt.

QUALITY at LOW COST

Ordinary roofing costs as much as this wonderful product whose every material and process is controlled in one place.

The well-known Richardson felt from our own mills is saturated and coated with Flex-a-Tile natural asphalt scientifically processed in our refineries, and then the slate chips from our own quarries are rolled into the hot asphalt. This really enamels the surface with a natural colored slate.

FLEX-A-TILE MUST BE RIGHT

In our great mills we have the most delicate instruments te test the felt and asphalt; to insure proper saturation; to guage thickness and keep the weight to standard. Our skilled workmen take pride in keeping up the quality. It must not vary.

You are invited to visit our mills to see how quality, service and appearance are built into Flex-a-Tile Housetops.

"BUD" STILLMAN AIDS IN MOVE TO HALT DIVORCE

Percy Rockefeller Meets Guardian of Guy.

New York, May 28.—[Special.]—Percy A. Rockefeller, in his attempts to halt the Stillman case, has not limited his pleadings with his brother-in-law, James A. Stillman. He has gone to Mrs. Stillman, and with her has held a conference with John E. Mack, the legal guardian of the boy, Guy, who, if actions are indicative of fact, has become Mrs. Stillman's personal counsellor.

Mr. Rockefeller, a director of the National City bank and allied with Mr. Stillman in other financial structures, began to sound out Mrs. Stillman's attitude toward peace about a week ago. Mrs. Stillman, accompanied by James A. Stillman Jr. and the latter's chum, Harold F. McCormick Jr., took Mr. Rockefeller to Poughkeepsie and introduced him to Mr. Mack.

Still Hope for Settlement.

Today it was said that despite Cornelius J. Sullivan's statement and the letter from John B. Stanchfield, which Mrs. Stillman issued by way of contradicting the statement, there is still reason to believe a settlement possible. But there will be no settlement, it was said, until the cooling of Mr. Stillman's ire, generated by his fear that his wife was going into the movies and turning journalist.

Must Prove His Charges.

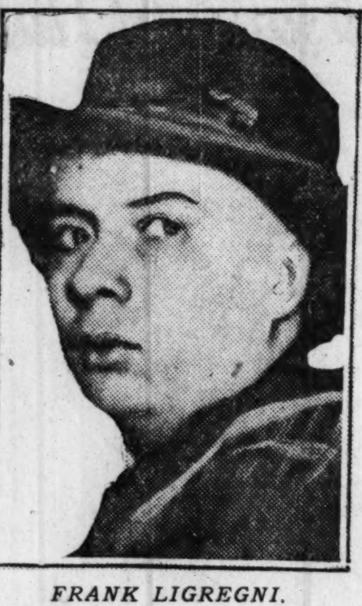
Prominent attorneys, who have consulted precedents and studied New York laws, celebrated for the protection they offer helpless babies involved in litigation, are of the opinion that unless Mr. Stillman can prove that the putative father of "Fifi's" infant really is his father, his allegations to this effect may be made expensive ones.

The mere assertion by a husband that his wife's children are not his is not worth the muscular exertion requisite to signing the charge. Even a pronounced resemblance between the child and the object of his jealous suspicions has little weight in court. Something more decisive and certified is necessary to convince a judge that the stigma of illegitimacy must be borne through life by the baby.

The possibility of Mr. Mack's filing a charge of slander against the former president of the National City bank was a development of the day.

LIFE FOR LIFE

Chicago Chemist Condemned by Jury to Be Hanged for Slaying Teacher-Wife.



FRANK LIGREGNI.

PRESIDENT HOPES SENATE INQUIRY WILL AID ROADS

Washington, D. C., May 28.—[Special.]—Senator Cummins, chairman of the interstate commerce committee, which is investigating the railroad situation, conferred with President Harding on the subject today.

The President has let it be known that he hopes the senate inquiry would lead to results which might relieve the seriousness of the situation, but thus far nothing has come from the committee in the form of recommendations that might lead to business restoration.

While the President and Senator Cummins were conferring, the Plumb Plan league, which is agitating nationalization of the railroads, was engaged in assailing the Cummins investigation, charging that its purpose seemed to be to hammer down railroad workers' wages.

3 Year Old Boy Wanders from Home in Overalls

John Muth, 3 years old, dressed in blue overalls with a red band, wandered away from his home at 4217 North Hermitage avenue yesterday. Johnny's folks are in Boston, and the housekeeper left in care of him is hysterical. Neighbors searched for the flaxen haired boy yesterday, but found no trace of him.

LIGREGNI MUST HANG AS SLAYER OF TEACHER-WIFE

Chemist Near Collapse at Quick Jury Verdict.

Frank Ligregni, the Chicago chemist who shot and killed his wife, Genevieve when she refused to give up teaching and live with him, was convicted of murder yesterday and condemned to be hanged.

A jury before Judge John J. Sullivan returned the death verdict after four hours of deliberation. The jurors reported the slayer was found guilty on the first ballot.

Slayer Pales at Verdict.

Ligregni, a short, swarthy man, 24 years old, turned pale and swayed toward a bailiff when the verdict was announced.

According to the story of the shooting as gathered from witnesses and from statements by the defendant, Ligregni went to the Herman Volkering home, near Bartlett, Ill., where his wife was rooming, on the evening of Dec. 21.

Mrs. Ligregni was teaching in a rural school near Bartlett. She had left her husband some months before and had persistently refused to return.

When Ligregni walked into the Volkering home he carried a Christmas present in one pocket and a revolver in the other.

Five minutes after Ligregni went to his wife's room Mrs. Volkering heard a call for help. Rushing upstairs, she heard Ligregni pleading.

"Will you come back?" he asked his wife.

She refused. Three shots were fired. Mrs. Ligregni fell dead across the threshold.

Chooses Flight to Death.

Ligregni, facing a shotgun in the hands of Herman Volkering Jr., begged to be allowed to shoot himself. He fled when his request was granted.

Attorneys Joseph M. Fiore and Henry M. Tuft for the defense argued that their client was insane and had fired in self-defense. They appealed for a new trial. The motion will be heard on June 11.

FLORENCE MACBETH AND 1,500 CHILDREN SING AT FESTIVAL

BY EDWARD MOORE.

It was a little hard to tell whether Florence Macbeth of the chorus took the stellar position in yesterday afternoon's concert at the Evanston music festival. Miss Macbeth is a known quantity of high value in both opera and concert. The chorus was composed of children, 1,500 of them. Both she and it won the affectionate regard of the audience.

When as many youngsters as this are assembled, school children though they may be, one hears a quality of tone such as is to be discovered nowhere else, and highly charming tone it is. What is more, these children can sing. They followed Osbourne McConathy's baton with an accuracy that was a good lesson to their elders, and they pronounced the English language with surprising clarity.

Give them a song that they like, and you will hear something worth hearing. Musicians of that age are young enough and unsophisticated enough to have honest taste in their music, without reference to the reputation or past achievements of the composers. Your attention is directed to the way they sang Henry Hadley's "Desert Song," which relates how the lion is a-roaring and the vulture is a-soaring, and the African is beating of his drum. The enthusiasm of the singers was projected to the audience, and the song was repeated. There is another lesson here, addressed to supervisors of music.

Miss Macbeth, a charming and genuine artist, sang "Charmant Oiseau," from David's "Perle de Brazil," then appeared with the children in the Bach-Gounod "Ave Maria," also in a group of songs, and many encores. It was a lovely performance, and the audience had an opinion about it. They said it with flowers.

Mr. Stock directed the orchestra through several pieces of the kind he uses in the children's concerts at Orchestra hall, acquiring thereby plentiful evidences of esteem and kindly feeling for himself.

Row Over Patch on Pants Gives Wife Divorce Decree

Lack of a patch on the seat of his trousers started a quarrel in the home of Ira Pease, 3154 North Kedzie avenue, which resulted in Mrs. Clarice Pease being granted a divorce by Judge Torrison yesterday. Mrs. Pease said her husband became enraged one evening last October, when she told him she was tired and would sew the trousers in the morning, and left her.

$5,000,000,000 CONVENTION TO OPEN ON TUESDAY

With the opening of the forty-fourth annual convention of the National Electric Light association at the Hotel Drake, Tuesday morning, Chicago will become for four days the headquarters of the $5,000,000,000 electrical industry of the country.

Executives of practically every electric light and power company in the United States will be here. It is estimated 3,000 delegates will attend, among them the leading electrical geniuses of the world.

Chief among the arrivals today will be the members of the Italian commission on American Railway and Industrial Electrification, who are studying the industry in the United States preliminary to working out a plan for the electrification of 5,000 miles of Italy's railways. Delegations are also expected from England, Canada, and South American republics.

Collector for "Boxing Bill" Is Held by Police

Asserting he was employed as a solicitor for the "Illinois Boxing Fans' association," Earl Sarley, 28, of 617 Oakdale avenue, was held at the detective bureau yesterday while detectives investigated charges that money was being fraudulently obtained by representation that it would be used to support a state boxing bill.

AUTO ROBBERS IN DAYLIGHT HOLDUP.

SPEED on the road—what is it? Does it mean that your motor turns any faster—that it can "inhale" a greater charge—that your car is geared as high as 80 miles an hour?

Never! Speed is absolutely controlled by the road on which you drive—controlled by comfort. For the man with the heavy mile-a-minute car is always at the mercy of ridges and holes which make fast traveling treacherous and riding pleasure an impossibility.

But not with the Holmes! Where others must slow down below 20 miles an hour, this full-sized air-cooled car rides through at 35 or 40—with perfect comfort to all passengers. So the Holmes owner can start on a long drive in competition with any other car in America and comfortably outdistance it, by the end of the day, many miles.

Holmes' clear right to the title, "America's Most Comfortable Car," is founded primarily on a single part—the Aeroduct. For it is the invention of the Aeroduct which for the first time made possible the building of a motor large enough to power this, the only full-sized, roomy air-cooled car—a motor with greater power and "pep" on the hills—a motor guaranteed impossible to over-heat.

Somewhere near you is a road that for comfort's sake you cannot drive over 10 miles an hour. Tell us where that road is and ask to ride alone in the rear seat of a Holmes as we drive it with the speedometer at 25. Make us demonstrate every claim we have made.

Slump Establishes Fixed Lower Level.

New York, May 28.—[Special.]—The downward movement of the cost of living has now been continuous for sufficient time to establish the conclusion that when prices are again stabilized a definitely lower level will have been attained, according to the figures issued monthly by the national industrial conference board.

"It appears that the peak of the rise since 1914 seems definitely to have been passed," the statement says. "Since July, 1920, there has been a marked and fairly constant decline from month to month.

"In July, 1920, the average cost of living was 104.5 per cent above the pre-war level; in May, 1921, it was 65.7 per cent above."

Wage Earner's Expenses.

According to the conference board's figures out of every dollar spent by the average American wage earner's family 43.1 cents is spent for food, 17.7 cents for shelter, 13.2 cents for clothing, 5.6 cents for fuel and light, and 20.4 cents for sundries."

The dollar of July, 1914, would be worth in July, 1920, only 49 cents, but in May, 1921, the dollar was back to 60 cents, according to the board.

"Meats reached their highest cost in the summer of 1920," the statement continues, "when 10 cents' worth of pre-war sirloin steak cost 19 cents and 10 cents' worth of rib roast cost 18 cents. One dollar's worth of potatoes in 1913 would require $6.06 in June, 1920. Since then the average cost of food has decreased 30.6 per cent, but on April 15, 1920, was 52 per cent above the pre-war level.

The Pinching Shoe.

"Clothing prices rose higher than any other major item and reached their peak of 177 per cent in March, 1920. From then descent was rapid until, in the spring of 1921, average clothing prices were only 68 per cent higher than normal.

"Although the advance in the price of shoes has been more obvious than that for many other items, as a matter of fact prices for moderate grades never went so high relatively as prices of a number of other items in the clothing budget. In March, 1920, women's $3 shoes cost $9.28; at the same time men's $3.50 shoes cost $9.43."

Judge Haas Gamblers' Fund Used to Aid Hungry Woman

Judge John F. Haas' "gamblers' fund," which he started to aid needy persons, was augmented when three Negroes were brought before him on a charge of gambling.

"Give me a dollar each," the judge ordered. Then he dismissed the gamblers. In came a woman with a 5 year old daughter. She was hungry. The judge gave out $10, and placed the husband on probation after he said he had stolen to maintain them. Two other women were aided.

CRERAR LIBRARY IS DEDICATED IN BOULEVARD HOME

Open to the Public for Inspection Tomorrow.

Chicago's "monument of books," the John Crerar library of scientific and technical literature, was formally dedicated yesterday in its big new home at the northeast corner of Michigan boulevard and Randolph street. It will be open to the public for inspection only tomorrow, and on Tuesday it will resume its full regular service.

The impressive dedicatory exercises were attended by several hundred persons, including the directors of the institution, members of organizations with which John Crerar, the founder, was associated; officials of the Chicago Public library, the Academy of Science, and the Chicago Georgraphical society.

A Monument of Books.

Shailer Mathews, dean of the University of Chicago Divinity school, gave the principal address, "Building a Monument of Books." Dr. Josiah Sibley, pastor of Second Presbyterian church, which Mr. Crerar attended, read extracts from Mr. Crerar's will, interesting for their bearing on the library. A historical sketch of the library was given by Clement Walker Andrews, the librarian. Thomas Davies Jones, first vice president of the library, pronounced the dedication.

There is no fiction in the library. The searcher after romance and adventure will find there only the more profound romance and adventure of the great workers who dug deep after scientific knowledge and facts and found them and set them down.

445,000 Volumes in Library.

The library is simply a free public reference library of scientific and technical literature. There are 445,000 volumes, and some 300,000 pamphlets and periodicals.

On the fifteenth floor of the new building are the maps, rare books, and bibliography. The big general public reading room and public catalogues are on the fourteenth floor. The cloakroom is on the thirteenth; on the twelfth are the medical and periodical departments. Other floors down to the fifth are given over to the offices of the library, card and index rooms for the workers in the library, and to shelves of books.

Former Boarder Dies of Bullet Fired by Landlord

Baccabella said he was formerly a boarder in the Pasick home. When they met in Chicago they got into a quarrel which resulted in Pasick shooting his former boarder, the police were told. Baccabella refused to tell the cause of the quarrel.

"BOMB" TOWNS TO HERALD CHANUTE FLYING CIRCUS

Every town within 150 miles of Rantoul, Ill., was "bombed" yesterday with programs of events to be held tomorrow at Chanute field in the flying circus. A squadron of twelve big De Haviland airplanes left the air service flying field at dawn and continued the bombing throughout the day. Arriving over the towns, the ships would drift into battle formation, circle the main streets, then descend while the pilots threw out their "bombs." The flying circus will open at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning and will continue until 10 o'clock in the evening. Parachute jumps, bombing of "warships," and stunt flying will thrill the crowds.

Hunt all over the City, or for that matter in any other City, and you can't find a more comfortable or inviting place to dine. One of the finest ventilating systems ever installed draws fresh air from 160 feet above the street level; brings it down into a big, concrete room where it is thoroughly washed and cooled to the just-right temperature of 70 degrees before it enters the restaurant. And every three minutes the air in the restaurant is entirely changed. You breathe nothing but fresh air, thoroughly washed and cooled.

And because you dine "A la North American" (which means all superfluities are eliminated and you are charged only for the food and necessary cost of preparation) the portions are big, (often ample for two) and the prices are far below what any other good restaurant or hotel must charge to include service.

And the North American corner is the most convenient spot in town. It is right in the center of the loop and only a step or two from all prominent down-town shopping places, office buildings and theatres.

Third Reduction of Cornell-Wood-Board

Amounting in all to $11.00 per 1000 square feet within 6 months

Notice of another reduction in the price of Cornell-Wood-Board is being sent by the Cornell Wood Products Co. of Chicago to 10,000 Lumber and Building material dealers throughout America.

This latest cut of $3 per thousand square feet follows reductions of $4 in January and $4 in December—making a total saving of $11.

The increasing demand for Cornell-Wood-Board has disclosed that previous reductions received the public's appreciation of this company's effort to bring down building costs.

This latest reduction should hasten the construction, remodeling and repairing of Summer Cottages, Homes, Stores, Offices and Garages, which can be quickly and economically paneled with "Oatmeal" finished Cornell Board instead of lath and plaster.

UILDERS PONDER PEN SHOP' PLAN TO BREAK TIEUP

Withdraw $1 an Hour Offer Next Tuesday.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

Chicago builders are now considering an "open shop" basis for the present building season, which is hung up higher than a kite by the wage controversy and lockout.

With the season well on and not a hammer tapping on new work, contractors are talking of enrolling working forces without making any trade agreements with the unions in order to finish up the $10,000,000 worth of building construction which is now tied up in various stages of completion. They maintain that an offer of $1 an hour for skilled and 70 cents for common labor in an open field would find workers competing for the jobs.

Union leaders take the ground that the "open shop" movement would fail, because the crafts are almost 100 per cent organized and the individual members will stand pat.

Claim Only 2,000 at Work.

Stagnation in the building industry is such that the two big associations of builders report only 2,000 craftsmen at work out of a probable 45,000 in Chicago. The outlook for a "busted" season this summer and fall, unless the lockout is broken, they declare, would send many of the rank and file of the unions breaking away from their leaders if work were resumed on the reduced wage rate proposed by the employers.

[illegible] M. Craig, secretary of the Building Construction Employers' association, reported yesterday that the agitation for an "open shop" for this summer, at least, is growing fast. "Telephone has been busy all day," he said, "with builders calling up urging an 'open shop' basis. If the tieup lasts much longer, the season of 1921 is going to be knocked into a cocked hat, and they want to finish up the buildings now under way, at any rate."

Open Shop Impends in Other Cities.

Word from Cleveland, where work has been tied up since May 1, was that the contractors' organization notified its subsidiary units that unless new agreements are signed up by Tuesday, the end of May, not to make any agreements for the next seven months at least, but to go ahead on an open basis.

In Pittsburgh, too, the contractors declared that June 1 will see them running on an "open shop" basis, unless agreements are signed up in the next two days. They say that if Wednesday comes without a settlement of the trade dispute, they will sign up no agreements for the next six or eight months, but will open employment bureaus and try to recruit "free lance" forces.

May Withdraw Present Offer.

On Tuesday, the probability is that the two big employers' associations will withdraw their offer of $1 an hour for skilled workers and 70 cents for unskilled. The present rate is $1.25 for skilled and $1 for common. The executive committee of the Building Construction Employers' association is to meet with the associated builders.

According to Mr. Craig, it has not been decided yet how much of a reduction will be sought in the substitute proposal which the builders are expected to make. For weeks they have been talking of pulling back the $1 an hour offer and offering the 1918 scale, which was 87½ cents an hour for bricklayers; 80 cents for carpenters, and 57½ cents for common labor. One group now wants to go back to the 1917 scale, which was on the basis of 75 cents for bricklayers and [illegible]½ cents for common labor.

'KISSING BLONDE MRS. ORTHWEIN'S RIVAL'—BARRY

'Monte Carlo Owner' Tells of Ziegler's Love.

Belief that the state had more than an even chance to convict Mrs. Cora Isabella Orthwein of the slaying of Herbert P. Ziegler was expressed yesterday by Assistant Prosecutor Lloyd Heth following statements made by the "kissing blonde" and John "Jack" Barry, reputed owner of Chicago's "million dollar Monte Carlo."

Barry told how Ziegler met and became interested in Mrs. Charlotte Lewinsky, the "kissing blonde," finally becoming so infatuated he wished to break with Mrs. Orthwein. He said Mrs. Ziegler often "appeared worried because of Ziegler's attentions to the blonde."

"I introduced Ziegler to Mrs. Lewinsky," Barry said. "At that time I was in the habit of going out several times weekly with Mrs. Lewinsky or one of her sisters."

Barry indicated Ziegler had "cut him out" in the rivalry for Mrs. Lewinsky's attentions. On Friday she admitted knowing both Barry and Ziegler and told of Mrs. Orthwein's jealousy.

Both Barry and Mrs. Lewinsky will appear as witnesses when the case goes to trial Tuesday morning.

Barney Lewinsky, husband of the "kissing blonde," begun suit for divorce during the day. Notice was served on her attorney at noon that a cross bill naming Ziegler and two other men would be submitted on Tuesday to Judge Lewis, before whom her suit for separate maintenance comes up for hearing. The action was taken by Attorneys Berkman, Wylie, Reagh & Braun.

Custody of Janet, the 6 year old daughter, who last Thursday revealed her mother as the "kissing blonde," is asked by her father.

ROME
QUALITY

Every genuine De Luxe Bedspring bears the trade-mark on the side rail of the spring. Look for it—it is your guarantee

"DeLuxe" The Bedspring LUXURIOUS

What Causes The Nightmare?

If you are perfectly comfortable you can't have a nightmare—remember that. So be very careful what you eat and how you sleep.

Ordinary coil, woven wire or national springs do not accommodate themselves to the needs of the human anatomy. The body has to assume a strained, unnatural position. Thus, one's sleep is restless and troubled with dreams that make one wake up tired.

The De Luxe Bedspring is constructed scientifically to conform to and support the human body gently, easily, without undue pressure at any point. You can't lie uncomfortably on a De Luxe as it can't sag. A grown-up and a child can lie side by side, each on his own level.

Examine the De Luxe at your dealer's. The more carefully you compare the De Luxe with any spring at any price, the more certainly you will recognize its superior, luxurious comfort. It is always finished in Rome Gray enamel, and on the side rail appears the Rome Quality Trade-Mark, which identifies all Rome products. For wood or metal beds.

SLUGGING CARDS POUNCE ON CUBS TWICE

WILL CARPENTIER PROVE A SECOND JAMES CORBETT?

One Old Timer Predicts Surprise in Big Go.

BY HARRY NEWMAN.

Atlantic City, N. J., May 28.—[Special.]—At the end of the second week of Jack Dempsey's training here we wonder whether Georges Carpentier is as well prepared as we think the champion is. We haven't had much of a chance to observe the Frenchman's condition, but looking at things from this angle, Georges will have to be in his very best mood to hope for an even break with the slashing scrapper who will represent America in the international combat at Jersey City July 2.

On the day we hopped the rattler for this burg we had just taken a peep at Carpentier behind those barbed wire entanglements in Manhasset, and while we had some set notions about the Frenchman at that particular moment, we decided to postpone our convictions.

Sullivan Dopes It Out.

We happened to bump into Jimmy Sullivan just as we left the Carpentier camp. Jimmy fastened the old buttonhole on us, and, dragging us into a corner, proceeded to slip us the low down on the whole works.

We ought to mention right here that Jim is far from being a slouch when it comes picking them right in a big muss, and we have a lot of respect for Jimmy's circulation-getting proclivities. But, and we hope that Jimmy never hears a word about this, Sully, we believe, is dead wrong this time. Sully told us in absolute confidence that the Dempsey-Carpentier scramble would be a repetition of the Sullivan-Corbett fight of years ago, and that a lot of good fellows were going wrong on the dope.

Says Dope Is All Wrong.

"You're all wrong about this big fight," said the genial James to us, without knowing a blessed thing about how we felt in the matter.

"This bird Carpentier will take Jack Dempsey just as sure as you are alive. They did not think Corbett had a chance with Sullivan, did they? You could not make any one believe Sullivan could be beaten. But Corbett grabbed him, didn't he? Well, you just watch it this time," concluded James. "Carpentier will take this fellow Dempsey just as sure as you are alive, and make no mistake about it."

We raced away from Sullivan that day, leaving him with his mouth full of words, and as we pulled into the Dempsey camp that afternoon we found a rugged, bewhiskered, smiling giant whaling the dickens out of a corps of suffering sparring partners.

Georges Doesn't Look His Part.

What an awful contrast! How could that pallid faced French kid whom we had seen sitting at ease on the porch of that ancient homestead in Manhasset hope to compete with this bronze faced American giant? And then our thoughts went back to Jimmy Sullivan and his predictions.

Jimmy may be right. Dope has pulled some queer twists in the fight game. Carpentier may knock Dempsey for a row of tenements and upset the sporting world, just as the handsome young bank clerk, Corbett, crushed the mighty John L. more than a quarter of a century ago, but we do not think that they are parallel situations.

John L. was about through and had to go, while Dempsey and Carpentier are fairly equal, with the odds especially in favor of Dempsey.

Too Early for Predictions.

It is a little early to make predictions, and it would not be fair to pass judgment on Carpentier until he has had a chance to submit his credentials, but the folks down here are going down hook, line, and sinker on Dempsey to cop.

Dempsey got in some fine licks today during his training workouts and boxed several rounds with his sparring partners before a good crowd at the open air arena. Martin Burke, the tall southerner, is anxious to get going with the champion and is hoping that his damaged ear will soon be fixed.

While boxing with Jack Renault in the afternoon Dempsey suffered a cut over the left eye when he collided with the Canuck's head. It did not interfere in any manner with the champion's workout.

LIVELY BALL IS SPOILING GAME, J. EVERS AVERS

Manager Evers of the Cubs is convinced that the ball used this year in the national game is far livelier than before and that it is hurting the game. He believes it should be changed at once.

"Not only is there danger of a pitcher or infielder getting seriously hurt," said John, "but the game is being spoiled because of the way infielders are handling ground balls. They are turning and playing the ball on the side, which is a bad habit. One can't blame them, though, for they are in danger.

"It is almost suicide now to pull the infielders in to cut a run off at the plate. They cannot handle the ball if it is hit right at them. I suppose the fans like to see hitting, but there's too much of it now."

In the Wake of the News

YANKEE GOLFERS IN BRITAIN.

Of excuses and explanations, there are plenty, but why kid ourselves? Frankly, we are disappointed at the result of the British amateur golf championships in which our American players competed.

Admittedly, we expected too much following our success in the matches preceding the title tourney.

The Yankee team was representative, with eight players ranking in the first flight. It was as strong an aggregation as we could expect to send, considering the distance and entailed absence from business of the tourists. Yet not one reached the semi-final round.

The result alone would seem to be conclusive evidence that the British outplayed us, which they did. Let us admit that and congratulate John Bull—who undoubtedly feels immeasurably relieved that he was not beaten at his own game—before considering some other points about the tourney.

Tourney of Upsets.

The Wake refuses to take the defeat too seriously. It was a tourney of upsets. The surviving Britons were comparative strangers to the final brackets. Tolley, last year's champ, retired before a Yank. Just as our best players went down, so did John Ball, Harold Hilton, Edward Blackwell, and Bernard Darwin, veterans of British golf, along with Tolley, 1920 champion, Capt. L. C. Jenkins, 1914 title holder, Robert Harris, Gordon Simpson, Roger Wethead, E. Holderness, and T. D. Armour of the later school.

Why all these upsets? All entrants for the British title play without a qualifying round. Thus all match rounds except the final are at eighteen holes. Anything can happen in eighteen holes as it did to Jones, Evans, and many of the fancied home players.

Our national tourneys, after the qualifying round, are thirty-six holes which affords a better test and allows a good player, getting away poorly, to recover his form.

Look for Solace Here.

Now then for a little solace. Only one American has ever won the British amateur title. That was Walter Travis in 1904. On the other hand, only one Briton ever has won our amateur title. That was Harold Hilton in 1911. Hilton tried to defend the following season and lost. Tolley, after winning the British title last year, came over for our amateur event and failed even to qualify.

We think home players have a marked advantage, both numerically—there were twelve Americans against over 200 Britons—and from better knowing the course. History of international competition seems to prove this.

Our conclusion is that Great Britain probably has more—but not many more—good tournament players than we have, but our first flighters rank wtih their first flighters, other things being equal.

Suggs Hurls No Hit No Run Game, Atlanta Winning, 4-0

CALIFORNIA TEAM LANDS FIRST IN COLLEGIATE MEET

TABLE OF POINTS

California	27½	Yale	9½
Harvard	27	Lafayette	9
Dartmouth	20	Syracuse	8
Penn	18½	Georgetown	5
Stanford	15	Rutgers	4
Cornell	13	Holy Cross	3
Princeton	13	Columbia	1½
Mass. Tech	10	Bowdoin	1
Penn State	10

Cambridge, Mass., May 28.—By the narrow margin of one-half a point, a small band of University of California athletes won a collegiate track classic today. The Pacific coast stars defeated Harvard, 27½ points to 27, in the struggle for first place at the forty-fifth annual intercollegiate games.

A. B. SPRATT.

The victory came at the finish of an afternoon of exceptional competition. When the final contest was started Harvard was leading California by 27 to 24½ points. In order to win the title R. K. Hutchinson, the lone California entrant, had to finish third or better in the 220 yard dash.

Harvard had no survivor in this event, but Hutchinson faced the best of the eastern college sprinters, and finished third.

Last Race a Thriller.

Every spectator in the huge Harvard stadium had his attention focussed on the starting mark in the 220 yard event. The finalists got away to a perfect start. Woodring, the Olympic champion, soon showed his class by taking the lead. Leconey was at his heels. For sixty yards the others were grouped. Near the half way mark, however, Hutchinson began to pull away from this secondary group and California adherents raised a cry. It stopped short when fifty yards from the finish the Californian seemed to falter. But with a great spurt he picked up his speed again.

The shouting was renewed by the Californians and swelled as Hutchinson actually gained on the leaders. At the tape he led Davison, the fourth man, by almost twenty feet.

Harvard men gave unstinted praise to the visitors, saying that the victory was well earned in view of the fact that California had only fourteen entrants against a field of hundreds. It was the first year since 1909, when Harvard won, that a team other than Cornell or Pennsylvania had gained first honors.

Dartmouth Is Third.

The surprise did not end with the showing of Harvard. Dartmouth finished third with 20 points, one and a half points ahead of Pennsylvania, the 1920 champion. Leland Stanford, with a team of only four athletes, bettered its standing of last year and finished fifth with 15 points.

A. B. Sprott, half back on last year's California eleven, placed second in the half mile for the coast team. Summaries:

MIDDIE CREWS TWICE VICTORS IN ROWING REGATTA

Philadelphia, Pa., May 28.—United States Naval Academy crews won two of three races in the seventeenth annual regatta of the American Rowing association, over the mile and 550 yards course on the Schuylkill river today. The navy's Olympic championship crew easily captured first honors for the Steward's cup by defeating the Union Boat club eight of Boston and the University of Pennsylvania, which finished third.

The navy plebes also proved their superiority in the freshman race, crossing the line ahead of Pennsylvania. The Annapolis oarsmen, however, were unable to win the junior varsity eight, which went to Princeton.

Guy Nickall's Yale crew won the eight oared race for 150 pound men by a half length from Pennsylvania. Princeton finished third and Harvard fourth.

Jack Kelly and his cousin, Paul Costello, Olympic champions, representing the Vesper club of this city, won the double sculls race by a length over the Graef brothers of the Crescent club, Philadelphia. Summaries:

Maj. Gen. Bullard in Game with Polo Quartet

New York, May 28—Maj. Gen. R. L. Bullard, 60 years old, will play with the Governor's Island polo team Thursday when it opposes Squadron A, known as the millionaire's team of the New York National guard.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Question.

Which do you prefer, professional or amateur sport?

Where Asked.

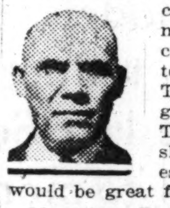
Chicago avenue and Clark street.

The Answers.

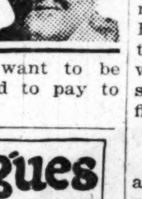
Dr. Saul Soloway, 1122 Marshall Field annex, physician.—I like amateur sports because there is more feeling of true sportsmanship, spirit of rivalry, and it is a great asset to health for people who do not make a life's work of sports. Then there is a thrill when you win—I remember when I received my first medal for a 100 yard dash.

Miss Vera Erengio, 3025 Clifton avenue, telegraph operator.—I like amateur sports best. The boys seem to enjoy playing, and the spectators are more sincere in their applause. There is nothing mechanical about a game played by two sides which do not make it a part of the day's work.

William Tobin, 112 West Chicago avenue, shoe dealer.—I like both of them. As long as they are sports and are on the square, I'm for them. It is a wonderful exercise professionally or from an amateur standpoint—a great building of men.



Oscar Rubenstein, 123 West Chicago avenue, cigar manufacturer.—You can give me the amateur sports every time. They are fine for the growing young men. Then the old folks should take more interest in sports, as it would be great for them.



Miss Alva Perino, 5818 South Park avenue, telegraph operator.—I like the amateur sports best. Many of my friends have been on baseball and football teams, and I have enjoyed seeing them play. When a person sees a professional game, they just want to be amused because they had to pay to get in.

Detroit, Mich., May 28.—[Special.]—Between and during showers today the Tygers clawed the White Sox for soft and tender victims in the fourth of the series, the score being 11 to 3.

HARRY HEILMAN.

Dominick Mulrennan started, but got such a hot welcome that he was taken out before he could retire an enemy, after five safe swats and a pass had scored three runs. Shovel Hodge completed the task, which was hopeless before he could get the side out, as six runs piled up in the first.

Sox Pole Eleven Hits.

The Gleasons did not do much damage to Sutherland, although they peeled off eleven safeties. They were so far behind all the way that all they could do was to take a toe hold and try to wallop the pill out of the park. Collins made three hits and Sheely two.

The Tygers fattened their own averages to the extent of seventeen safe mauls, of which Cobb and Heilman made more than half. Each of those sluggers grabbed four hits and each made two doubles.

First Inning a Nightmare.

That nightmare first inning went something like this: Young walked, Bush singled, Cobb doubled, Veach singled, and Heilman singled. That was all for Mulrennan, with three runs in two, more on the circuit, and nobody gone.

Blue hit to Hodge, who held Veach on third and forced Heilman at second. A wild pitch let Blue to second. Jones also hit to Hodge, who threw home too late to keep Veach from scoring. Ainsmith's long fly to Hooper let Blue register and put Jones on second. Sutherland made the first of his three singles, scoring Jones. Young walked for the second time in the inning opener, but Bush bunted a little fly to Hodge for the third out.

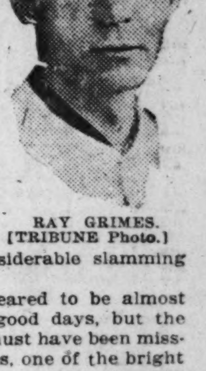
THREE RUN RALLY LANDS FIRST, 8-7, IN CLOSING INNING

Cheeves Victim in Second Combat by 9 to 2.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Unable to stop the slugging of the St. Louis Cardinals, the Cubs were knocked down in both contests of a double header by the Mound City tribe yesterday at the north side. St. Louis raked in the first game after quite a struggle, 8 to 7, and romped home in the second, 9 to 2. They poled seventeen blows off Big Jim Vaughn in the opener and slammed Virgil Cheeves in the second for thirteen, which is considerable slamming for one afternoon.



RAY GRIMES.

Big Vaughn appeared to be almost as fast as in his good days, but the old zip on the ball must have been missing. Young Cheeves, one of the bright prospects of the season, did better, but fell quite helplessly in the closing rounds.

Cubs Pole Two Homers.

Three home run drives featured the matinée and the Cubs got two of them, John L. Sullivan poling one and Grimes one in the first game, while McHenry knocked a four baser in the aftermath. There were plenty of other extra base hits and some singles that were terrific smashes.

Manager Rickey picked Ferdie Schupp to hurl against Vaughn in the opener and the Cubs drove him off the mound in the third round. Young "Paul" Riviere took his place, but lasted only a couple of innings, and Dixie Walker was summoned posthaste. Walker finished with considerable trouble.

The Cubs batted their way to the front in the fifth round and when the eighth was over had a two run lead which looked quite safe, but in the ninth four solid swats off Vaughn, with the aid of one error, gave St. Louis three runs, just enough to win.

Story of Last Sad Round.

Mann opened that attack with an infield swat over second, and after Janvrin had popped out Stock doubled, sending Mann home. Hornsby's single drove Stock in with the tying run, then Schultz popped up and McHenry grounded sharply to Hollocher for what should have been the third out, but Holly threw badly. Lavan followed with a single, sending Hornsby in with the winning run.

In the second game, Jess Haines hurled against Cheeves. The Cards scored one in the third when Fournier tripled and Stock singled. They poled in two in the fourth when Cheeves made the mistake of trying for a force play at second on a bunted ball. He was too late. Hits by Hornsby and Clemons with a sacrifice fly by Lavan did the business. The runs in the later innings weren't needed.

The Cubs scraped in one in the third on Twombly's hit and steal and Kelleher's two bagger. In the sixth, Hollocher's single, Terry's sacrifice and Twombly's single produced the other.

CUB NOTES

One game today will wind up the series with the Cardinals. The Cubs leave right after the game for Pittsburgh, where morning and afternoon games are booked for tomorrow, to be followed by single games Tuesday and Wednesday. None too bright an outlook for pitchers.

John L. Sullivan was quite a hero after knocking a homer in the first game that put the Cubs back in the fight, but against Haines in the second game he was helpless.

Rain in the fourth inning of the first game stopped proceedings for about ten minutes and drove the box patrons back under the stand and the bleacherites into the pavilion.

Jack Fournier was close to getting a homer in the third round of the second game when his drive to right center hit on top of the wall and bounded back on the field. He made three sacks without a slide.

Bill Killefer was back behind the bat working in stylish form until near the end of the second game. He pegged out three fellows, but at the finish allowed four steals, two of which were turned by Fournier when he swiped second and third in the ninth inning.

SOX NOTES

It rained at noon and then again during the preliminary practice, keeping the attendance to a low figure. Play was stopped in the seventh round, but for only a few minutes.

Strunk cut off a line drive from Jones in the fourth with two Tygers on bases and Heilman ran so far he was doubled up before he could get back to second.

Listened like a Sox rally in the fourth when Collins, Hooper, and Falk tore off clean singles before anybody was out, but Sutherland put on the curb and retired Strunk, Sheely, and Yaryan on tall flies.

Manager Gleason sent Pitchers Faber, Hodge, and Kerr back to Chicago tonight to give them a night's rest before the holiday of Monday morning and afternoon.

REDLEGS DEFEAT PIRATES IN TEN INNING TILT, 4-3

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 28.—Cincinnati made it two out of three by taking today's game from Pittsburgh, 4 to 3, in ten innings. Manager George Gibson of the Pittsburgh club said he would protest the game, owing to a decision on a dead ball thrown into the visiting players' bench. Score:

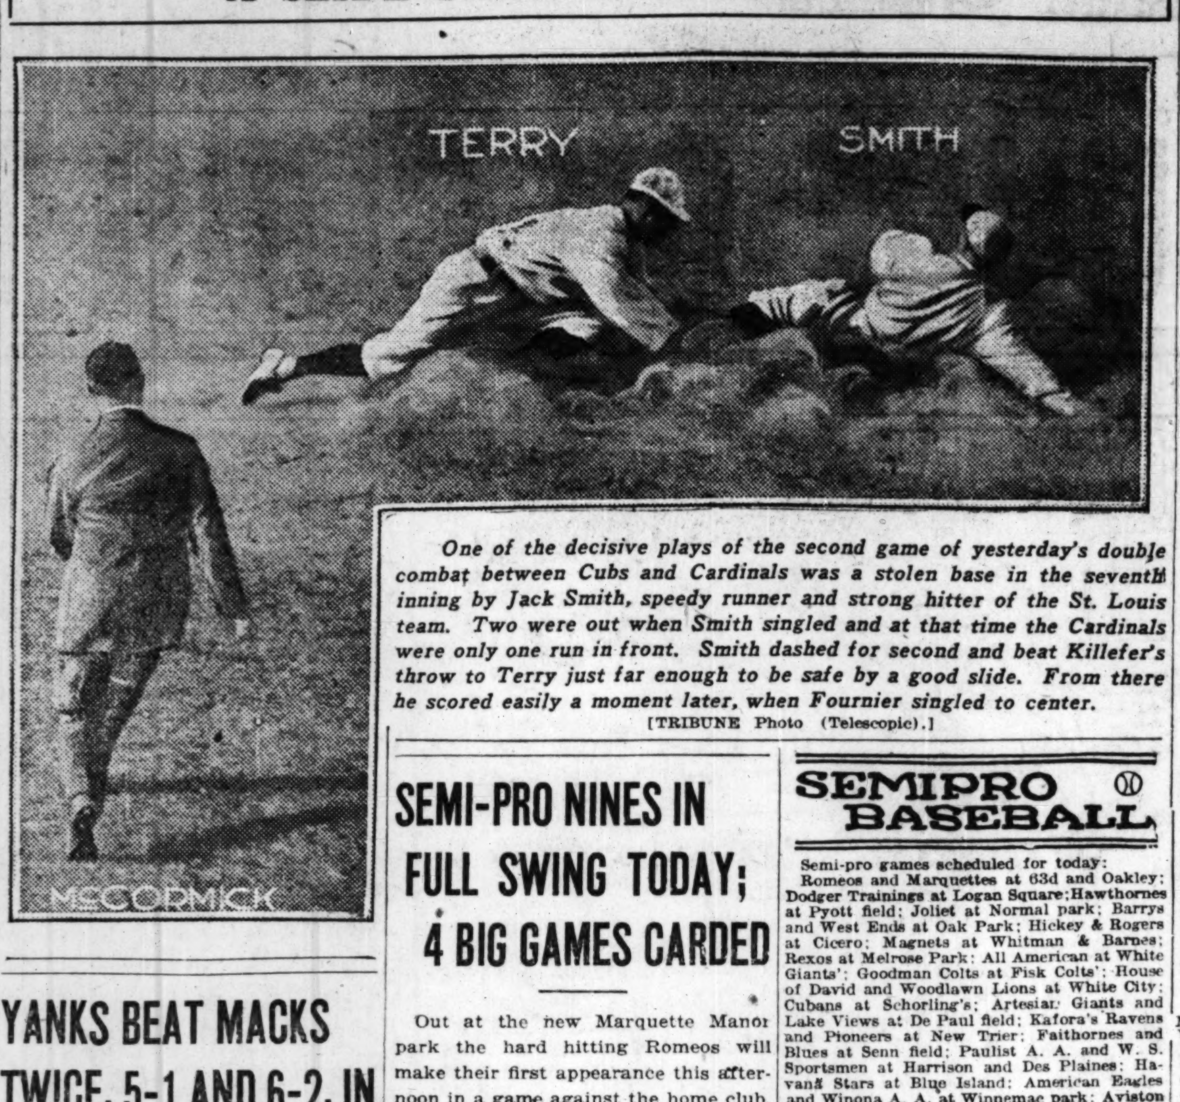
A SLIDE THAT HURT THE CUBS



One of the decisive plays of the second game of yesterday's double combat between Cubs and Cardinals was a stolen base in the seventh inning by Jack Smith, speedy runner and strong hitter of the St. Louis team. Two were out when Smith singled and at that time the Cardinals were only one run in front. Smith dashed for second and beat Killefer's throw to Terry just far enough to be safe by a good slide. From there he scored easily a moment later, when Fournier singled to center.

LINCOLN
MOTOR CARS

It was not especially surprising at the outset that motorists were disposed to regard the representations concerning the LINCOLN car as perhaps a little enthusiastic. With the several fine cars with which they were familiar, it was naturally difficult for them to conceive it possible to evolve a car of even more compelling appeal. And it is quite gratifying that our own estimates of the LINCOLN are abundantly substantiated by the expressions from owners.

I am frank to say that I considered the preliminary advertising of this car to be considerably overdrawn; and perhaps the best way for me to express my feelings about the car, now that I have become the owner of one, is to say that it is in all respects as advertised.

I have owned other cars of similar type, and also one of the best built cars in America, and I have been entirely satisfied with their performance. But nevertheless I find something about the LINCOLN—a certain smoothness, quicker acceleration, easy riding, a correct braking system—which in my mind puts it in a class by itself.

I have previously owned and operated eighteen high grade automobiles, including the best built.

Remarkable claims were made in the preliminary advertising of the LINCOLN. After having owned a LINCOLN touring car for about six months, during which time I have driven it 6,500 miles, part of which has been over some of the roughest roads in California, I want to say that it is absolutely all that the factory and distributors claimed it to be.

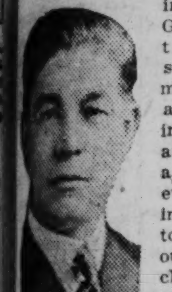
KIDS OR BOXERS, ALL THE SAME TO CARP—JUST PLAY

BY RAY PEARSON.



FRANCOIS DESCHAMPS.

New York, May 28.—[Special.]—A day of work and play was held at the Manhasset training camp of Georges Carpentier today. It started with ten miles of road work at 6:30 o'clock in the morning and finished with a stroll in the evening. In the interim Georges took a stiff workout which included the usual gym stunts and boxed three rounds, two with Paul Journee and one with Italian Joe Gans.

Much importance was attached to the boxing, as it was a "closed day." We were informed the punching was the most strenuous yet, and that the European champion permitted Journee to "sock" him merrily on the chin and body in order that his features may become hardened for the battle with Jack Dempsey.

Kicks Football With Kids.

Georges indulged in two hours of play in the morning, when he visited the Louis Sherry estate in company of a couple sparring partners. They found a bunch of kids there kicking the football and Georges joined the play, kicking the oval around the field. Most of the two hours was taken up in this football kicking. It was announced that tomorrow there will be only a light workout, after which Georges is going on a fishing trip to Port Washington.

At no training camp in the world are there such rigid and unfamiliar training regulations as at Manhasset. The American follower would not understand, and probably would quickly gain the impression that there is something "upstage" about the way things are done at Manhasset. But such is not the case. It is being conducted just as it would be done in France.

Seclusion Has Its Virtues.

Much has been written about the barbed wire barriers which prevent the public from intruding on Carpentier, but that is simply a part of what Deschamps considers absolutely necessary in order that Georges may attain perfect condition. The curious folks who gabble and hang around are a detriment, according to the French idea.

Having roved around Manhasset for the better part of two weeks, sometimes being admitted to the grounds, sometimes not, we have learned many things about this system of training. For instance, seldom is the business of fighting discussed. The object is to keep the mind of Georges off what is to happen July 2.

Deschamps Not to Be Belittled.

This small French colony is a happy family in its exclusiveness. Psychology is an element of great importance for this man Deschamps, who plays a game of wizardry. They do say that he employs hypnotic methods to disconcert opponents of Georges and thereby bring about their defeat. Of course, this produces a smile in America, and we are skeptical.

But, knowing Deschamps does give one an impression which must not be discounted. He exercises a control over Carpentier which is powerful, and while this of course is a taboo subject at the camp, we can imagine Francois in the quiet hours of an evening talking to Georges in a corner of the porch, the two alone.

He probably says to "Carp": "Now, my Georges, we must win. We must always win. The mind is the thing that makes us win. Our mind must work on the mind of the opposition and our intellect being masterful, we triumph."

Mental Conditioning.

Probably not once in the conversation is the word fight mentioned. It is triumph, triumph, triumph. The air smacks of that word at Manhasset, but it carries no sound. It is pervaded by silent confidence. And it is an important part of rigid training. The seclusion from public gaze rests the mind, and M. Deschamps freshens the mind of Georges with confidence in his own way. So much for the matter of mental conditioning.

As for physical conditioning, the Deschamps idea is that training should be play. The fighter should be interested in his work to gain condition, just as much as in a game of cards or any other pleasure. That's why that running path was constructed in the rear of the gymnasium.

DEMPSEY'S CALL FOR A BIG HUSKY SPARRING PARTNER MAY REACH WILLARD OUT IN KANSAS
R. Edgren

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

Amusing features aren't lacking as the Dempsey-Carpentier match draws nearer. One of these is the yap from Milwaukee, wherein the president of the "National Boxing association" threatens to "expel" New Jersey if New Jersey allows Tex Rickard to charge $50 for a ringside seat.

No doubt New Jersey is hiding in the cellar and trembling with fear of this awful fate. Being "expelled" from the "National Boxing association" would ruin poor Jersey's entire future and leave the fair banks of the Hackensack devastated and forlorn. Tex Rickard, looking back in his flight from the ruined land, would be turned to a pillar of salt, like Lot's wife, instead of getting home to Broadway "with the sugar."

The "National Boxing association" might even determine to be severe with Gov. Edwards, and make an example of him by retiring him from office and appointing some "association" member from Milwaukee in his place. It is intimated that Gov. Edwards is already "in bad" with the "association," and that he'd better watch his step and behave, and not associate with sinful promoters and other people who want to sell $50 worth of ringside seat for $50, instead of giving it away for $15, which is the charitable program of the "association."

All this raises the question: "What is the Nation Boxing association?

Answer: "There ain't no such animal."

A Misnomer.

The above answer refers to the alleged "association" in so far as it is "national" in scope or character. From what we are able to discover this "association" started in the minds of a few people who wanted to control boxing, and couldn't.

A "meeting" for the purpose of organizing a "National Boxing association" was held under the favor of the International Sporting club, which has likewise ineffectually tried to control the sport in New York state.

With the same nerve the International has shown on occasions, the self-styled "National Boxing association" formulated a set of rules and regulations and proposed to make them binding on various legally appointed state boxing commissions.

The New York state boxing commission, under Chairman Johnston, flatly threw down the attempt at unofficial interference and refused to recognize any authority but that of the state government.

New Jersey followed New York's example.

I don't know what "authority" the "association" may have appropriated in some of the outlying districts, but without New York, New Jersey, and other boxing centers that followed Mr. Johnston's good example, the "National Boxing association" lacks a very essential characteristic. It isn't national. Its creator gave it hoofs and a tail, but ran out of mud before he got to the head.

They Dodge the Job.

Another funny thing is the trouble Jack Dempsey has been having in getting together a staff of the best heavyweight boxers, to act as sparring partners.

Some of these gentlemen fall right back on their dignity, as suddenly as if they'd slipped on a banana peel, and say they can't consider being sparring partner for Dempsey, as they think they can lick Jack themselves.

That's what Harry Wills said. Wills is the very big, dark lad who used to act as punching bag for Sam Langford until Sam became too old and fat to knock him out any more, and who made his bid for fame by flattening Fred Fulton.

"If you can lick Dempsey come right down to the training camp and do it. Do it every day, until everybody knows you can, and then you'll be regarded as champion. I'll give you $5,000 for your trouble, and you can knock Jack out every day, if you're able to," Manager Kearns once wrote him.

Wills replied that this would be undignified, on the part of a large, husky gent, who expects some day to be a champion. Nossuh! Nothin' doin'.

To the surprise of every one, Kid Norfolk, colored heavy champion, who had been picked as the best man in the country for Dempsey to work with, made a similar reply:

"I think I can lick Dempsey. Why should I demean myself by being a sparring partner to him?"

Norfolk really can fight, and he's game as they make 'em, and clever and fast enough to take care of himself. Funny that he should dodge a daily mixup with the champion. There must be something in Dempsey's wallop that we mere onlookers don't understand, to make those usually tough birds so strong with the alibi stuff.

Will It Work Again?

I have had one letter from a gent who thinks Dempsey should have begun training two or three months ago, and about fifty from people who are worrying over the possibility that he is starting too soon and will be stale by July 2.

Personally, I'll admit that Dempsey is a hard lad to figure. For a week before he fought Willard he gave every evidence of being over the edge, too light, too nervous, ready to "blow up." Did he blow up? I'll say he did—like a bomb! The first minute of Dempsey's fighting was an explosion of nerve and muscular force. It left Willard a complete wreck, needing only a little more work to strip him of the championship. It left Dempsey tired, but still strong enough to finish the job. His system was right, that time.

But suppose, being as extremely on edge for the fight, he isn't able to get at his man in that first furious burst of speed and energy. Will he slow down soon afterward? If the Frenchman is undamaged, and Dempsey goes slow, good night!

Sure of a Fight.

Georges Carpentier, sailing, confident, unworried, but modest.

That's the way his countrymen saw him leave France.

"I will do my best, and I am in very good condition," said Carpentier. "I shall beat Dempsey if I can. If it chances that he defeats me I shall congratulate him, like a sportsman, and if I beat him I have no doubt he will be first to congratulate me."

Dempsey and Carpentier sized each other up carefully when they met to sign articles.

"Georges," said Dempsey, "some time after we fight I'm going over to France for a trip and I'll look you up. No matter how the fight comes out we'll be good friends, hey?"

"Sure," smiled Carpentier. "You must visit me in the country at my home. In the ring we shall fight the best we can, but after we shall be good friends. That is the sport."

Sportsmanship of the Carpentier and Dempsey kind is the best guarantee of a good square, rip roaring battle.

FOR MUSKIETEERS.

THE bait question is one that gives no end of worry to the inexpert muskieteer. It is relatively unimportant. A feeding muskellunge will strike almost anything that is moving in or on the water. If he isn't feeding — that, m'lad, is a brown horse of another color; we will confine our attentions, like sensible fishermen should, to the fish that are feeding, and let the others get hungry.

LARRY ST. JOHN.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

More muskies are caught on spoons, I suppose, than on all other baits put together. This will not apply to every bit of muskie water on the continent—in some regions the black sucker or large minnow is preferred at certain seasons—but straight through the spoon is generally reliable. Also—and this is something that never gets into the records—more muskies are lost on spoons than all other baits put together. The reasons are two: poor hooks and poor rod work on the part of the angler.

The average muskie spoon is equipped with a treble hook decorated with dyed chicken feathers, guinea feathers, and sometimes a wisp of peacock harl. To the uninitiated it looks pretty and efficient. But examine these hooks carefully, especially those that come with the cheaper spoons. Some of them can be bent with the thumb and finger, or will snap off at the bend, from overtempering.

So far as my own outfit is concerned, the best feathered, treble hook on the market is not good enough for me. They pick up trash in the water; the part of the treble hook that is not in the fish supplies leverage to his powerful jaws, and if there is anything that a hooked muskie just dotes on it is leverage; to him it usually means life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

When a muskie gets away from a treble hook it generally happens something like this: The fish is struck and only one barb is set; the fish fights and shakes, enlarging the hole where the hook entered, using the barbs that are not in deeply for leverage; the man at the rod—and sometimes it's the man at the oars—gives the line a little slack; the weight of the spoon and the struggles of the fish throw out the hook, and the traditions of the craft have been preserved; another big one got away.

In no other fishing is slack line so disastrous as in muskieteering. They are awfully hard fishes to hook securely. A muskie has no muscles in his mouth, even the tongue being immovable. But he has immensely powerful jaws, and a very bony mouth, not easily penetrated even by a sharp hook.

With a careful angler at the rod about once out of three times the hook drops out of the muskie's mouth when he is gaffed, showing that the least bit of slack would have meant a lost fish.

From this the novice should not be led to believe that the proper system is to "horse" the fish in instanter. One can let a hooked fish run without giving it slack, if he is ever on the alert, except on those occasions when the fish "rushes" the boat faster than any man can reel; then you have to trust to Lady Luck.

UNFAIR TO CONCEDE JACK VICTORY OVER GEORGES, SAYS MIKE

BY MIKE GIBBONS.
[St. Paul "Phantom."]

New York, May 28.—"It is a bit unfair to Carpentier to declare he has not a chance against Dempsey. The Frenchman is the type of boxer best suited to give the champion a real contest. The great big fellows move so slowly that Dempsey has had an easy time avoiding them and pounding them down. Dempsey must fight differently against a fast opponent. Dempsey is not a hard man to hit. Therefore a good boxer with a punch who can make the most of openings should do very well. Carpentier has a good chance to win."

ATHLETIC FIELDS OPENING UP IN FOREST TRACTS

Forest preserve commissioners are strong for athletics and when an appeal was recently made to them for a string of baseball diamonds, together with tennis courts and half mile cinder tracks, there was little opposition.

Two baseball diamonds already are in use and others will be completed within a few days. Two each will be in the tract known as Thatcher's woods, two at Beverly Hills and one at Burnham. The athletic fields, with their cinder tracts and tennis courts, will be adjacent to the diamonds.

It is more than gratifying for us to note the pride of ownership that Dort owners display in the Dort car.

There are two reasons for this.

Dort owners know the remarkable thrift and durable qualities of the Dort chassis. They know that there is no finer piece of mechanism built at the Dort price.

And to this has been added the new and artistic body types which give, for the first time, truly exquisite lines to a car of the Dort class.

Quite naturally Dort owners feel that they possess a car which denotes the utmost in motor car value.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Led by E. Norton, a sterling prep school athlete, who won one event and finished second in three others, Manual Training of Kansas City yesterday won premier honors in the high school division of the seventeenth annual track and field interscholastic of the University of Chicago. The school from the Jayhawker state scored 22½ points and Norton, who was the individual star of the section, contributed seventeen.

Lake Forest, with Harley Pearce as its ace, won honors in the academy division with 48 points after an interesting struggle with its old rivals, Culver and Shattuck. Pearce scored nineteen of the points credited to his team.

Boyden Wins Three Firsts.

He won the quarter and half mile runs and running broad jump. He took his race in the half mile in 1:59 3-5, and took the broad jump with a leap of 22 feet 4 inches, two of the best performances of the meet.

CHAMPION LOOKS FIT AS A FIDDLE

BIG TEN TRACK ENTRIES

With the announcement of official entries for the twenty-first annual track and field games of the western conference to be held on Stagg field next Saturday, Illinois looms up a strong favorite, with Wisconsin and Notre Dame appearing to have the best chances to defeat Harry Gill's well balanced team.

The graduate managing committee, which will have charge of the meet, is making arrangements to do everything possible to carry the meet into the stands. Programs giving the names of all athletes and their numbers will be distributed free of charge. Results of each event will be announced promptly.

SUZANNE AND MATE BEAT YANKEE WOMEN IN TENNIS AT PARIS

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, May 27.—William Tilden played a fine exhibition match at the opening of the international hard court tennis tourney at Saint Cloud today, reaching 10 all with the new French champion, Jean Samazeulith, when the match was called owing to lack of time.

Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen and Mme. Golding ousted Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory and Edith Sigourney of America in the first round of the tournament women's doubles, 6—4, 6—1. Mme. Golding supported Mlle. Lenglen well and Miss Sigourney played the opening set well, but fell down lamentably in the second, leaving Mrs. Mallory to carry the burden.

J. E. Jones defeated M. Lammiens of Belgium, 6—1, 6—4, 6—1, and A. E. Jones defeated Cousin of France, 6—0, 6—3, 7—5, in a fine match of the opening round in singles. Tomorrow will be a big day in the tournament, Tilden meeing the Spanish champion, Flauquer; Mlle. Lenglen meets Mme. Deborman and Mrs. Mallory meets Mlle. Amblard in women's singles, and Tilden and young Jones meet Samazeulih and Blanchy in men's doubles. The Americans are doubtful if Tilden will be able to carry Jones through to victory over Samazeulih, who displayed remarkable form this afternoon.

Horemans to Play Match with Taylor Wednesday

Edouard Horemans, the Belgian cue expert, will play one more match in Chicago before sailing for home. He will play Al Taylor of Ann Arbor, Wednesday afternoon and night.

DRY SONGS SUNG AT ANNIVERSARY FOR EDGEWATER

BY JOE DAVIS.

It is ten years since the Edgewater Golf club moved from its sand dune course near the lake to its present location, and last night the tenth anniversary of the present clubhouse was celebrated dryly.

Former Presidents William J. MacDonald, G. Malcom McConnell, Harry N. Hosick, W. C. Gillette, and Herbert A. Lundahl were the guests of honor, most of them having been in office before the period of the great drought.

"Chick" Evans a Member.

President Paul C. Loeber recounted the glories of Edgewater, not forgetting its national champion, "Chick" Evans, who now is priming himself to win the amateur championship of France, which he once held.

Possibly Edgewater's cup of joy might have been fuller last night had the members been able to celebrate the winning of the British amateur championship by Chick, but, like John L. Sullivan, they had to console themselves with the fact he was defeated by an American.

Low Net to Young.

The afternoon events brought out a large crowd. W. C. Young, 84—16—68, had low net in the handicap. V. A. Moulton and J. R. Murphy tying with 70's for second place. Young's score gave him the lead in the first half of the 36 hole event, which will be finished tomorrow.

EDGEBROOK.

As a result of the medal round in the Sports and Pastimes trophy, the pairings for the first round are: F. T. Baker and [illegible] Weber, C. U. Stonecipher and A. P. [illegible], F. C. Eddington and J. Taylor, A. [illegible] and O. N. Wakefield, C. M. Carpenter and L. C. Freeman, S. E. Cawthorn and E. S. [illegible], A. Sweet and J. P. Tully, E. L. Davis and C. D. Crowder.

C. U. Stonecipher and F. C. Baker tied for the H. S. Jackson prize. Winners in the play for the golf committee trophy were [illegible], Hacker, Caldwell and Davies.

INDIAN HILL.

N. Landon Hoyt landed first prize in the handicap against par, his score of 77 enabling him to finish 4 up. Other leaders were: I. H. Harrison, 86, even; E. M. [illegible], 2 down; C. D. Dallas, 94, 2 down; A. C. Dixon, 93, 3 down; J. C. Darling, [illegible], 3 down; D. C. Thomas, 93, 4 down.

GLEN OAK.

R&V Knight

(FORMERLY MOLINE-KNIGHT)

The R&V Knight Engine does not wear out. From our Chicago branch, established in June 1907, we have sold our Knight-motored cars since 1913. We believe that fully 85 per cent of all of those to whom we have sold Knight motored cars from our Chicago branch since 1913, are still using Knight cars.

It is our confident belief that R&V Knight cars sold this year will still be serving someone satisfactorily in 1928—the engine improves with use, and the operating expenses decline to the point where they make it the most economical to own. Because of its long life its second-hand value is always high.

CITIZENS URGED TO FIGHT BOOST IN CITY TAXES

Civic Federation Warns of Pending Bills.

The Civic federation issued a special bulletin yesterday urging a curbing of tax increases. Its heading reads:

"Keep down tax rates for all purposes. Get the word to your assemblyman. Last chance. Act now and save money."

It continues: "Taxes and, indirectly, rents are threatened with still greater increases. Write at once—or, better still, if possible, talk—to your senator and three representatives at Springfield, urging them to cut the increased tax rate requested by every taxing body, including the schools, to the lowest figure consistent with proper public service.

Opposes School Bill.

"Tell them to strike from house bill No. 348 the provision for a 150 per cent increase in the school tax rate by referendum, at the whim of the school board. Ask them to refuse to vote for the passage of any measure which carries an excessive increase.

"Bills threatening a total increase for Chicago of $2.50 per $100 assessed valuation are now moving actively in the house and the senate."

"This means that a man whose home has been valued by the assessors at $4,000 would pay $50 more in 1922 than he pays this year. A man whose tax bill is $100 would pay at least $146 next year."

Says Schools Ask Too Much.

The bulletin goes on:

"There is no time to lose. If your senator and representatives will insist upon reductions in requested tax increases wherever posible, the increase in the direct tax upon your home, which the owner pays and which the landlord must add to the tenant's rent—perhaps with interest—will not be so great, and your burden will be easier to bear."

The federation discusses the requests for school taxes in detail. It starts by saying:

"The requested increase for Chicago schools is the biggest increase remaining to be acted upon. It is the hardest problem for your senator and representatives to meet. The schools need more money, but they are asking much more money than they need."

Teachers Imposed Upon.

Regarding the work of the teachers at Springfield, the bulletin says:

"It is quite evident that the teachers have been imposed upon and needlessly alarmed by the politicians. Teachers have written thousands of letters to the senators and representatives. Many of them have been authorized to travel to Springfield each week, and it would appear that they have been made to believe that unless the schools get every cent that the authorities have seen fit to ask, the schools will be closed, or hours reduced, or teachers' salaries cut.

"Of course, no good citizen wants to have any of these things happen. And they will not happen."

Calls Threats Unwarranted.

More than for their own salaries, the federation says, "the teachers have been even more alarmed by unwarranted threats against the educational advantages of the school children, for whose welfare the average teacher, it is safe to say, feels more concern than for her own salary. These threats, too, have no foundation, provided the amount of money which every taxpayer is glad to pay for educational purposes, is properly expended."

EVELYN ANDERSON HELPS ENTERTAIN WOUNDED HEROES

Miss Evelyn Anderson, 3826 Gladys avenue, was one of the hostesses Friday night at the Edgewater Beach hotel at a dinner-dance given by the Khaki and Blue club under the auspices of the Daughters of the Republic.

MISS EVELYN ANDERSON.

Of the several hundred guests entertained a great number were wounded soldiers from the United States army hospital at 47th street and Drexel boulevard and from Fort Sheridan.

Miss Anderson is a teacher in Hayes public school, the daughter of John J. Anderson, president of the John J. Anderson Lumber company, in the Stock Exchange building. By mistake a few days ago her picture was printed as that of Mrs. John B. De Voney.

U. of C. Alumni to Hold Big Reunion on Campus

On Tuesday alumni of the University of Chicago will receive a large circular inviting them to come to the reunion on the campus on June 10 to June 14. The reunion this year will be unusually elaborate. The main events will be a street dance at night, a big parade and pageant, a baseball game with Waseda, Japan, and then another with the team of 1896, and the alumni picnic. Every class since 1876 is aiding to make the affair a success. George R. Shaeffer, '06, is general chairman.

EVENING UP ON GRAINS KEEPS RANGE MODERATE

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

A large part of the trading in grains yesterday was in evening up contracts for the two holidays, Monday being Memorial day and a legal holiday. Indications of a large run of grain of from 1,700 to 2,000 cars of all kinds, mainly wheat, corn and oats, kept operators from getting too bullish, yet there was no great selling pressure and values held within a moderate range. At the last May wheat was 2¾c and July ¼c higher. Corn showed the most strength. Oats finished ½c lower to ⅛@¼c higher, rye ¼c lower to ¼c higher, and barley was ¾ to 1c higher.

The feature of the week was the big advance and reaction in wheat. May, after a range of nearly 25c, finished 3½c higher, while July was 4c higher from the close of a week ago. Corn gained 1¼@3½c, oats lost ½c, rye is 9c higher for May and 1¼@2¾c lower ~~on~~ other months, and barley ¼c lower to 1½c higher. Lard lost 10@17½c and short ribs 25@35c for the week.

Easier Tone in Wheat.

Prospects of cooler weather and occasional showers for the week, combined with good receipts, created a rather easy feeling in the wheat market, yet offerings were not heavy and were fairly absorbed. Seaboard houses bought July and there were give-ups on purchases for the seaboard, indicating a fair export business, although no figures were given out. Crop news was not materially changed from that on previous days. From Ohio came reports that wheat is heading short. No rain was reported in the southwest. Buying of July wheat was headed by half a dozen of the big commission houses, while the selling on the advance was by another set, the northwest being well represented. The range was 3¼, with $1.29 the top and the close $1.28@1.28¼.

Trade in May wheat was light, with not more than 250,000 bu handled in all at a range of $1.65@1.69½, prices changing 1c between trades at times. The finish was $1.69½. Cash houses were the principal sellers of May.

Corn Has Strong Undertone.

Corn had a stronger undertone despite the good receipts, 383 cars, with indications of 1,000 to 1,100 cars on Tuesday. The market had good support from leading cash interests, while the selling was by hedgers and speculators. May was up to 63⅞c and closed near the top. It was 1⅜c under July and it was regarded as relatively cheaper to buy the May and get the cash grain. A large business was on in buying July and selling September for a leading cash house at 1½ to 1¾c difference.

Light early offerings of oats, with a little local buying, made the highest prices, with July up to 41⅜c and September to 43c, with a decline of 1c in the latter on selling by a few of the big houses, Lewis leading, while on the break he turned to the buying side and the close was at 42⅜ to 42½c. Cash houses bought July and sold September at 1½c difference, while speculators did the reverse.

Provisions were bought by commission houses and sold by packers. Trade was not large, and lard closed unchanged to 7½c higher and short ribs were 5@7½c lower. Hog supplies were ample. The west had 592,000 for the week, against 496,000 the previous week and 629,000 last year. Shipments of lard and all meats for the week were 34,000,000 lbs less than last year. Prices follow:

Marketing of wheat and corn has increased, especially the latter. Chicago received 3,740,000 bu of corn last week, an increase of 2,644,000 bu, and 2,743,000 bu more than last year. Wheat receipts were 317,000 bu, a loss of 16,000 bu for the week, and 29,000 bu over last year, while the run of oats, 1,648,000 bu, increased 723,000 bu for the week and 109,000 bu over last year. The total receipts were nearly 50 per cent above the average.

Primary receipts of wheat and corn were the largest at this time in over five years, with a gain of 1,074,000 bu wheat and 3,569,000 bu corn for the week, with heavy gains over last year, and a total movement of all grains of 25 per cent above the average. PRODUCE MARKETS

Strawberries are selling at the lowest of the year. Supplies were large and condition unsatisfactory, even the Michigan berries being in poor condition and range at 50c to $2.00 for 16 quart cases, while from other sections sales were at $2.00@4.00 for 24 quarts, with some fancy Missouris higher.

Red raspberries from Illinois brought $8.00@9.00 for 24 pints. Peaches are coming in more freely from Georgia and bring $1.25@1.50 for 6 basket crates.

New potatoes were picked up more freely and the decline and prices seem to be checked for the time being. Texas triumphs sold at $2.00@2.40 and Louisiana white stock at $1.50@1.75 per 100 lbs in car lots. Old potatoes were picked up more freely, the market being firmer at 50@65c per 100 lbs for round white in car lots. Arrivals Saturday were 55 cars, and 237 cars were on team track.

DRY GOODS MARKETS.

NEW YORK, May 28.—Wholesale dry goods markets generally were closed today, traders getting an early start on the extra vacation Monday. Hesitation in importing engagements became general, because of the uncertainty regarding values that would be imposed on incoming merchandise under the new tariff law.

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

There will be no grain markets open in the United States on Monday, all exchanges being closed.

With 200 to 300 cars of wheat expected here on Monday and 1,700 to 2,000 cars of all grain, the state grain inspectors in Chicago will work on Monday so that the grain can be delivered on May contracts. The movement of grain at this season is the heaviest in recent years, especially of corn and oats. A large part of the receipts for the next few days will apply on future contracts and not more than 25 per cent is expected to be available in the open market. One house bought 40,000 bu of wheat in the sample market yesterday and sold the May.

Trade sentiment on Saturday was mixed. A number of the large operators were bearish on wheat and friendly to corn. Those who believe in wheat do not expect cash premiums to drop to the July level and look for the July to strengthen and work closer to the cash prices. There was 31c difference between May and July wheat yesterday. On the basis of recent differences as compared with May, cash wheat at 10c over the July would not be out of line.

Those who claim that no deliveries are made on future contract had better read this. Deliveries of wheat on May contracts so far this month aggregate 119,000 bu, corn 2,164,000 bu, oats 8,292,000 bu, rye, 151,000 bu. In the provision line there was 10,000 brls pork, 18,000,000 lbs of lard, and 4,400,000 lbs of short ribs. Sales of wheat for the 28 days in May were 441,000 bu, corn 6,740,000 bu, and oats 4,287,000 bu, making 11,027,000 bu of wheat and corn sold for shipment up to Saturday night.

Wheat deliveries on May contracts yesterday at St. Louis were 5,000 bu and at Kansas City were 15,000 bu wheat and 50,000 bu oats. At Winnipeg, wheat, 119,000 bu; oats, 53,000 bu; rye, 4,000 bu; barley, 6,000 bu; flaxseed, 12,000 bu.

New York Banks Overcome Deficit in Legal Reserves

The weekly statement of the New York associated banks shows a considerable decrease in loans and a large increase in deposits. As the result of an increase in legal reserves of $12,226,160 the preceding week's deficit of $424,930 was overcome and an excess of $11,801,230 established. The increase in reserves was the result of the member banks increasing their reserves at the Federal Reserve bank by $15,652,000. Loans declined $35,643,000. Net demand deposits expanded $21,715,000, but time deposits receded $1,678,000. The figures follow:

Sterling Exchange Rate Recovers Part of Loss

New York, May 28.—[Special.]—Sterling exchange today recovered part of its exceptionally rapid decline of the previous day, rising at one time to $3.89½, as compared with $3.87⅞ at Friday's closing and with $3.[illegible]½, the low point of Friday's decline. The business done was hardly more than nominal.

In so far as the week's declines arose solely from the German operations, it was natural that the selling should have slackened today. The international banking houses professed perplexity regarding the actual purpose and machinery of the transfer of funds to New York or its ultimate effect on the exchange market. Germany is drawing bills on neutral markets, but the temporary transfer of the funds to New York, presumably because of a stronger foreign exchange market on which to realize, introduces novel circumstances.

1921 Is Rewarding Fighters

C., B. & Q. REPORT AGAIN PROVES ITS EARNING ABILITY

BY O. A. MATHER.

In a year that probably presented as many difficulties as the railroads of the country ever had to face, the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy again demonstrated its earning capacity. The annual report for the year ended Dec. 31, 1920, shows net income of $22,924,363, equivalent to 20.68 per cent on the $110,839,100 capital stock then outstanding, compared with net income of $23,542,470, equivalent to 21.24 per cent on the stock, in 1919.

On the basis of actual operating results net income was equivalent to 5.67 per cent on the stock, but the additional returns due to federal compensation and guaranty raised the percentage to over 20. After paying dividends of 8 per cent and setting aside sinking funds the balance carried to surplus was $13,826,158, compared with $14,172,086 in 1919. Total surplus on Dec. 31 stood at $156,661,990.

Capital Now $170,839,000.

By the recent declaration of a $60,000,000 stock dividend the capital stock now stands at $170,839,100. Last year's net income would be equivalent to 13.41 per cent on the increased capital stock. When a 5 per cent dividend was declared by the Burlington last week, instead of the regular quarterly 2 per cent, it was intimated it would be the policy of the directorate to increase the annual dividend rate to 10 per cent. Such a disbursement would slightly more than provide for the interest charges on the $230,000,000 of joint 6½ per cent bonds recently floated by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific roads, which own [illegible] per cent of the Burlington stock, and would strengthen the treasuries of those companies.

Total operating revenues for 1920 amounted to $186,872,918, which compares with $154,011,437 in the preceding year, an increase of $32,861,480, or 21.34 per cent.

Freight Brings Gain in Revenue.

The gain in revenues was principally in freight, and was due to the large volume of traffic and the increased rates effective Sept. 1 last. The increase was distributed as follows:

		Per ct.
Freight rev.	$24,626,944.77	— 23.01
Passenger rev.	1,122,980.22	— 3.18

Root-Vandervoort Shows Deficit.

As the result of inventory depreciation and dullness in the automobile industry, the annual report of the Root and Vandervoort corporation for the year ended Dec. 31, 1920, shows a deficit of $572,043, compared with net income of $392,241 in 1919. Of the 1920 loss, $496,822 resulted from the writing down of inventories, while other items bring the total charged off to $728,569. The proposed sale of the corporation's engine business to the Moline Plow company was abandoned. The income account with comparisons follows:

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

Extreme weakness characterized practically the entire unlisted securities market. Among the motor stocks Paige-Detroit declined to a close of 14¾ bid, 15¼ asked, representing a loss of three points. Continental and Packard were each off one-half at 6 and 8⅝ respectively, while Ford of Canada sold down to 240@242. Reo closed at 17¾ and McCord common gradually eased off to a close of 6¾.

Trading in the miscellaneous issues was generally quiet. Gossard was traded in between 31½ and 32½. Moline Plow preferred declined to sales at 24. Butler Brothers ranged between 35 and 33¼, closing at 33@33⅞. Kellogg Switchboard and Supply reacted to sales at 39, closing at 37½@39. Glidden common was quiet at 14½@16½. United States Gypsum common steadied at 17@18¾. The Goodyear issues sold off at the close, preferred declining from 29 to sales at 25¼ and the common to 7½ bid, 8 asked.

The flotation of the new French loan had an adverse effect on the local bond market. Armour and Swift 7s lost a point and a half in selling at 94¼@94½. Morris 7½s declined from 97½ to a close of 93¾ bid, 96½ asked. National Leather 8s were an exception, being unchanged at 94¾@95½. Morris issues, 1922 and 1923, were easier, the former closing at 96¾@97¼ and the latter at 96¼@96¾. Goodyear 8s declined to sales at 99¾, while the Sinclairs reacted one and a half points to 92¼@92¾. Local tractions continued to seek lower levels. Chicago City and Connecting 5s, which have been very active around 37, closed at 33@35. Chicago Railways closed at 63¼@64, and the Chicago City Railways at 65@ 65½. Chicago Railways Series A and B both declined a point to 45@47 and 33@35. The only feature of the public utility group was a decline of a half point in Peoples Gas 5s.

Use Care in Buying Rail Bonds.

It is necessary to use extreme caution just now in buying bonds of the smaller railways. The low prices at which some of them are offered should be taken as a warning rather than an inducement.

Small investors have been attracted recently by certain "seasoned bonds with first mortgage security," selling on a 9 or 10 per cent income basis. The description sounds attractive. The weak point is that the roads referred to earned little during the period of government operation, the "standard return" paying the interest charges. Now there is no standard return and earnings are still poor. If the companies cannot earn enough real money to pay interest, they must go into bankruptcy.

The railway labor board has announced wage reductions, to take effect soon. Just when they will actually be in force, and just how much effect they will have on net earnings, are still matters of hope and not of certainty. If any one invests in such bonds at the present time, trusting in the coming readjustment, he is speculating. If everything turns out as hoped, the bonds will be restored to a sound basis, and he will profit; but if there is too long a delay, some roads may fail before relief arrives. What with deferred maintenance and lack of working capital, the weaker lines are in serious straits. The stronger ones, of course, can use makeshifts for a long time yet.

Inland Steel.

S. C., Mount Carroll, Ill.—The Inland Steel company has been operating for many years, making large earnings and paying large dividends. In 1920 it earned 16¼ per cent on $25,175,175, compared with 20 in 1919. During the war earnings were enormous. This year the dividend rate was reduced from 75 cents quarterly to 25 cents. The stock was changed from $100 to $25 par early last year.

The downturn in hog values which started opening day of the week was checked yesterday, the average price moving up a few cents to $7.60, against $8.65 the previous Saturday and $14.55 a year ago.

Competition between packers and eastern shippers was brisk at the close of the week, as there is a good profit in hogs at prevailing prices for product. Best lightweights sold at $7.90, being $4.00 lower than high point of the year in March.

While receipts of hogs were largest in three months, last week's estimated average weight at 236 lbs was second lightest since February, against 240 lbs previous week, 237 lbs a year ago, and 232 lbs for the ten year average.

Late Cattle Trade Good.

Closing cattle trade was best of the week, due to small supplies and the fact that Monday's holiday will prevent shippers and exports from filling urgent orders. Quality of cattle during the week was below the recent standard, comparatively few selling above $8.75.

Last week's average price of aged sheep, partly owing to poorer quality, dropped to $4.20, the lowest of the year. The average price of lambs at $11.30 showed 40c decline compared with previous week.

No Market Monday.

Monday, May 30, is a holiday at the stockyards and there will be no session of the market. Stock arriving that day will be counted in with Tuesday's receipts, which are estimated at 18,000 cattle, 38,000 hogs, and 15,000 sheep. Next week's receipts are estimated at 44,000 cattle, 140,000 hogs, and 62,000 sheep.

Next Tuesday's probable hog receipts are estimated at 30,000 to 55,000. W. H. Overman and G. Brittain marked 30,000, John T. Brown, 35,000; E. R. Gentry, 37,000; G. M. Nicoll, 39,000; R. W. Oake, 41,000; F. W. Waddell, 43,000; and A. Wescott 55,000.

WESTWARD THE COURSE OF EMPIRE TAKES ITS WAY

Man has traveled westward, in accordance with a universal law governing civilisation for centuries, to PROGRESS—to participate in greater opportunities—to seek improvement

And Westward a Host of Investors Wend THEIR Way!

JUST as mighty empires have yielded to progress, so must the custom that formerly linked investments exclusively with one section of the city.

Today a host of investors know the choicest investment opportunities are not always found on La Salle Street. Their search for something better has led them westward—to Madison and Kedzie. What they have secured here has convinced them, and a constantly increasing number of other investors, that it pays to go a little "off the beaten path."

Literally thousands all over Chicago and surrounding states have learned this, including bankers, insurance company presidents and other prominent business and professional people.

You who have not as yet learned what we can do for you in your investments, come westward to the Madison & Kedzie State Bank the next time you have funds to invest!

A Foundry That Fits
And how we made it do so

.... Company,
.................., Michigan.

Milwaukee, Wisconsin,
May 2, 1921.

Gentlemen:

Frank D. Chase, Inc., Chicago, informs us that you are considering engaging them to make a survey of your plant with recommendations for improvements, and suggests that we tell you briefly of our experience with and estimate of their organization.

Our plant is one which has grown steadily during the past 21 years, and greater working area was obtained by the gradual acquisition of building after building until it became a rather conglomerate group of relatively small areas without the most satisfactory interrelation. We may have been somewhat too conservative in the introduction of modern equipment and labor saving devices and methods. At any rate, some eight months ago we decided to attempt a rather complete reorganization of our works, including especially the equipment layout and shop methods.

We made numerous trips about the country studying the best methods in steel foundry practice and acquired a great deal of information which we wished to put into use. After giving a great deal of thought to the matter, we began to realize that it was a more difficult thing to apply these various ideas to our existing layout than we had at first thought. We felt that we should have a definite, comprehensive and progressive plan for the introduction of the proposed changes, that all the various individual ideas should be crystallized and harmonized into a unit scheme for economical production and future growth.

For this purpose we engaged the services of Frank D. Chase, Inc. The task was a difficult one, as you might readily infer from a glance at the view of our plant shown on the enclosed folder, but we feel that they have done the thing we wished in a very satisfactory manner indeed. Our approval of the plans which they furnished us is indicated by the construction work which is already under way. Their foundry expert is a thoroughly competent man, and his suggestions alone have been worth a great deal.

Trusting that this letter may assist you in coming to a decision we remain,

Yours truly,
GEO. H. SMITH STEEL CASTING CO.

Is there a better car than the Paige Six-66 under $5,000?

Today all eyes are on the Paige Six-66. Since January 21st this car has received unusual attention from the motoring world.

That was the date—January 21st—when the Paige "Daytona" Six-66 model broke the world's stock chassis record by traveling at a pace of 102.8 miles per hour.

It was a marvelous victory, but merely a beginning. For with this speed record incontestably established, Paige Six-66 models were put to every test that could prove the mettle of a champion.

Paige owners and dealers immediately went after local records. In more than a hundred cities throughout the Nation, these mighty cars competed against local hill-climbing records and surpassed them with ease.

These were just plain tests of stock models such as thousands of owners are driving—and the drivers were none of them professionals. You, in your Paige, could probably do as well.

These unplanned, off-hand tests demonstrated the fact that the Paige Six-66 will climb any hill faster than any car built. Also that it will climb any hill slower in high gear—a terrific test of power.

It is not strange, therefore, that interest in the Paige has been sustained and increased with each passing day. To be a speed marvel is glory indeed. But to be all 'round Master of the Highway is even greater honor.

And therein lies the real significance of these great sporting victories. They are proofs, not merely of speed and power. They are proofs of the truly heroic qualities—strength and endurance.

They affirm that Six-66 models are not only fast cars, but superlatively fine cars. They assure the owner that his investment is a sound one, promising years of care-free service and minimum operating expense.

But establish these facts for yourself. Take one ride behind the exclusive Six-66 power plant and compare it with any other motor—no matter what the price may be—and draw your own conclusions.

We offer to make fast or slow hill-climbing tests with any car you may name. Let it cost what it may, no car can outdo the Paige Six-66.

After such a test you will join us in answering the question that heads this advertisement. There is no better car than the Paige Six-66 under $5,000. Yet the "Lakewood" touring model costs only $2895 f. o. b. factory.

Below we illustrate the two four passenger sport models of the Paige. The Six-66 "Larchmont" at $2995 and the Six-44 "Ardmore" at $2015, both f. o. b. factory.

STILLMAN IS FOR FIGHT TO FINISH, LAWYERS STATE

Legitimacy of Guy Cause of Broken Settlement.

New York, May 27.—[Special.]—Chances for a settlement of the Stillman divorce case out of court apparently were hopeless tonight.

Attorneys for Mr. Stillman, for the first time since news of his divorce action became public, issued a statement which says:

"The attorneys for Mr. Stillman did not participate in the recent negotiations for a settlement. That was attempted by counsel for Mrs. Stillman and by a friend of Mr. Stillman and of members of his family.

"We are informed that they ended in failure because no satisfactory agreement could be reached on the legitimacy of the child. There never was a time, as has been represented in the public press, when Mr. Stillman was willing to acknowledge the parentage of the child or preclude himself from raising the question in any other proceedings."

Who the "Friend" Is.

The "friend of Mr. Stillman" is understood to be John A. Staver of Sherman & Sterling, attorneys for the National City bank.

As the legitimacy of Guy is the principal issue in the divorce case, as far as settlement with Mrs. Stillman is concerned, the announcement from Mr. Stillman's lawyers means the end of the plans of mutual friends to settle the case without further publicity.

It was added tonight by Cornelius J. Sullivan of counsel for Mr. Stillman that the hearing of witnesses in the case will proceed June 1 at Poughkeepsie.

Until Mr. Stillman's attorneys issued the statement, declaring he would not recognize Guy as his son, it was reliably reported that he would sign "on the dotted line," Mrs. Stillman's terms.

What "Fifi" Demanded.

The negotiations were thus explained:

"He has had before him since last night the typewritten form of surrender of the divorce suit and withdrawal of the charge that 2 year old Guy Stillman is not his son. The document puts no restrictions on Mrs. Stillman's freedom to live where she pleases or bring a suit for divorce against Mr. Stillman.

"John F. Brennan, who has charge of the legal proceedings for Mrs. Stillman in Westchester county, was summoned to this city this morning to be in readiness to take the stipulations directly to Justice Morschauser as soon as Mr. Stillman should have signed them.

"This was regarded as significant of the expectation by the lawyers on both sides that he would give over his resentment over the turn the case had taken within the last few days.

"Mrs. Stillman joined Mr. Brennan in the offices of Stanchfield & Levy at noon for a consultation. All information as to the object of the meeting was refused."

Tells of First Terms.

The first definite revelation of the terms of settlement demanded by Mr. Stillman was given by Mrs. Stillman tonight. When shown the statement given out by Mr. Stillman's lawyers, Mrs. Stillman consented to give out the following letter which she received from her counsel, John B. Stanchfield, on May 25:

"My Dear Mrs. Stillman—You will recall that at our interview at your residence on the evening of May 12 I informed you a proposition had been made to me looking to a settlement of your case.

"The proposition was that the present divorce action should be discontinued, leaving the legitimacy of Guy unquestioned.

"That you would be paid a substantial income for life.

"That you would be allowed the custody of your son, Alexander, and the society of your other children whenever they saw fit to be with you.

"The consideration attached was that you were to take up a residence in Europe, either England, France, or Switzerland, or any such country as might appeal to you, for a period of five years, with the privilege of coming back for visits not exceeding thirty days in any one year."

Mrs. Stillman said she had declined the offer, which was then reduced to three years and then to one. The final refusal followed.

BUTCHERS DENY PROFITEERING IN HOT REPORT

Charges of profiteering among retail meat dealers recently made before the congressional committee on agriculture by Everett C. Brown, president of the National Live Stock exchange, drew a spirited reply yesterday from the executive committee of the United Master Butchers of Chicago. The answer quotes from the proceedings of the butchers' last convention, as follows:

"We feel the United States will never have a satisfactory and permanent solution of the problem until the manufacture, sale and distribution of all products are officially supervised by authorized agents of the government. . . .

"We are not profiteers, and during the war period did our part as loyal Americans and sold meat at a smaller margin of profit than any other foods were sold for."

BEG YOUR PARDON

In The Tribune of May 13 it was said that Paul Labriola was arrested "at his home," 1864 Ogden avenue, in connection with the D'Andrea shooting. Mrs. J. W. Tyler, who lives on the second floor at that address, and Mrs. Mary Phillips, who lives in the third apartment, say Labriola was not arrested at that address.

"KISSING BLONDE"

Woman Friend of Herbert P. Ziegler Supplies Motive for His Murder by Cora Orthwein.

MRS. CHARLOTTE LEWINSKY.

Mrs. Charlotte Lewinsky, the "kissing blonde," yesterday told Assistant State's Attorney Lloyd Heth that Herbert P. Ziegler had asked her to help him break off his relations with Mrs. Cora Isabella Orthwein on the evening before he was shot by Mrs. Orthwein in the latter's Surf street apartment. This supplies a motive for the shooting. Mrs. Orthwein's trial for murder will start next Tuesday.

Mrs. Lewinsky admitted she had been on friendly terms with Ziegler, Jack Barry, owner of Chicago's "Monte Carlo," and Jed Flannigan, a brother. She told of several parties at cabarets, the Congress hotel, at Mrs. Orthwein's apartment, and at Barry's gambling house. These affairs were usually attended by Mrs. Orthwein and two of Mrs. Lewinsky's sisters. The "kissing blonde" admitted Barry had taught her to operate the roulette wheel, but denied that she had gambled there. She also denied she had been used as a lure to draw rich men to Barry's gambling house. Attorney Heth will invesigate a report that Mrs. Lewinsky was only one of a number of girls employed as lures.

Mrs. Lewinsky went to the Rainbo gardens with Ziegler the night he was killed. He asked her to go over to "Cora's" and help him break up. He said he wanted to get away from her for the sake of his 6 year old daughter, Mrs. Lewinsky said. She refused to go. Mrs. Lewinsky is suing her husband for separate maintenance.

Mrs. Lewinsky, who had not seen Mrs. Orthwein since the night before the shooting, met her yesterday in a loop hotel. They stared at each other for a moment, then rushed into a close embrace.

DETECTIVE, 15, FOILS BOYS' $300 HOLDUP, NABS 3

Saves a Bride from Gift Loss, Tears.

A boy took $300 home last night and gave it to his sister for a wedding present. He doesn't know yet how close he came to being slugged and robbed.

FRED MENSINGER.
[The detective.]

EDWARD SLADE.

FRED SCHAFER.

The detective instinct of Fred Mensinger, 15 years old, of 131 South Ashland avenue, saved the boy from injury and the bride from tears—and incidentally led to the arrest of three other boys who had been living in a dugout at Hermitage avenue and Division street.

The boys arrested are Edward Slade, 1140 North Lincoln street, who escaped a few days ago from the Cook county school; Fred Schafer, 838 North Marshfield avenue, and Leo Leszcyzynski, 1520 Elk Grove avenue.

Mensinger had found the dugout and some blank checks. He also overheard a plot to rob the boy who would pass a certain spot at a certain time with the wedding present. So he confided in the police and Detectives Birmingham and McGinnis of the bureau, and Pinkerton operatives did the rest.

UNION BUILDERS WOULD ELIMINATE BIG CONTRACTORS

Say "Middleman" Takes 12 Per Cent Profit.

Plans for the elimination of general contractors to revive building industry in Chicago was discussed last night at the meeting of the Building Trades council at Carpenters' District council, 505 South State street.

Thomas S. Kearney, president, said if the present plans of the union materialize the actual cost of building construction will be decreased 12 per cent.

"Officials of the unions affiliated with the council are disgusted with the manner in which the representatives of the two large builders' associations are treating their efforts to bring about a settlement of the building trades lockout," Kearney declared.

Would Eliminate Middleman.

"Since the lockout was ordered May 1 efforts of the unions to get the contractors to arbitrate the wage dispute have been futile. Now we intend advocating to the public to deal direct with subcontractors and reliable architects. This will eliminate the middleman's profit of 12 per cent."

A committee from the trades council will visit Mayor Thompson today to learn why construction work on public schools has ceased. A communication also will be sent Gov. Small to ascertain why work was stopped on the state hospital.

Raps Officials Responsible.

"Public officials in times like these, when there are a great many men unemployed, should use every means in their power to stimulate activities," Mr. Kearney said. "So far they have not exerted themselves.

"When construction work was stopped on school buildings it only added to the army of unemployed. The action of the city administration in permitting contractors to halt construction work is not creditable."

LOVE SCORNED, TRIES TO KILL WOMAN AND SELF

Christian Miller, a carpenter, yesterday slashed his own throat with a razor after he had tried to kill Mrs. Mary Pavlik, 30, a midwife, in her home at 5131 Gunnison street. Miller became infatuated with Mrs. Pavlik years ago when he boarded at her house. She would have nothing to do with him, it is said, because he had a wife living at 5050 Giddings street.

Yesterday Miller wrote a note to Mrs. Pavlik accusing her of bringing their love so far he cared no longer for his wife. "I cannot return home any more and so I better end it all with you," he wrote.

Both Miller and Mrs. Pavlik are expected to live.

CRIME BOARD FIGHTS ATTEMPT TO SAVE LOPEZ

Clemency for Antonio Lopez, convicted on July 2, 1920, of the murder of Antonio Varchetto, a baker, and now under sentence to be hanged on July 8, was strongly opposed yesterday by Edward W. Sims, president of the Chicago Crime commission.

In a letter to the state board of pardons and paroles, which yesterday at Joliet penitentiary took under consideration the Lopez plea. Mr. Sims outlined the history of the slaying and demanded that the sentence of the court be carried out.

The recommendation of the pardon board will be made later to Gov. Len Small.

TEACHER KILLED BY OWN WEAPON, LEGREGNI CLAIMS

Frank Ligregni, on trial before Judge John J. Sullivan for the murder of his wife, Genevieve, a school teacher, told the jurors yesterday that the three shots which killed his wife had been fired during a struggle for the possession of a revolver owned by her.

"I was standing in her room arguing with her," he testified, "when she suddenly whisked a revolver from under her pillow and pointed it at me.

"I lunged toward her in an effort to grasp the gun. In the struggle three shots were fired, and she fell dead. That's all I know. The rest is all a blank."

PEGGY MARSH'S BOY COSTS FIELD ESTATE NEW FEES

For attorneys' services in taking a writ of error to the Supreme court in behalf of Peggy Marsh and Henry Anthony Marsh, son of Henry Field, an order was entered yesterday by Judge Denis E. Sullivan in Superior court against the Marshall Field estate for the payment of $70,923.

HENRY ANTHONY MARSH.

Part of the sum goes to the firm of Dunne & Corboy, counsel for Peggy Marsh. Former Gov. Edward F. Dunne, who has represented Henry Anthony Marsh through the series of suits against the Field estate, said yesterday he is confident he will establish rights of the boy as the legal issue of Henry Field.

In a previous order for lawyers' fees $970,000 was granted against the estate. Of the sum ordered paid yesterday J. F. Damann was awarded $5,000 as guardian and $40,000 went to the trustees of the estate, Chauncey M. Keep, Arthur B. Jones, Marshall Field III., and the Merchants' Loan and Trust company.

Gene Geary Examined by Three Alienists

Gene Geary, condemned to die for the murder of Harry Reckas, was examined by three alienists yesterday in Chief Justice McDonald's court. If the alienists say Geary knows why he was tried, and why he is to hang, he will be hanged June 17, the chief justice declares.

FARM AND GARDEN

BY FRANK RIDGWAY

CLOVER PEST OUTBREAK.

The lesser clover leaf weevil is making its appearance in Indiana, where it threatens the clover crop, and is a new and strange creature to many farmers. This insect has been found in Indiana for years, but only in the last few years has it needed much consideration, according to J. J. Davis of Purdue. In warning farmers, Mr. Davis says the pest is gradually increasing and spreading its destructiveness. Now it is one of the worst clover pests of Indiana.

The lesser clover leaf weevil or clover bud worm is related to the green clover leaf weevil larvae which farmers found in their clover patches this spring, but is more destructive. The larvae of the new pest threaten to destroy red and big English clover. They are small, dark, pale green worms, and eat the tender stems under the leaf sheath of the young clover buds, and reduce the hay and seed crop by killing the shoots and buds. The grubs destroy the inner parts of the heads at blooming time.

Pull down the leaves at the base of the shoots and buds, and if the larvae are there you will find blackish cavities eaten through the stems and buds. About July 4 the larvae stage their final celebration and pass to the beetle stage. The beetles winter in protected places, lay eggs in early spring from which the larvae hatch.

Clipping and pasturing will check their destructive work. To save the hay and seed crop this particular season, entomologists say, the clover should be clipped for the first hay crop about the middle of June, possibly a little earlier. Spraying to control the beetle has been tried out in Ohio, but preliminary tests were not entirely satisfactory.

Youth for Whom Girl Killed Self to Give Up

Harold Honohan, hog buyer at the yards, who fled when his sweetheart, Mary Carr, committed suicide yesterday, will give himself up when the police place a formal charge against him, according to the attorney engaged by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William D. Honohan, 5445 Drexel boulevard. Miss Carr, who lived at 5477 Dorchester avenue, swallowed acid when her attempts at a reconciliation failed.

FRED W. MORGAN, PIONEER OF TIRE INDUSTRY, DIES

Fred W. Morgan, founder of the firm of Morgan & Wright, manufacturers of bicycle tires when the bicycles held the place the automobile does today, died suddenly yesterday of angina pectoris at his home, 2678 Washington boulevard.

FRED W. MORGAN.

Mr. Morgan was born in New York March 20, 1854. He came to Chicago forty-five years ago. He became interested in rubber, and his experiments in manufacturing tires resulted in the founding of the firm of Morgan & Wright. His partner was Rufus Wright, who died some years ago. After years of successful business at May and Lake streets, the firm of Morgan & Wright changed hands and became the United States Tire company, one of the largest manufacturing concerns in the world.

Mr. Morgan was always an art enthusiast. Several of his own paintings were accepted by the Art institute. At his death he was a life, governing, and sustaining member of the institute.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mary Wright Morgan, the daughter of his former partner; two daughters, Mrs. R. E. Watrous and Mrs. C. A. Tilt, and two sons, Ernest and Hiram. Funeral services will be held in the late residence Tuesday at 2 p. m. Burial in Rosehill.

K. OF C. TO SPEND FUND OF $5,000,000 FOR EDUCATION

Plans for the expenditure of the $5,000,000 balance of the Knights of Columbus' war fund for 500 university scholarships and the maintenance of 135 night schools for ex-service men were considered yesterday at the convention of K. C. department directors and educational supervisrs in the Hotel La Salle.

The money originally was intended for a memorial building in Washington.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Question:

How do you spend your Sundays?

Where Asked:

Dearborn and Monroe streets.

The Answers:

Peg Meyers, 6130 Greenwood avenue, cashier—I get up early and go to the Jackson park golf links and play golf. I play nearly all day. Sometimes I go out riding late in the afternoon and then to the theater in the evening.

E. Dillon Bristow, 6 Chalmers place, bank clerk—The first thing I do after breakfast is take my two children out in the park for a long walk, then we go home and take care of the dinner. The ball game comes next if there is any. I take the family to a show in the evening.

Mrs. Esther O'Connor, 2210 Jackson boulevard, bank clerk—Well, I sleep until noon or thereabouts, then have dinner. If there is a ball game I go to it, and if not, I sometimes take a walk, and go to a show of some kind in the evening. Not a bad way, is it?

William Klemz, 4430 North Hamlin avenue, bank clerk—I get up early and go motoring to the country. Sometimes we go fishing or swimming, or play ball if we can find a suitable place. In the evening? That's hard to tell. They aren't scheduled.

Mildred Penfield, Lombard, Ill., bank clerk—Well, I get up and go to church the first thing in the morning. Then I go home and have dinner and read the papers awhile. In the afternoon I go to a ball game. In the evening I generally go out riding or to the movies.

Jury Frees Two Men Held for $62,000 Bank Robbery

In five minutes yesterday a jury in Judge Frank Johnson's court found Patrick Geary and Ray Dennis not guilty of robbing the Kenwood Trust and Savings bank of $62,000 in currency last February. Geary and Dennis were positively identified by several bank employés as two of the six bandits who made a spectacular daylight raid on the bank.

NEW SUIT SEEKS TO FIX VALIDITY OF EXPERTS' FEES

May Scatter Tacks for Tribune Action.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

A suit was filed in the Municipal court yesterday against the city for $21,000 by "Calvin B. Beach for the use of Ernest H. Lyons," one of the city's real estate experts.

This may result in scattering tacks in the path of The Tribune company's suit to recover $1,004,586 paid Frank H. Mesce and Austin J. Lynch as city building experts and to prevent the paying of $1,871,476 more to them. The Tribune's bill claims that the appropriation from which Mesce and Lynch received a large part of their $1,004,586 was void for that purpose.

The Beach suit seeks to establish in the Municipal court that the claim of Lyons is "a liability of the city of Chicago, authorized by and incurred under an appropriation made by the city council in the annual appropriation bill (ordinance) of 1920."

If Judge Fisher, to whom the suit is assigned, decides that Lyons' claim is good and the appropriation was valid, why cannot the same contention be made by Mesce and Lynch in The Tribune's suit in the Superior court?

Mr. Beach Stirs Mystery.

Lyons, who lives in Evanston, does not presumably need the $21,000 urgently. He already has collected on six street improvements a total of $580,326.41 and still has due an estimated $91,495.19. But he has given power of attorney to Calvin B. Beach to collect the $21,000.

Beach is listed in the telephone directory as a dealer in bonds at 179 West Washington street. He was not in yesterday afternoon. He has employed as his lawyer George B. Blackwell, with office at 3000 South State street. Blackwell said he did not know anything about his client and was not informed in detail on the basis of the claims of E. H. Lyons against the city.

"A friend brought Mr. Beach to me, and I don't know anything about him," said the lawyer.

City "Scrip" Basis of Suit.

But all of this excludes an important feature of the suit. The "statement of claims" shows that the suit is founded upon a certificate of indebtedness. When these certificates were first issued last summer they were referred to as scrip. The council finance committee declined to sanction their issuance.

On July 25 last Lyons was credited by the city controller's office with having accepted one of these certificates of indebtedness for $17,000, but the certificate on which this suit is brought is numbered 28,059, in the upper left hand corner bears the notation "No. 284," and is dated Nov. 15, 1920.

According to the copy filed in court, this certificate is signed by George F. Harding, city controller, by James Battis, chief clerk.

Lyons' Claim "Sold" to Beach?

Among other things, this certificate "certifies" that the voucher due and payable to the order of Ernest H. Lyons for $21,000 "will be paid at such time as there will be sufficient money for this purpose in said fund, which time, it is anticipated, will not be later than April 1, 1921."

If Lyons earned the money in expert fees on street improvements, it is surprising that money is not availabel to pay him. These fees have been paid out of money received from the sale of bonds for the improvements. It is also surprising that Lyons gave power of attorney to another man to collect the money. It was the guess of clerks in the Municipal court that Lyons had sold the claim to Calvin B. Beach.

COURT ANNULS MOVIE MARRIAGE; 'FRAMED,' CHARGE

The second marriage of Byron Campbell Munson, son of Arthur Munson of 5328 Harper avenue, Board of Trade operator, was annulled yesterday by Judge Joseph Sabath. The decree was granted on the ground Byron was less than 21 when he married Gwendolin Otis, daughter of Sarah Jane Otis, who was named as "that awful woman" in a death note left by Lieut. Patrick O'Brien, the aviator.

The marriage was "framed" by Mrs. Otis in Los Angeles, the court was told. A year ago Munson ran away from home to act in the movies. His wedding was attended by Mrs. Gordon Thorne, Mrs. Mildred Harris Chaplin, and other society folk and screen stars.

Early in 1919, when Byron was 18, he appeared at the home of his parents with Miss Alice Ranney Mead, a childhood sweetheart, and announced they had been married. In the autumn of the same year the marriage was annuled.

SEVEN INJURED WHEN AUTO HITS A FREIGHT TRAIN

Seven men were injured, one seriously, when their auto crashed into a freight train on the Northwestern railroad at the Kingsbury crossing, North avenue and Kingsbury street, early this morning.

Barney Blank, one of the injured, was taken to the Northwestern hospital. The others went home. Leo Brady, 1444 North Paulina street, was owner and driver of the car. The victims say the gates were not down. The gateman, Michael Cusack, refused to talk.

A Wild Goose—Aside from That Is a O. W. Man

"THE WILD GOOSE"

Produced by Paramount.
Directed by Albert Capellani.
Presented at the Orpheum.

THE CAST.

Diana Manners	Mary MacLaren
Frank Manners	Holmes E. Herbert
Mrs. Hastings	Dorothy Bernard
Hastings	Joseph Smiley
Ogden Fenn	Norman Kerry
Tam Manners	Rita Rogan
The nurse	Lucia Backus Segar

By Mae Tinée.

WHAT does "The Wild Goose" mean? you ask. For you know nobody's talking about the real thing with web feet and feathers. Well, in the present case the goose is one Frank Manners, and he is a goose [gander, ain't?] because he's a one woman man, and if he can't have his own wife, doesn't want anybody's else. Nor does he care to live. Which is why he is a goose—for two reasons. One—the wild goose, once mated, never mates again. Two—Mrs. Manners.

Mr. Manners is an artist and he adores his wife and child. The wife, however, longs for excitement, and, being bored with just a husband, takes advantage of Mr. Manners' adsence to California to become mixed up with a svelte dark gentleman who desires to be amused.

Mrs. Hastings, a friend of the Manners, true to her own old husband, though suffering with unrequited love for Mr. Manners, does her best to make the wife be good. To no avail. Mr. Manners comes home to find his nest in danger. Later his wife and child flee with the svelte dark gentleman, who has, if truth be known, bitten off a lot more than he had intended. He wasn't looking for trouble when he first ogled another man's wife. And he wasn't looking for marriage. And he wasn't crazy about eloping with a wife AND child, eyether!

With the aid of old Mr. Hastings, who proves himself a hero and a martyr by killing both himself and the svelte intruder, and the ministrations of Mrs. Hastings, reconciliation is effected.

The picture is well photographed and fairly well cast. The men, however, play up better than the women. Miss McLaren has a few good scenes—toward the last. She is frowsy and ordinary during the first reels. Miss Bernard, an intense brunette, is rather nice most of the time, though a bit inclined toward melodrama.

The story is by Gouvernor Morris.

CLOSEUPS

Ever notice that Tivoli pronounced backwards says ilovit?

Lowell Sherman has signed up with Sennett. [Little bird tells me I told you that before.]

Pauline Stark, one of the most charming, and, incidentally, one of the least frequently seen of the actresses, is back on the coast after a prolonged visit in New York.

Colleen Moore, also back from lil' ol' New York, where she has been working with John Barrymore in "The Lotus Eaters," announces he is "the most brilliant man I ever met."

Among the people who will support Ben Turpin in his coming series of two-reelers are Phyllis Haver, Harriett Hammond, Billy Bevan, and George O'Hara.

Mary Miles Minter arrives in town today. She will be entertained by officials of her company this evening at a dinner at the Drake. Tomorrow she leaves for—the coast, I believe.

DORIS BLAKE'S ANSWERS

Lots of Other Girls.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young man and I am deeply in love with a young lady. This young lady loves another young man. She used to love me, but now she says she loves him. I love her so much that I do not know what to do. BILL."

It's hard medicine to take, Bill. But—you're not the first young man who has had to take "no" like a man. However, you can do as many of these young men have done, and that is to find solace in the company of another young lady. There are a lot of nice, nice girls left, you know, Bill.

Always Has an Excuse.

"Dear Miss Blake: What do you think of a man who continually breaks appointments but always has a ready excuse. He is well bred, and comes from a respectable family. I greatly enjoy his company, and he claims that he cannot live without me. What do you think I should do in this case? "F. E."

In that case, I would break an engagement, too, and have an equally ready excuse.

How to Order Clotilde Patterns.

Write your name and address plainly on dotted lines, giving number and size of such patterns as you want. Inclose 10 cents in stamps or coin (wrap coin carefully) for each number, and address your order to Clotilde, CHICAGO DAILY TRIBUNE, Chicago.

A FRIEND IN NEED

I want to be the medium through which the friend in deed and the friend in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy, and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be only too happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

"Your column does so much good, I wonder if it could help me? Being sick, I have been unable to work since last October. The last of April I had an operation, which I still owe for. I secured a position since then which I like. I have only one dress to wear, to which I have three vests. I wonder if some of your readers would have a few cast off blouses, size 42; a skirt, size 28, and waist. L. M."

When prices are so high, we can all appreciate the trials of a young girl trying to clothe herself on a small salary, especially when she has the added worry of doctor bills.

"I write to you in hope that one of your contributors might have a child's crib to give. I would appreciate it so much. E. N."

This request will, no doubt, meet the attention of some mother whose babies have outgrown their crib and who will be glad to know of some one who can make good use of it.

BRIGHT SAYINGS OF THE CHILDREN

The Tribune will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Please write on one side of the paper. Address Bright Sayings to Aunty Bee, Tribune, Chicago.

Ralph Harold and the girl next door play together quite frequently. She is a romantic youngster, while he is extremely matter of fact. One day they were playing "boat," the boat being a large dry goods box.

Frances sat in the box and suddenly cried, "Help, help, the boat is sinking!"

Ralph Harold came calmly to her and said, "all right, get out and I'll save the boat. V. K.

"Ruth," said her mother, "go and call Prince for his dinner."

"But, mother, I can't," said Ruth, "'cause I don't speak to him since he broke my dolly." G. M. D.

A fond parent was considerably surprised at meeting his son on the street, covered with blood from a bleeding nose and looking as though he had been dragged a block through mud.

"What's the matter Gates."

"Can't you see? I got licked." G. M. H.

Big Doings for Yeomen.

The Yeomen of Chicago will open their annual summer ceremonial with a class of 1,000 members in Masonic Temple drill hall this afternoon, to be followed by a reception and dance in honor of the supreme officers at the Palmer house in the evening.

On Sunday at 3 p. m. the Sublime Degree of Rhadamanthus will be conferred by Sublime Magnus T. J. Ryan upon all who have secured three members for their homestead during one month in the campaign.

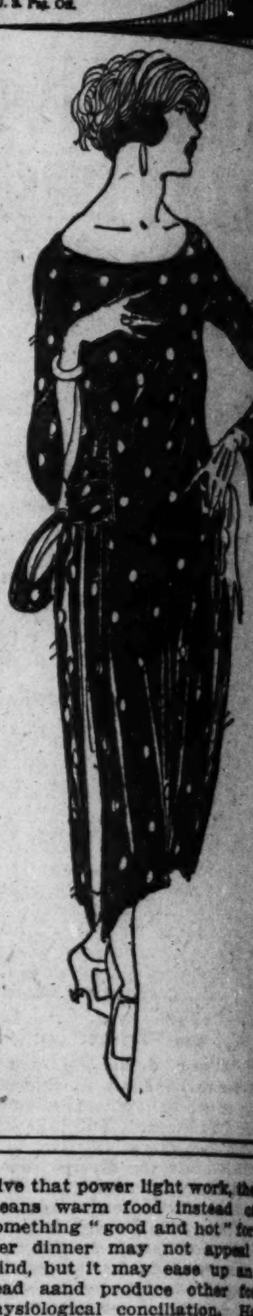
The speakers will include, besides the supreme officers, City Clerk James T. Igoe, Robert M. Sweitzer, and Ald. T. J. Lynch.

FASHION'S BLUE BOOK

Trade Mark Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

BY CORINNE LOWE.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—There is a coltish freedom about the front of many of the new frocks. Girdles and belts stop all disciplinary measures at the sides, and the result is an unbroken front line extending from neck to hem. This flowing line is immensely becoming to the average woman, whether slim or stout, for it gives always an illusion of height. In today's drawing we present this silhouette in a navy blue foulard, beneath the uneven hem of which is detected at both sides a foundation of white crêpe de chine. And, by the way, this combination of foulard and crêpe de chine is particularly smart just now.



TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

BY JANE EDDINGTON.

Pan Browned Potatoes.

Here is a recipe for which we might offer much favorable argument: Take small new potatoes, wash, peel, and dry with a cloth ready to put them to cook in hot fat. The fat may be in a frying pan—one with a cover—or in a Dutch oven. There should be but little of it, so that the potatoes will not be coated with fat when done. A tablespoonful of nice home-tried-out lard, or the same amount of home-tried-out suet or "dripping," or the fat from some salt pork or bacon may be used.

Have the pan hot, put in the fat, and as soon as it melts put in the potoes; sprinkle lightly with salt and cook over a minimum fire, stirring or turning occasionally, so that they will brown on all sides. The hot fat seals the surface, and the cover keeps the potatoes from drying. If they are dry in frying pan when cooked, turn off fire and let them stand covered to steam five or ten minutes.

Not even French fried potatoes keep hot so long as do these, or are more palatable, if the work is carefully done. With a vegetable or without these can take the place of meat.

In our argument for them let us start with the words of the physiologist: "On a cold day the stomach and intestines, the pancreas, the liver, the kidneys, etc., are richly supplied with blood, while on a warm day their supply is diminished." With less blood there is less digestive power. Give that power light work, then. This means warm food instead of cold. Something "good and hot" for a summer dinner may not appeal to the mind, but it may ease up an aching head aand produce other forms of physiological conciliation. Have the first part of the summer dinner hot. You will so increase your digestive power for an attack on the later agreeably cold things.

Miss Hessert and Miss Yates Will Be Brides Today

MAY weddings, which usually crowd the calendar, have been very few this month, but so many marriages are scheduled for June that Dan Cupid doesn't need to worry about his business falling off. Two prominent girls who chose to be May brides rather than June ones are Miss Louise Hessert and Miss Katherine Yates, both of whom will be married today.

Miss Hessert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gustav Hessert of the Webster hotel, will be married to Taylor Strawn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester H. Strawn of Ottawa, Ill., at 4:30 o'clock in St. James' Episcopal church, the Rev. Dr. James S. Stone officiating. After the ceremony there will be a reception at the residence of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Rehm [illegible] Astor street.

The bride will be attended by her sister, Mrs. De Forest Hulburd of Lake Forest, as matron of honor, and by Miss Mary Hincks of Bridgeport, Conn., as honor maid. The bridesmaids will be Miss Catherine Bartholomay, Miss Louise Rehm, Miss Catherine Rehm, cousins of the bride, Miss Marion Clow, Miss Vivian O'Gara, all of Chicago, and Mis Beatrice Sniffen of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Marshall Keig will be best man for Mr. Strawn and the ushers will be Theodore Woodruff, Vincent O'Connor, Caldwell Hager, Garrard B. Winston, Clay Judson, Frank Sullivan, and William Templeton. After a wedding journey Mr. and Mrs. Strawn will occupy Mr. and Mrs. Arthur F. Tuttle's apartment at 311 Belden avenue until Oct. 1.

Miss Yates, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David M. Yates of 526 Augusta street, Oak Park, will become the bride of Norman Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Smith of 544 Linden avenue, Oak Park, this evening at the First Presbyterian church in Oak Park. The Rev. Dr. George N. Luccock will officiate, assisted by the Rev. Roy E. Vale and the Rev. Emory Luccock. A reception and dance at the Oak Park Country club will follow the wedding.

Miss Helen Meyer will be maid of honor and Mrs. Yates will be matron of honor for her daughter. Miss Isabel Gardner, Miss Helen Smith, Miss Martytine Oliver, Miss Virginia Noel, all of Oak Park, Miss Eleanor Lord of Evanston, Miss Marion Linden of Chicago, and Miss Katherine Douthett of Butler, Pa., will be bridesmaids. Little Margery Fogarty of Oak Park will be the ring bearer. Ashley Smith will serve as best man for his brother. The ushers will be Donald Sperry, Capt. Knew All About It.

My friend had received a pony for her birthday. After having ridden it a few times herself she generously offered the rest of us a ride. There were ten or twelve children, so we had to wait patiently for our turns. While we watched the others we laughed at them if they could not ride correctly. I boasted to some of the others that I had ridden many times and knew how to do it well.

At last my turn came. But alas! each time I put my foot in the stirrup the pony moved. I would not give up, though, so at last I resolved to put my foot in the stirrup quickly and jump on the pony's back. This I did.

But, much to my embarrassment and the others' mirth, instead of landing on the pony's back, I had jumped over him, while one of my feet was caught in the stirrup on the other side.

Wary of Spankings.

My small son recently gave me an embarrassing moment. I had punished him for running away from home. It seems that during his flight he took refuge in the home of a new neighbor whom I had not met. A few days later when I was out walking with son, we met this woman, and she invited us in. At the steps sonny hung back. "I'd rather not come in," he exclaimed shyly. "My mother spanks me for coming here."

Audience Cheers as Grainger Plays with the Orchestra

BY EDWARD MOORE.

PERCY GRAINGER, the pianist, was held out as the foremost reason for attending the music festival in Evanston last night. He lived up to specifications.

There were other items calculated to excite attendance. Arne Oldberg, a wise and learned composer, conducted the first performance on any stage of his own "Canzona," an event occurring beyond the time limitations permitted for a visit to the concert. Mr. Stock directed the Chicago Symphony orchestra through several works of a jocund and cheery nature. But Mr. Grainger, as soloist, took the first place.

Mr. Stock started the proceedings with the overture to Smetana's "The Bartered Bride," whisking it along at an exhilarating pace. It was considerably nimbler than the celebrated tempo direction in one of Mr. Grainger's own pieces, "At a fast, jog trotting speed," but it was clean cut and had propulsive force. Therefore it was not an instrumental race. It was the best sort of an introduction for what followed.

Then Mr. Grainger took his place at the piano, the spotlight illuminated his blonde aureole, and he and the orchestra burst into Tschaikowsky's Concerto in B minor. The verb is used advisedly, for the effect was of a kind to stir the spirits of all who heard it.

Perhaps the weather was too warm for fingers to cling firmly to piano keys at all times, but no one minded. When one has as much poise, as much sanity, as highly developed a sense of rhythm and contrast as Grainger, a few wrong notes, even a handful of them, is the least important element of a performance.

Wherefore there was a high water mark of applause when he finished. He deserved it all.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

H. C. M.: THAT'S A TRAGEDY ALL right. Bleaching hair with peroxide is something I urge my readers never to do because it is not good for the hair, and while one may start out rationally enough a sense of balance seems to be lost before long with its use, and a decidedly false effect is achieved. If you will do something—let it be a henna rinse, and be sure that the operator is conscientious enough about his work to provide the vegetable henna and not henna mixed with mineral dyes. The henna rinses are not red, bu vary from light blonde to black. It requires about two solid years for hair to get back to its original color after the dye pot has once entertained it.

MISS I. S.. ONE HUNDRED AND sixty-three pounds at 18! That's pretty fat. Tell me what you eat, and I'll tell you why you're fat. Also how much exercise you do, or do not do, rather. In the meantime, rush along the s. a. e., and I'll give you exercises and diet to get busy on before another pound settles upon your eighteen years.

C. W. S.: WHITE POWDER ON A dark skin is disfiguring, don't you think? The brunette is better. Get the powder and rouge that tone into the color of the skin, so that there is a little mystery about its use. When mismated powder or rouge and skin are flaunted in the face of an observing public, there is no alluring subtlety.

Declares Women Will Save Courts from Tiger's Claws

MRS. GEORGE W. REINECKE,

Secretary Woman's Committee, Coalition Nonpartisan Judicial Ticket.
Secretary Republican Woman's National Executive Committee.

THE purpose of having the election of Circuit and Superior court judges in June, apart from any other election, is to keep them out of political campaign issues. The effort of the Thompson-Lundin machine to get control of the courts puts a dangerous political issue into this campaign, which must be defeated.

It should be entirely clear to the women of Cook county that the men running under the Republican heading on the judicial ballot are not the choice of the Republican voters of Cook county, but are there because they have accepted and agreed to wear the Thompson Tammany label as judges for the next six years.

Women of Cook county are interested in seeing that the $20,000,000 which they voted the south parks system is used for the parks and recreational facilities, and not for real estate experts. But more serious than anything else to men, women, and children of Cook county is the possibility of having all of our judges controlled by a political machine which has sponsored them and will attempt to instruct them in legal decisions.

Every woman should vote. If you are for the coalition ticket and do not go to the polls on June 6 and vote, you give your vote to the Thompson-Lundin machine. The women of Illinois saved Senator McKinley, Lieut. Gov. Sterling, and Attorney General Brundage last fall, and they will save the coalition nonpartisan judicial ticket.

GRAINS ERRATIC; CORN IS HIGHER, WHEAT LOWER

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Grain prices moved erratically within a good range yesterday. They responded more easily at the start and again at the last to selling pressure. Rains over a good part of the wheat country have taken the bull edge off the market and changed sentiment to a considerable extent. All grains had good bulges at times, which ran into liquidating and profit taking sales that carried them off.

At the close wheat was ½@1¼c lower, May leading. Corn was 2½c higher for May and ¾@2c higher for distant months, while oats lost ⅛@⅛c on the distant futures and May gained ⅜c. In rye May was tight and gained 3c, and other deliveries lost 1⅛@1⅝c.

May Wheat Breaks Sharply.

It took little selling pressure to break May wheat sharply at times, and again it responded readily to fair buying. The market is losing its interest to all except those having open trades, and the volume of business did not exceed 1,000,000 bu, according to pit estimates. At the bottom, $1.65½, prices were off nearly 20c from Wednesday's top of $1.85, with the finish at $1.66¾@1.67. It was difficult to trade at times without causing changes of 1@2c, and stop order selling was responsible for the break to the low point.

Export business for July and August loading at the gulf was of fair size, although no quantities were given. Receipts are to increase the next few days.

Crop reports had less effect on the market in general. Although advices were about as bad as usual, the removal of the tension on the May was reflected in fair pressure on the July, and local professionals were free sellers, while eastern houses were the principal buyers. July at the top was $1.30, or 4c above the early low, with the finish at $1.27⅝@1.27¼c and an easy tone.

Corn Makes Good Showing.

Corn made a good showing on buying attributed to some of the strongest local traders who were bullish, and to covering by shorts. Selling pressure came largely from cash houses hedging purchases from the country, particularly from Iowa, where offerings have increased, as corn planting is nearly completed, while the movement from Illinois is said to be about over. May was hard to buy and advanced 3c above the previous day's close, holding the greater part. July had a range of 2⅜c, with the finish at 64⅝@64¾c. The decline in foreign exchange has checked export business.

Selling of a big line taken Thursday on bids was a feature in the oats trading. Cash houses were also sellers at times. Local traders were covering shorts and bid prices up more than 1c at one time, which was all lost later on the distant futures, while May in closing at 39⅝c was within ⅝c of the top. Rains have helped the crop. Elevator people were buying July and selling the September at 1⅝c difference. Purchases of new oats for August-September shipment from the country were September price for No. 2 white and 1c under for No. 3 white.

May rye was hard to buy and moved up 5c, with a reaction of 2c. Pressure on distant futures was sufficient to close them lower.

Provisions Have Decline.

A break in hogs led to selling of product by speculators, and the decline was taken advantage of by shorts to cover. The finish was 12½c higher to 2½c lower on lard, with May the strongest, while ribs were 2½c lower to 2½c higher. Prices follow:

NEWS OF THE CROPS

"Nebraska can hardly equal the wheat yield of 1920, but, on the whole, a fair average crop is probable," said R. O. Cromwell in his report to E. W. Wagner & Co. "In Nebraska I cannot find the setback due to disease or insects, and my inquiries indicate the various freezes prevented proper root development. On the better soil, however, the plant has ably recovered. Oats crop in northern Iowa is generally good, and corn conditions are favorable. Many oats in south central Iowa are yellow, and not well stooled, due to freezes and wet soil, the stand being thin and uneven. Considerable corn replanted also."

Dry weather caused further deterioration in winter wheat in secetions of Kansas and Nebraska, where plant had been weakened as a result of freezing temperatures in April, according to reports to the Modern Miller. In Oklahoma the outlook is better. General condition of the crop in the soft wheat states remains good. Condition of spring wheat excellent. Under favorable weather conditions progress has been rapid and early maturity is now indicated.

CASH·GRAIN N·E·W·S

Owing to a break in exchange no export business of consequence was done in wheat or corn at the seaboard. It is estimated that 150,000 bu new wheat has been bought to arrive at Chicago, shipment by July 20 at 1c over July, and a fair amount of vessel room has been chartered for late July and August to go to Montreal. Sales were said to have been made on the basis of 13½c over July, f. o. b. Montreal, for No. 2 hard or red. France has authorized unrestricted imports of wheat.

Domestic shipping sales at Chicago were 9,000 bu wheat, 422,000 bu corn, including 275,000 bu c. i. f. Buffalo, and 160,000 bu oats. Bales of 5,000 bu rye were made to go to store. Deliveries on May contracts were 3,000 bu wheat, 18,000 bu corn, 10,000 bu oats and 21,000 bu rye.

No. 1 and No. 2 hard and red winter wheat went to 2c under May at the last after selling at July price early. The only demand is from elevator interests. Receipts 76 cars. Premiums at the Gulf weak at 43c over July for first half June loading and 40c over for last half, while August was 13@14c over July.

St. Louis cash prices were 2@7c lower, with hard winter leading. Demand limited. Kansas City declined 1@2c and Omaha was unchanged to 3c lower. At Minneapolis medium low grades were 3@5c lower and others unchanged to 2c lower as compared with the futures.

Receipts of cash corn were 594 cars, but sold readily with No. 2 yellow and white July price and No. 3 grades ½@1c under the latter being up about ½c as compared with the future. Sample values were 1@2c higher. Outside markets were unchanged to 2½c higher, Kansas City leading.

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

Cash wheat handlers are figuring on 500,000 to 600,000 bu being received here between May 26 and 31, inclusive, for delivery on May sales. A report given out by a car tracer late yesterday had it that 150 cars had arrived and would probably be delivered on May sales today. The rules of the board provide that deliveries can be made in car lots on track during the last three business days of any expiring contract month.

Several houses bought contract grades of wheat yesterday at 2c under the May and sold the May against it. They are taking a big risk, as the settlement for the shortage or the surplus above 5,000 bu, in case of a sharp change in price, frequently more than absorbs the profit on the entire lot.

It is said 300,000 bu of wheat are coming here from Omaha, being run through on a twenty-four hour schedule, and 150 cars are due from Kansas City.

The wheat market was regarded as in a position to be easily influenced by any new buying or selling. Sentiment among most of the trade favored lower prices. Should there be no rains and should temperatures remain high, a few operators said they looked for an upturn in July.

Wheat traders are looking for lower prices for July, after the May is out of the way. There is said to be a good sized shortage outstanding in May, and it is impossible to tell what the price will do at the windup. A surplus or shortage of 10,000 bu might create fluctuations of 10@20c within a short time. May at the low point yesterday was off 20c from the high of Wednesday, while July was off 10c. Wide fluctuations in May are the result of an absence of speculative trading, as a majority of the speculators generally abandon a current delivery late in the month, as it is too uncertain, and prices move up and down with great rapidity in a wide range, going 1@2c between trades at times, all depending on the orders. Where there is a large volume of speculation prices are stabilized; the larger the trade the steadier the market.

It is said the big run of corn from Illinois is over, but Iowa has been selling more freely for several days. A steady absorption of July and September has been on by seaboard exporters and a few leading professionals who have been friendly to corn for some time. With all the heavy movement, the cash corn has been well taken and prices have held well. Of late the removal of hedges by shippers has absorbed the fresh hedges put in from day to day.

Clement-Curtis had a message late yesterday from Woodward, Okla., saying: "Good rains over most of the Oklahoma wheat belt. Understand cutting wheat at Frederick. Looks like 8 to 10 bu per acre."

To make a call to a telephone in any of the above exchanges, look up the number in your Suburban Directory, then ask the Chicago local operator for the number wanted and remain with the receiver to the ear until the connection is established. If you have no Suburban Directory or you do not know the number, your local information operator will supply it. Names and numbers for these exchanges are not listed in the Chicago local directory.

The above list of "express points" is in addition to fifty-one other suburban exchanges near Chicago, shown on Page XI of the current telephone directory, service with which has been on this basis for several years.

Rates quoted above are for "Station-to-Station" calls. If the called telephone is answered the charge applies.

When a Person-to-Person, Collect, Messenger or Appointment call to any of these places is desired, call "Long-Distance" as in the past.

The pleasure is worth it. There's no substitute for Camel quality and that mild, fragrant Camel blend.

The fellow who smokes Camels, wants Camels. That's because Camels have a smoothness, a fragrance and a mildness you can't get in another cigarette.

Don't let anyone tell you that any other cigarette at any price is so good as Camels.

The New York Times.

New York, May 27.—[Special.]—The outstanding movement on today's financial markets was the decline of 6 cents in sterling exchange, which touched $3.86½ and closed at $3.87⅞, or 12¾ cents under the high rate of exactly a week before.

The violent fluctuations, which extended to foreign exchange on practically all European countries, were ascribed, in part at least, to preparations being made by Germany to pay through the reparations commission the first installment of her debt to the allied countries. Bankers could not remember a day when there were such violent plunges backward and forward and Wall street was mystified as to what is going on behind the scenes of the German settlement.

Commission Piling Up Dollars?

The theory most generally accepted is that the reparations commission is accumulating dollars by the sale of London, Paris, Rome, Amsterdam, Berlin and Madrid exchange. A few days ago it was officially announced the German reparations payments would be converted into American exchange because it is less susceptible to violent fluctuations.

Tuesday it was announced in Berlin that the German government on Saturday would send to the reparations commission at Paris twenty treasury bills of $10,000,000 each, as required by the treaty, by the end of May. The bills are indorsed by the big German banks. Of the total $80,000,000 is payable, according to this dispatch, in New York and $60,000,000 each in Paris and London.

The downward movement of exchanges is all the more mysterious to the financial district because of the strength of these same exchanges last week. Little more than a week ago the pound sterling crossed the $4.00 mark, with all checks on Paris, Rome, Amsterdam, and Berlin proportionately high.

New Rates Fluctuated.

An idea of the drastic fluctuaitons is to be gained by the following table, which shows the rates for checks on the principal countries in today's market at their high, low, and closing point and their declines:

	High.	Low.	Close.	Net chg.
London ...	$3.90¼	$3.86½	$3.87⅞	—.03⅜
Paris	8.40	8.15½	8.27½	—.11½
Rome	5.31½	5.18	5.22½	—.09
Amsterdam	34.80	34.45	34.48	—.40
Berlin	1.61½	1.57¼	1.59⅜	—.01⅜
Madrid ...	13.22	13.01	13.05	—.21

It was thought Germany herself might be engaged in the sale of dollars, but a canvass of the street tended to disprove this theory.

Stocks Also Decline.

The stock exchange, so far as it was influenced by the break in sterling, seemed to look on it as an unfavorable influence, which was an illustration of the extent to which economic ideas nowadays are turned upside down. Most of the noteworthy declines occurred in the industrial shares, and for the most part in those usually inactive. Studebaker and American Sumatra Tobacco declined more than 2 points each. Railway shares, as a rule, held firm.

STEEL & TUBE CO. EARNINGS HIGHER

Net profits of the Steel and Tube company, one of the big Indiana Harbor and South Chicago enterprises, in the year ended Dec. 31 last amounted to $6,315,209, after all charges, including a write-off of $2,563,217, against inventory values, according to the annual report issued today. This compares with net profit of $1,071,965 in 1919. The income account follows:

Net profits and other income....	$14,999,630
Shrinkage in inventory valuations, provision for federal taxes, etc.	3,857,280
Interest	1,797,713

Total surplus	12,227,283

The balance sheet shows current assets at Dec. 31 were $35,503,393 and current liabilities, including accrued taxes, were $12,219,077. Funded debt totaled $18,-[illegible].

HONESTY POINTS WAY TO REVIVAL OF TRADE—GARY

The New York and Chicago Stock exchanges will be closed today and Monday, over Memorial day. The Board of Trade and the banks will be closed Monday, but will be open as usual today.

New York, May 27.—Full return to satisfactory business conditions will be slow "until the minority of business men and workmen who have ignored the principles of common honesty" are "aroused to the necessity of sound and decent standards of conduct," according to Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel corporation.

Speaking today before the American Iron and Steel institute, Mr. Gary, who is president of the institute, said the American people are not buying enough to supply themselves fully with the ordinary comforts of life, although they have the disposition and the means to do so. This, he explained, was due to the opinion of the purchasing public that there has not been complete and proper readjustments of prices.

Await Further Price Drop.

"There is an abundance of new business," he said, "with both ability and inclination to place it, waiting for further adjustments which will put costs of living, selling prices, wage rates, and other general incomes on a relative parity. Patience, courage, and a fair disposition will bring satisfactory conditions in due time."

Present steel selling prices, Mr. Gary declared, will not permit any reduction until wages are further reduced. It would be unjust, he said, to reduce wage rates further before the costs of living are lowered.

Retail prices for many commodities are much too high, he said, adding that without justification workmen's wages in some cases have been advanced through reclassification designating them as skilled men.

"I think," he continued, "that unreasonable and unfair, if not extortionate, prices have been and still are charged and collected for certain commodities. They apply to particular lines and persons.

"The majority of business men and workmen are sincere and fair, but there is and perhaps always will be a minority that ignores the principles of common honesty. They are sufficient in number to affect the whole situation seriously."

Does Not Object to Control.

He urged that observance and enforcement of law be insisted upon throughout the world as a necessity to improvement of the general situation.

"If laws shall be enforced and peace maintained," he added, "the other questions relating to economic progress and achievement will be solved.

"If it should be deemed necessary and wise to have governmental supervision over organized industry in order to protect the public interest I personally would not object, provided the laws and rules shall apply alike to organized capital and organized labor."

The speaker asserted that one of the most hopeful signs of the times was the apparent disposition of the present administration at Washington to aid rather than obstruct the natural and legitimate progress of business.

Charles M. Schwab found a reason for being optimistic even under present business conditions. Forcing economies in production, he said, would benefit industry.

FINANCIAL NOTES

The Michigan securities commission in Lansing yesterday authorized the sale in Michigan of 200,000 shares of common stock of Durant Motors, Inc., at a price to be governed by the market quotation. The stock issue is to obtain working capital. The declaration says the nature of the business is "manufacturing motor cars, trucks, parts, and accessories, and holding securities in allied and associated companies."

The $6,000,000 Chicago Union Station company first mortgage 6½ per cent bonds, due July, 1963, which were offered yesterday at 101, were all sold and the books closed after a few hours, it is announced by the syndicate handling the issue. An issue of $3,000,000 twenty year 5½ per cent highway bonds of the state of Michigan also was sold in a few hours at 102½, yielding more than 5¼ per cent, by a syndicate including the Harris Trust and Savings bank, the Bankers Trust company, the National City company, Estabrook & Co., Remick, Hodges & Co., Stacy, Braun & Co., and Detroit banks.

The national board of fire underwriters reports that property valued at approximately $500,000,000 was destroyed by fire in this country last year.

The Buick Motor company is expected to announce reductions on all cars of its 1922 line on June 1, ranging from about $300 to more than $600.

The South Penn Oil company has declared a quarterly dividend of $3.00, against $4.00 a share previously paid. The dividend is payable June 30 to stock of record June 13.

TO HOLDERS OF
First Mortgage 4% 50-Year Gold Bonds
OF
Mason City and Fort Dodge Railroad Company:

Chicago Great Western Railroad Company has officially announced that the interest due June 1, 1921, on the above described bonds will not be paid.

The undersigned Committee in December last advised holders of the bonds that the payment of the June 1, 1921, installment of interest, as well as subsequent installments, was seriously imperiled and that a situation existed which made it imperative in the interest of the holders of the bonds to examine into the affairs of the Railroad Company and its operation, maintenance and management by Chicago Great Western Railroad Company, and to take concerted action for the establishment and enforcement of their rights and the protection of their interests.

A very substantial amount of the bonds has since been deposited with the Committee and the detailed examination referred to is now being conducted.

In compliance with the request of holders of undeposited bonds and in order to accord further opportunity to avail of the benefits of the Deposit Agreement, the Committee has extended the time within which bonds may be deposited thereunder, to and including JUNE 20, 1921, after which date further deposits will not be received except at the option of the Committee and upon such terms and conditions as the Committee shall prescribe.

It is deemed essential that the rights of depositors be promptly asserted and action taken with respect thereto, and the Committee urges those who have not heretofore deposited their bonds to do so immediately.

Bonds must bear the June 1, 1921, and subsequent coupons and may be deposited with THE NEW YORK TRUST COMPANY, 26 Broad Street, New York City, Depositary, or with THE ILLINOIS TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK, Chicago, Illinois, Sub-Depositary.

Temporary Certificates of Deposit will be issued exchangeable for permanent certificates when ready for delivery.

QUICK, WATSON! LOOK US UP A TRAIN TO GARY

BY AL CHASE.

If we could only get hold of Sherlock Holmes on the ouija board, maybe he could explain this latest mystery of the Calumet steel belt. We can't. Neither can the brokers. The bankers also profess ignorance. It has all the earmarks of a big story, and our hunch is that later on a good yarn will develop out of it. Here it is: The Inland Steel company, which has a big plant at Indiana Harbor, has just bought 580 acres in Porter county, bordering on the eastern city limits of Gary, from Mrs. Ida Crumpacker of Hammond, Ind., for $100,000. Peter W. Meyn of Gostlin, Meyn & Hastings of Hammond was broker.

As the Inland company several years ago bought a mile of lake frontage adjoining this new purchase through the same brokers, it now has a tract of 836 acres which it is said will be used to handle the wastage of the Indiana Harbor plant. The supposition is that later on a huge steel plant will be erected here. The Indiana Harbor plant is hemmed in by other companies and residences and normal expansion should be on the new site.

Gostlin, Meyn & Hastings also report the sale of three and a third acres in the Calumet industrial district at Hammond to the E. Popper Iron company, formerly in the Central Manufacturing district, for $3,500 an acre.

Drexel Boulevard Residence Sold.

What is claimed to be one of the finest modern residences on Drexel boulevard, at No. 4424, has been sold by Mrs. Elizabeth A. Ware to Ralph W. King, through James J. Parker & Co., for a reported $30,000. The lot is 100x377.

The Condensed Bluing company has leased the first floor of the two story building at 615-25 West 39th street for six years and eleven months at a term rental of $31,125 from Rosalie C. Griswold. J. H. Van Vlissingen & Co. and George Radulic handled the deal.

North Side Sale.

The property at the northwest corner of Wells and Hill streets, containing thirty-two flats and four stores, on a lot 80x140, has been sold by Robert W. Blair to Francis J. Kelly through the George W. Stewart company for a reported $150,000, subject to $45,000. Mr. Kelly gave in exchange a 485 acre farm in Porter county, Ind.

Another sale by the same broker was the eight apartment building at 1036-38 East 46th street purchased by W. H. Schendorf from Mrs. Dora Greene for a reported $35,000, subject to $18,500, giving in exchange a White county, Ind., farm.

RAILROAD NOTES

The Union Pacific yesterday asked authority of the interstate commerce commission to guarantee $14,755,500 first refunding mortgage bonds of the Oregon-Washington Railroad and Navigation company, which it owns, to be exchanged as part payment to W. A. Clark for his share of the Los Angeles and Salt Lake railroad, which the Oregon-Washington has arranged to purchase.

The date for completing transfer of the Denver and Rio Grande to the Western Pacific again has been postponed, this time to June 30, by federal court order.

Average daily car receipts for Chicago terminals during the week ended May 26 were 12,729, compared with 10,863 the previous week, an increase of 1,866. Deliveries were 11,636, compared with 11,678, a decrease of forty-two cars.

Two hundred members of the Chicago Passenger club, with their wives, will leave Chicago over the Wabash at 3 p. m. today in a special train for a three day trip to Niagara Falls, Toronto, and Detroit.

Numerous shipments of live cattle have been made this month by Chicago packers on the Furness-Withy and International Mercantile Marine lines to England. Most of these shipments have gone to London, Liverpool, or Manchester. Most were beef cattle. The shipments will continue until the present contracts are filled, which will be about the middle of June. It is the opinion of the ship operators that there will be little of this traffic after that time.

Choicest light hogs sold below the $8 mark yesterday, the top, at $7.90, being 35c lower than the previous day, and the lowest since January, 1916. With more than 43,000 in the pens, values declined 30@50c, closing at the low point of the session, with 10,000 left in the pens.

Competition on speculative account was lacking, which gave local packers all the advantage. The day's general average dropped 38c to $7.57, more than $1.00 below a week ago, against $14.70 a year ago. Armour and Swift droves cost $7.50.

Arrivals of hogs this week will reach 171,000, or 40,000 more than the ten year average and the largest in about fifteen years, comparing with the corresponding week in previous years. Quality this week was generally good, with pigs comparatively scarce.

Native beef cattle again met with a good demand, selling largely 10@15c higher than Thursday, due to small offerings and good shipping orders. No prime steers were offered, the best here selling at $8.80. Butcher stock and canning cows ruled weak to 25c lower, with feeding cattle barely steady.

Half the 7,000 sheep and lambs received were consigned direct to packers. Aged sheep sold at a further decline of 25@50c, with spring lambs steady to 50c lower. Most sheep are $2.00@2.50 below a week ago, with few ewes above $3.25. Top aged shorn lambs sold at $11.50 and springers at $12.00.

Seven western markets received 8,000 cattle, 67,000 hogs, and 17,000 sheep, against 11,000 cattle, 59,000 hogs, and 24,000 sheep the previous Friday and 12,000 cattle, 96,000 hogs, and 11,000 sheep a year ago.

Receipts at Chicago for today are estimated at 500 cattle, 5,000 hogs, and 6,000 sheep, against 2,123 cattle, 12,580 hogs, and 3,330 sheep the corresponding Saturday a year ago.

PRODUCE MARKETS

Heavy offerings of strawberries depressed prices 50c to $1.00 per case on some varieties. There were 58 cars on track and with quality of a good percentage of the offerings only fair, canners and peddlers had to be relied upon to clean up the market.

Fifteen cars of Florida watermelons were on the market here, with trade fair at $900@1,200 per car.

Butter prices were little changed, with a firm market in most instances at the leading cities. Offerings were ample, with trade not heavy.

Cheese sold freely in Wisconsin with twins and Americas lower and daisies and double daisies ¼c higher at Fond du Lac. No changes were made at Chicago or in eastern markets, with the trade quiet.

Egg and live poultry prices were unchanged with ample supplies and a moderate trade.

New potatoes declined 25@50c per 100 lbs more, despite the recent break. Arrivals were 25 cars. Old potatoes sold at 10@15c per 100 lbs, with trade slow. Arrivals were 32 cars and 238 cars were on team track.

American Gas.

J. G., Caledonia, Ill.—The American Gas company showed a large increase in gross earnings of subsidiaries last year, due mainly to increases in rates. A small increase in bond interest and large one in allowances for depreciation and amortization made a small decrease in net earnings. The holding company's surplus after all interest charges and expenses decreased to $12,352. Dividends were stopped after Sept. 1. The ten year convertible bonds due in 1928 are quoted at 71 bid, 74 asked.

Ventura Consolidated Oil.

L. V. L.—The Ventura Consolidated Oil Fields reported net earnings of $3.16 a share on 593,627 shares of no par value last year, compared with $1.49 on 501,217 shares in 1919. Of over $1,000,000 of notes originally issued practically all have been converted into stock. Dividends of 50 cents quarterly are paid. The stock has been selling on the Boston exchange at $18 to $19.

Brief Answers.

H. B., Los Angeles, Cal.—The Consolidated Textile company earned its note interest about three times over in 1920. The notes are unsecured. The company covenants to keep net liquid assets up to 150 per cent of the notes outstanding.

L. M., Omaha, Neb.—The By Products Coke corporation earned $952,144 in 1920, compared with $133,345 in 1919. The company is subject to wide fluctuations of earnings and its stock is rather speculative. Whether the new financing will depress the shares we cannot predict.

REVIEWS OF TRADE

Dun's Review of the Chicago trade, published by R. G. Dun & Co., says:

"Buying for fall has increased materially this week, the returns from road forces being such as to encourage wholesalers in the expectation of a good turnover for the season. Steadier price conditions have revived the confidence of merchants and the narrowness of the margin of supplies in some important staple lines of merchandise is an incentive to covering of future needs on a more liberal scale than has prevailed for some time. The bulk of business, nevertheless, is for immediate shipment, and the development, while significant, is not yet at such a stage as to mark a decided change of policy.

"Midsummer temperature gave an upturn to retail business early in the week, particularly lightweight knit goods, wash fabrics, oxfords, and headwear. Ginghams and percales are in good demand. Silks are slower. Grocery trade is steadier on the prospect of a light pack of canned goods this year, as compared with last; the movement of fresh food is heavy at good prices. The hide market continues strong."

"Current wholesale distribution of dry goods showed a marked increase in volume over last week, reflecting the excellent retail business which has accompanied the warmer weather. Road sales, while remaining at the same level of last week, exceeded the total of the corresponding period of 1920. There was a large increase in the number of mail orders received and in the number of out of town customers in the market. Collections continue satisfactory."

DRY GOODS MARKETS.

NEW YORK, May 27.—The largest manufacturers of cotton duck, in announcing today new and slightly higher prices, stated that if those values could not be met, the large group of mills centering in Baltimore would be closed. Cotton duck has been selling below the prices of the yarns from which it was made. Markets showed more price resistance in yarns, cloths, and wool goods. Burlaps were firmer in Calcutta. Silks were steady.

PAIGE REBUILT

When Bird-Sykes say "rebuilt Paige," they do not mean merely "shined up," "tightened up," and "tuned up." Rebuilt in the Bird-Sykes shop means taking apart motor, transmission and rear axle—measuring or testing parts to determine wear—replacing worn parts with new—rebuilding—adjusting—tuning up—repainting body—refinishing top and upholstery. That is why a Bird-Sykes rebuilt Paige satisfies the eye as a new car and its performance is the same as new.

Guaranteed by Bird-Sykes.

Every Rebuilt Paige is guaranteed by Bird-Sykes to be as represented and in perfect mechanical condition, and if anything turns out unsatisfactory within a reasonable time Bird-Sykes make it good without cost to the purchaser.

Easy Terms—No Brokerage Charge.

We do not ask our customers to pay the exorbitant rates charged by so-called automobile bankers in order to buy of us on deferred payments. You can buy a Bird-Sykes Rebuilt Paige on easy terms, paying only ordinary bank interest rates on deferred payments.

PAIGE LIGHT SIX, model 6-38, 5 passenger. Rebuilt and refinished dustproof gray, with red wheels. All good tires, 32x4, and extra, bumper and full factory equipment of tools. Upholstery excellent. A light, economical car at the bargain price of $875.

PAIGE 6-55, 7 passenger Sedan, 1920. One of those models you have admired, with the slanting wind shield. This beautiful sedan has been so carefully used that it did not need repainting, just a coat of color varnish. Handsome velour upholstery, looks clean as new, and you will be proud of this car in any company. This car sold for $3,650 without extras and has traveled only a few thousand miles, yet today in perfect condition and mechanically rebuilt, you can secure it for only $2,750.

PAIGE SPORT, model 6-55. Just rebuilt and refinished a deep sea green. Equipped with cord tires, bumper, etc. Top and upholstery excellent. We do not often have the opportunity to offer this model at such a low price. You should see this if you want a real car. Only $1,650.

PAIGE 6-42 COUPE, light 4 passenger. This is a demonstrator and is in the best condition imaginable. Has 5 practically new cord tires. Is painted standard blue. This model has been especially attractive to the ladies because of its easy handling and riding. A snap at $2,050.

CADILLAC'S 5 BARGAINS

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 57, VICTORIA COUPE. This is a roomy 4 passenger coupe, and probably the most popular model ever built by this company. It is equipped with an almost new set of cord tires and one extra. Painted a dark Cadillac blue. Upholstering and paint in good shape. Mechanical condition will bear most rigid examination and demonstration. Equipped with a spare tire, bumper, clock, and seat covers. Considering the general condition of this car and its equipment and the care and attention it has had by the original owner, this is by far the best bargain we have ever offered. Price, $2,350.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 55, TOURING CAR. This is an exceptional car as you will agree with us when you look at the paint, upholstering, and top, because they show but very little wear. It has not been driven a great number of miles and the original owner has availed himself of our service, which has preserved this automobile. We have done what mechanical work we have found necessary. Has an excellent set of cord tires, one extra, bumper, clock, etc. This we believe to be your best opportunity to buy a high grade Cadillac at the ridiculously low price of $1,500.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 55, CONVERTIBLE SEDAN. This is a roomy modern Cadillac car, in most excellent mechanical condition. Paint and upholstering exceptionally fine. Has an excellent set of cord tires, 2 extras, bumper, etc. We are very fortunate in being able to trade this car at this time. The former owner has given it remarkably fine care, and it has had very low mileage. We believe this to be the best bargain in a sedan we have ever offered. Price, $1,500.

COLE SEDAN, 1920. This is a standard 7 passenger sedan. In most excellent mechanical condition. Paint aand upholstering exceptionally fine. Has many extras, including an excellent set of cord tires, one extra, bumper front and rear, clock, Westinghouse shock absorbers, etc. If you want a Cole bargain our price on this car should interest you. Special for this sale, $2,750.

APPERSON TOURING CAR. This is the Anniversary Model. It is an exceptional car because it has been used very little. Excellent set of cord tires. Mechanical condition exceptionally fine. Motor runs very quietly. Has 5 wire wheels, clock, and extra tires. Paint is exceptionally fine. Top and upholstering are good. Car can be had for more than 50% reduction, and as it is a late series it puts this car in what might be termed the "bargain class." Price $2,000.

SHE WINS $1,000 IN THE TRIBUNE'S $20,200 BEAUTY CONTEST—Miss Mary Simmonds, 1129 Sunnyside avenue, carries off first prize for Chicago in the competition to determine who are the loveliest girls in the central west. Miss Simmonds is 22, and a clerk in the federal board vocational education bureau in the old Leiter building. "Animation, vivacity, the charm of daintiness and remarkably beautiful eyes" were the points that distinguished Miss Simmonds in the judgment of Pauline Palmer, Albin Polasek and J. Wellington Reynolds, the three artist judges. Miss Simmonds will qualify along with the other prize winners as a candidate for the $10,000 prize for the most beautiful girl of all. Pictures of the other Chicago beauties will be found on page 3.

MRS. HARDING LEARNS A THING OR TWO ABOUT TENNIS—Members of the championship Davis cup team were guests of the President and his wife the other day, and played three matches on the White House courts before a highly interested group of spectators. Mrs. Harding viewed the games with her secretary, Miss Laura Harlan (at the left), and Mrs. E. B. McLean.

JUSTINE JOHNSTONE has sailed for Europe, supposedly to confer with Ellen Key and Gabriele d'Annunzio. Her press agent says that her object is to persuade them to write plays for a company which she intends to head. "Fifth Avenue" will be the name of her first picture under her own banner.

Miss Johnstone is better known as a beauty than as an actress, though she has appeared in a number of pictures. Her work has been mostly under the direction of Famous Players.

BUSTER KEATON, who in his comedies is never known to smile, was born in Kansas. Can this be the reason? He went on the stage at the age of 16 years, playing in vaudeville. His screen career started under the direction of Paramount. For a long time he was just "also there" in the comedies. Now, you know, he heads his own company for Metro.

This dark young man, the chosen of Natalie Talmadge, is 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighs 140 pounds and is dark with brown eyes.

You see him often, but you probably remember him most favorably as the Lamb in "The Saphead."

Lake Michigan forms the triangle at the upper right, and the buildings most prominent are (1) the observatory, (2) the Patten gymnasium, (3) the Garrett Biblical school dormitories, (4) the Swift engineering building, (5) the Lunt library, (6) the administration building. MISS SUNSHINE by Harrison Rhodes

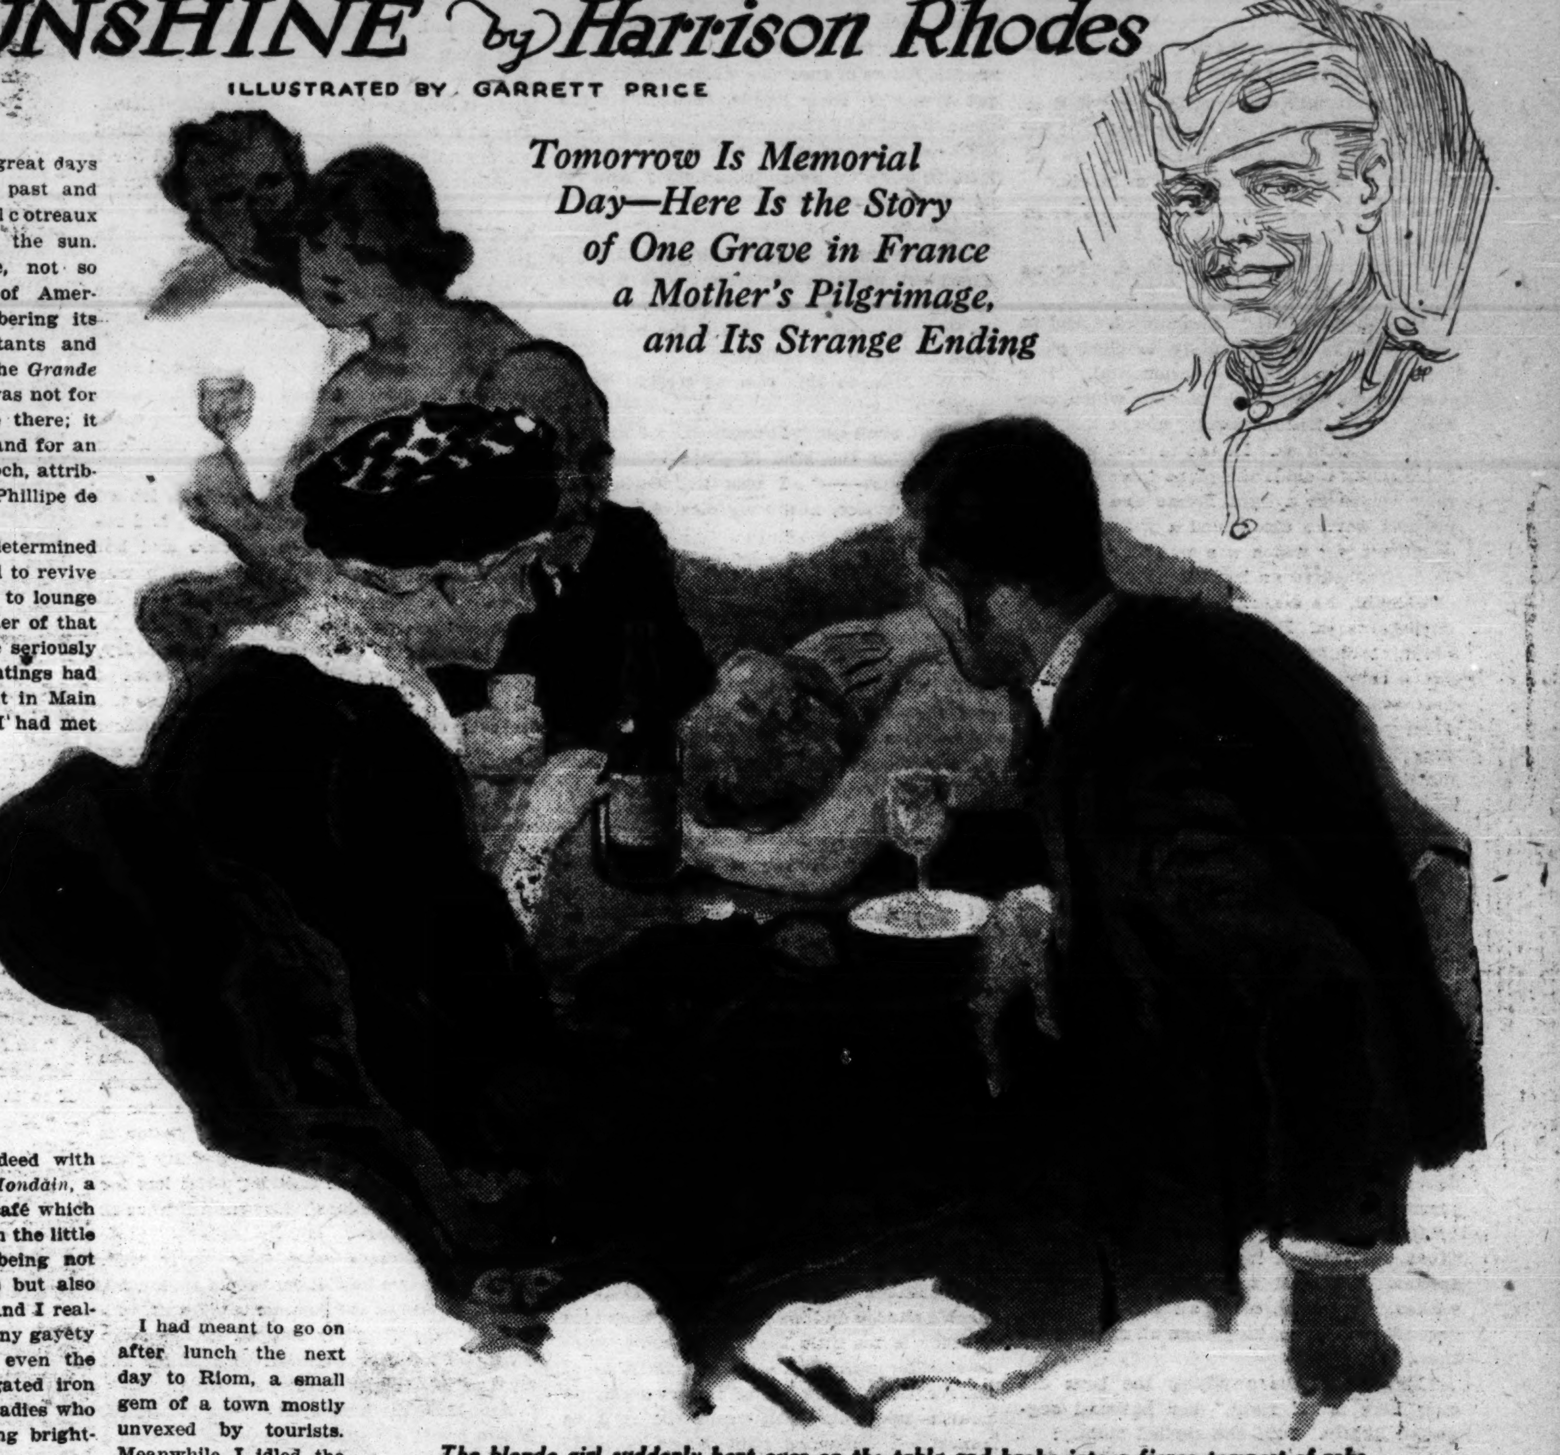
ILLUSTRATED BY GARRETT PRICE



Tomorrow Is Memorial Day—Here Is the Story of One Grave in France a Mother's Pilgrimage, and Its Strange Ending

The blonde girl suddenly bent over on the table and broke into a fierce tempest of sobs.

THE great days are past and Belcotreaux sleeps in the sun. Yet once, not so long ago, it was almost part of America, with boys in khaki outnumbering its simple provincial French inhabitants and swarming tumultuously through the Grande Rue—Main street, if you like. It was not for these memories that I had come there; it was rather for a Gothic doorway and for an altar-piece in the Church of St. Roch, attributed, quite falsely, I feel sure, to Phillipe de Champagne.

Indeed I had come to Europe determined not to visit battlefields, but instead to revive the days when it had been possible to lounge carelessly and happily in any corner of that admirable continent and to believe seriously that gray carvings and faded paintings had any importance in the world. But in Main Street—Grande Rue, if you like—I had met defeat. For in this picturesque curving thoroughfare in imagination one could not but hear the tramp of the boys' feet and hear their gay laughter as by night they must have come home from the Cabaret Mondain.

Faintly in the air still hung some pleasant perfume of that odd great republic of the west whose sons had once enjoyed the meager gayeties of Belcotreaux.

I say meager advisedly and indeed with special reference to the Cabaret Mondain, a peculiarly squalid and grim little café which I had discovered my first evening in the little city. I lay claim, however, to being not only an expert to town pleasures but also a philosopher concerning them. And I realized that in dull little Belcotreaux any gayety was better than none, and that even the desolate little salle with a corrugated iron roof and the almost more desolate ladies who occasionally "obliged" with a song brightened the night.

I realized also that with laughing crowds of boys in khaki, "seeing life" in France against all odds, the wretched place might indeed have sparkled. So much for Belcotreaux's poor pleasure center as we pass. We are to return to it.

It is indeed at the very heart of the small story I have to tell, a story which links Belcotreaux with a fairly inconspicuous village in Northern Ohio, a linking only possible upon a planet so absurdly small as we have all lately come to recognize this earth of ours to be.

My first evening—I had intended it should be my last—had been spent, as has been indicated, partly in the Cabaret Mondain listening to a lady ridiculously called Miss Sunshine—(a tribute, I felt, to the American occupation)—with a worn, dissipated, yet at the same time lovely and tragic face, sing ballads in that sharp, cracked voice of the café concert, partly in the Grande Rue watching the moon come up behind the Church of St. Roch.

I remember thinking that these two pleasures, though diverse, must have been those of many a boy by turns happy to be in France and homesick to be in America. And as I went slowly to bed with my broad window wide open upon the silent town I thought, as I had perhaps not thought before, of all the random memories of this fair land which must live in the hearts of young men at home who walk our American streets with no outward hint that they remember such towns as Belcotreaux—even Miss Sunshine and her songs, perhaps.

Such emotions and such meditations are not unusual; I lay no claim to their betraying any flash of genius. Yet I believe it to be true that the story of the interplay of influence—France upon America and America upon France—is not yet written nor even understood. The small tale I have to tell is only the slightest contribution to it.

I had meant to go on after lunch the next day to Riom, a small gem of a town mostly unvexed by tourists. Meanwhile I idled the morning away in Belcotreaux. There is nothing much to report except that it was market day—always an agreeable, bustling event in a small French town. I still believe the alleged Phillipe de Champagne to be not authentic. There is, however, a most pleasant, dirty tangle of narrow streets around St. Roch's church and by the river some lovely and unsanitary half-timbered cottages with the smallest dooryards imaginable, capable of holding, perhaps, two rosebushes or a half dozen of pink perennial phlox.

I always like lingering by a river's brim, and that morning I most contentedly did so, wondering idly whether to a philosophically minded young man, who was no longer very young, life in Belcotreaux, with a little fishing in the Trille, might be a career. But, as so often before, I ultimately decided in favor of West 59th Street and my view of Central Park and the rigors of the New York literary life and started back to the little Hôtel de l'Ecu de France to pack my bag, lunch heavily and well, I hoped, and catch the train. But it was otherwise appointed.

There were two absurd Americans carrying on a halting conversation with the proprietor of the hotel. I use the word absurd not because it expresses the truth at all, but because it reflects a somewhat snobbish mood that sometimes siezes us all abroad. Do we expect every traveling American to look as if he were the fine flower of international fashion?

I had even before I entered the hotel in an instant's glance at the dull old couple dismissed them as small town folk from the Middle-West. But in a moment, thank God, I asked myself where indeed I was from if not Ohio. I became an American again, even passionately so. And as I saw that she was in black and saw, too, by the faint pink that lingered on her faded cheek how pretty a girl she had once been long ago, I knew from past experiences that I was foreordained to be at least for a day her slave. It is not that even a sentimentalist exactly falls in love with ladies old enough to be his mother. But sometimes they remind him of a mother that was his own, or a grandmother, perhaps; they waken memories that he thought asleep. They bring back pictures of school and childhood back there in the American America; they bring, sometimes, tears. Somehow the not too smart dress of black made me guess.

As I stepped inside the door of the Ecu de France almost automatically I offered myself as their interpreter. The proprietor had only a little English. This interpreting is an old dodge of mine—my study of languages has nowhere more richly repaid me than in the ways I can in foreign parts scrape an immediate acquaintance with helpless practitioners of English only. Now again the trick—comparatively harmless, I believe—worked. In scarcely more than a minute I knew that he had been killed at Villebranche—their son. He had been the youngest, and the only one left.

This announcement left me oddly unprepared for what immediately followed it.

"We've never been abroad," said Mr. Stanley, "and so this seemed a good chance."

I must have looked a little dazed.

"We're having a fine time," he went on.

There was indeed something new under the sun, I reflected. And a queer, doubtful feeling crossed me towards the simple, quiet little pair I had only an instant earlier felt drawn to.

Perhaps in the moment's pause she divined that I had not understood.

"It's a sort of different tour from the ordinary that folks take," she said gently. "We have been to Jim's grave, of course—went there first. And now we're going to every place he ever was in France and trying to see everything he saw. We are having a fine time, as Mr. Stanley says. Jim had a fine time in France, and he would want us to."

"I see," I said gravely, and I think I suddenly did see. I saw also that Riom and the afternoon train could wait. I was almost prepared to think that the painting in St. Roch's was genuine and required further investigation. What, indeed, for the literary journeyman tourist is the luck of the road except the felicity of such chance human encounters? At any rate, I saw most plainly that the best lunch that the Ecu could manage would suit the occasion. As to the best wine, which is a light Pouilly, very agreeable indeed, I was less certain. I tackled the question timidly.

"Oh, yes," responded Mr. Stanley; "I'll try the wine of the country, sure. And I guess I'm in safe hands with you."

Again Mrs. Stanley interpreted him.

"He's like Jim; he wants to try everything. Of course" she went on, "at home

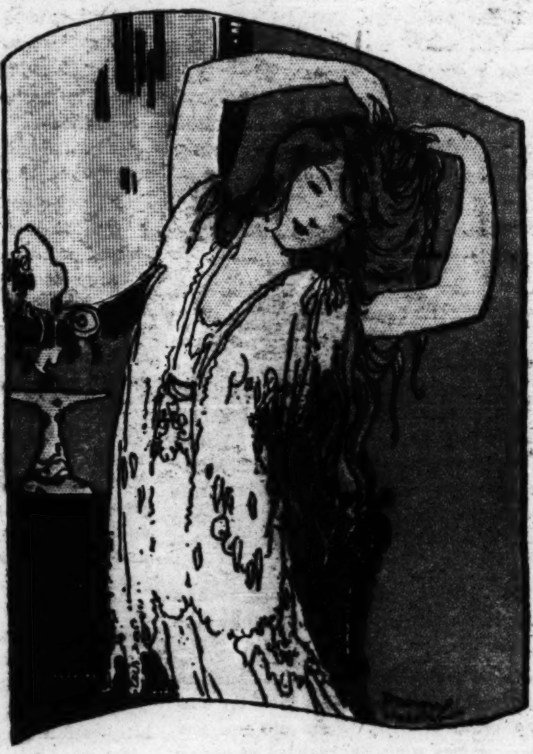
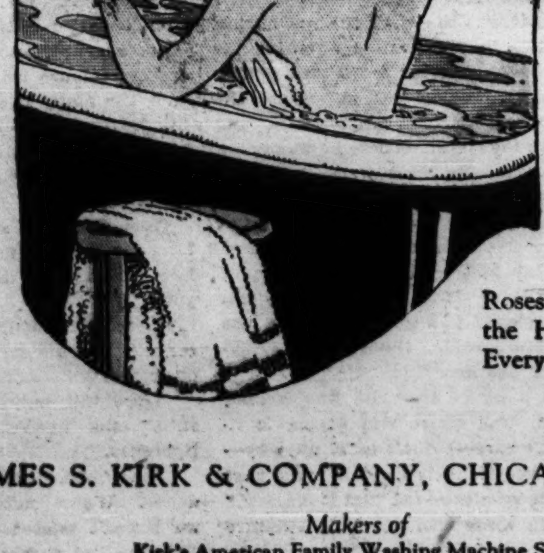
Makes the Complexion Beautiful

WE SAY IT AGAIN: "Real beauty lies in the skin, not on it." A beautiful skin means a healthy skin. And the skin cannot be healthy unless it is absolutely clean. JAP ROSE, more than any other soap, makes a beautiful complexion, because its absolutely pure oils heal, as well as cleanse the skin perfectly, and being wholly soluble, no sediment is left behind to clog the pores.



Makes the Hair Healthy and Soft

HOW quickly the rich froth of pearly, elfish bubbles appear. They cleanse every strand perfectly right down to the roots, then a dash or two of water and they are gone—every one. No hair left sticky and stringy, from undissolved soap, after a JAP ROSE shampoo—just soft, fluffy, clean and lovely. That's the difference with JAP ROSE. Every woman who's tried it knows.



And Is Wonderful for the Bath

NO Roman Emperor or Empress enjoyed the luxury of such a bath as you can enjoy with JAP ROSE. Its delicate rose scent is pleasing, its froth of elfish bubbles are so easily obtained, and how it heals and soothes the skin, as well as cleanses it, leaving no particle of undissolved sediment or dirt behind.

we wouldn't ever think of taking anything. Neither did Jim."

I encountered Jim's father's eye. It wavered amiably for a moment. I was, somehow, not so sure about Jim. I began to see him as handsome, gallant, gay, ready for life's dangers and sacrifices, but also for its pleasures—a happy lad who, like so many others, came across the Atlantic as if for a game. I hoped he had enjoyed Belcotreaux, and the light wine of the country and even the Cabaret Mondain. But I saw that I was committed, if necessary, to a men's conspiracy in face of his mother's sweet Ohio beliefs and tender, small town prejudices.

"Jim wrote us," she prattled on, "that it was the custom of the country and that he drank a little wine and liked it. So we do. Not that I like it very much, I'm afraid."

The little Pouilly was like liquid amber in our glasses. I raised mine.

"It isn't wrong, is it," I asked, "for us to drink—to him?"

"How could it be?" She smiled. And in her lightly raised, delicately touched glass there was something sacramental. Her cheerfulness wrought the miracle which, perhaps, it was, unconsciously, meant to. Jim was there with us. In the market place of Belcotreaux outside the plane trees twinkled their leaves in a light breeze and an aged peasant woman disciplined a young and recalcitrant pig which she was leading by a cord attached to its left hind leg, an agreeable sight, appreciated to its full by the inhabitants of Belcotreaux. And in our sunlit, clean, sparsely furnished salle à manger a couple of smiling, plain, overworked waitresses were busy. It was homely, brave, when you thought of what had passed, and very French. And somehow it seemed to me that a cheerful Yankee ghost sat with us there where he must often have sat, chaffing the plain, middle-aged waitresses who were doubtless in love with him, teaching them slang from home and singing them the songs from Broadway. Would he not now be drinking our health as we had drunk his in the little amber Pouilly? Would he not have slapped me heartily on the back and told me to see that dad and mother had the finest little old time that Belcotreaux could offer? Did he not do so now?

We sat in the sun outside for a while with coffee. As I imagined Jim would have suggested, with a dig at my ribs, I went slow with "the folks" and said nothing about liqueurs. But I lit a cigarette, with their permission, of course.

"It seems to me," remarked Mrs. Stanley, "that all America has changed about cigarettes. We used to think them awfully wicked. But now, since all the boys over here liked them so, they seem all right, don't they?"

"Mamma thinks anything the boys did over here is all right," her husband suggested lightly. And she replied stoutly:

"Yes. I do. At any rate, anything Jim did."

It was a speech I was to meditate upon later; at the moment I noted it with a smile.

They were tracing Jim backwards, meaning to end near Brest, where he had landed.

"I've been looking that city up in the guide-book," said Mr. Stanley, producing the usual red-covered volume. "It says a lot about this Brest," he went on, "but nothing about the mud, and the mud is about all Jim wrote about."

Jim's mother smiled slowly and from the bag she carried she drew forth her guide-book.

"His letters," she announced softly.

They had been bound together by the local binder at home, not too well perhaps. But there was an American flag, blowing in an evidently very stiff hurricane, inlaid in colored leather upon the cloth cover.

"It's her Baedeker."

"Her Bible——" I ventured.

"I don't think you ought to say that," she murmured. "I sometimes wonder if I'm wicked enough to think more of this book than the other," she went on, half to herself.

I daresay there is an answer to this speech, but I did not know it.

"I expect you are pretty wicked," was all I could find to say. Then, "Could one know anything of what he said about Belcotreaux?" I ventured.

One could. Indeed I heard more than it would be worth while reproducing here even if I had the book with the flag to copy from. Jim's gifts were not for writing, they were doubtless for life. There were quaint bits, of course. He had been into St. Roch's and seen my Phillipe de Champagne picture, and broached a theory, oddly enough, pretty sound as art criticism, that it was funny that a fellow named after such a lively wine should paint such a sober picture.

He had—this was an absurd coincidence—admired in the market-place an old lady struggling with a young porker just as we had that pleasant morning. He had a kind word to say for the small brimming river Trille, though the patience of elderly French fishermen "drove him crazy." He knew the Ecu de France and all the cafés—this was quite obvious—and, most intimately of all of them, the Cabaret Mondain. "Some cabaret," he denominated it—which it was, as I well knew.

"You'd laugh," wrote Jim, "if you saw the dump where I generally spend my evenings. Gee, even back in Lanesville we'd never stand for it, and they say the French are the Kings of Pleasure when they haven't got a war on their hands. Still, it's some place to go. And there are one or two pretty girls—mostly one—who is sorry for us fellows who are far away from home. And we do get lonely. Believe me, mother, I miss——"

Jim's mother stopped reading aloud here. There are unimportant passages in a boy's letters home which do not seem unimportant to the recipients. She closed the book and then turned to me smilingly.

"We'll go to this cabaret tonight—shall we?"

"Well, shall we?" I answered. "I wonder. It isn't just the kind of place where ordinarily ladies——" I was floundering on, when her voice, now very clear indeed, interrupted me.

"I don't mind going anywhere where my boy went."

"Oh," I murmured in confusion, "it's only that the songs sometimes—— But, of course, you wouldn't understand the songs and——"

"What I would understand," she explained—she now had to explain things to both her husband and me—"would be any one who had been sorry for my Jim when he was lonely for home and for his father and mother."

"I see," I answered. But I saw as well the tawdry Cabaret Mondain and the somewhat bedraggled beauties who sang hoarsely and then dispensed a discouraged gayety at the tables where they chose to sit. I saw poor "Miss Sunshine," her whitened face and painted lips, and the glory of her hair, tarnished and neglected gold, ruin of beauty, ruin of womanhood as Jim's mother had known it far away, back there. She would indeed be a strange priestess at the shrine which my friends meant to visit in the coming night. Yet was not everything which they found along their pilgrim's road a shrine?

I cannot pretend that my afternoon was wholly happy, though as cicerone I had never "personally conducted" any tourists more anxious to be pleased. They liked St. Roch's church and his picture, and they took a fancy to the little Trille. Yet some queer foreboding was on me, not exactly as of danger threatening, as of sorrow ready to pounce upon our little band. Must I be honest?—I consumed two glasses of porto blanc before I joined my friends again for dinner. Perhaps it was this port wine, perhaps it was the golden moon that rose, even lovelier than in the night before, behind the tower and flooded the little town with beauty and magic, perhaps it was some inveterate and inherited belief in goodness—and possibly in Ohio; at any rate, something at length abated my gloom. Had I not for a day become, too, a pilgrim on the way that led through France back from the little cross under which Jim lay to Brest and the blue water that stretched westward to America? And were not pilgrims always sheltered from harm?

We entered the Cabaret Mondain at the height, if there were one, of its dismal gayety. Monsieur Tic-Toc, a dwarfish little creature who, I am quite sure, cleaned the establishment's pots and kettles in the morning, was singing, with pathetic winks, the story of a young lady named Angelique to whom had happened things which would quite certainly not have happened to her in Lanesville, Ohio.

A party of French drummers whom I had earlier observed at the Ecu de France were going as far as a bottle of cheap champagne, and la grosse Mathilde, a powerful brunette, was making considerable play with them at a table nearer ours than I might have thought best. But fortunately the dark and somewhat overblown beauty was recalled to the small stage, where a slightly sentimental ballad, rendered in a deep, hoarse voice, might perhaps have made her seem a more serious person—had I not remembered suddenly that of course my Stanleys could not understand a word of it.

My seeming unconsciousness of any incongruity in the presence at the Cabaret Mondain of respectable and respected Ohioans was, of course, elaborate enough, yet I watched furtively the effect upon them. Mr. Stanley, let me be honest, would, left to himself, have experienced some of the thrills which go through the ordinary middle-aged American male at his first meeting with so-called pleasure, possibly vice, in France. I thought the lid of his left eye trembled almost as if it would have winked at me. Let me again be honest—he exists in our story, but he is not of it. It is a story of his wife, God bless her, and ever so little of me—and of "Miss Sunshine."

To the resort where I had inducted her my friend brought her innocent gayety. She applauded the songs which she could not understand. She urged a cigaret upon me. She even let a glass of beer sit in amber glory in front of her and once took a sip from it with somehow the air of a bird drinking at a sunlit woodland pool. She seemed all crystal, yet somehow as I watched her I wondered if there were not such a thing as a crystal mask which might make a face look smiling while a heart was breaking in its wearer's breast.

"I wonder," she said slowly—it was after that amazing sip at her bock—"which of these girls knew Jim."

"Perhaps none of them," I answered after a short, for me slightly awkward, pause. "There may have been other singers then. Probably a—well, a higher class when our boys were here."

"Perhaps," she replied. And she looked quietly at la grosse Mathilde, who had returned to her commis voyageurs and her cheap champagne. Monsieur Tic-Toc was consuming a grenadine with two poilus. It was Miss Sunshine's turn to sing.

The footlights made the paint less tawdry, lit up the yellow hair with a glow almost of real gold. On that wretched little stage the theater again wrought its ancient miracle and the remnants of beauty appeared for an instant in payment of our paltry admission fee.

"That's a pretty good looking girl, ain't she, mother?" I heard father murmur.

"Yes," she answered. "Pretty hair, ain't it?"

Her tone was cheerful, yet it seemed to me that the tranquil blue pools that were her eyes were faintly ruffled, as if a breath of air had stirred them for a passing instant. I thought I saw her hands clasped more tightly together in her lap. Do I sound like a detective? A kindly one, I hope. Again an odd unformulated premonition for a second caught me. But the only action it moved me to was the discarding of my glass of thinnish beer and ordering what has for so long been ingeniously known in France as un grog American.

Miss Sunshine's song went fairly well. That is to say a half dozen people applauded, including one of the commis voyageurs, who was at once playfully slapped by the large Mathilde for this attention to a fellow but rival artist. Esprit de corps! Hein?

And then the blonde singer (or blondined, if you prefer accuracy of phrasing) stepped a little farther towards the footlights.

"Un chanson en honneur des Americains!" she announced, and then translated:

"A song for honor to Americans!"

There was something quaint and piquant in the accent. There was something so pleasant in the way she addressed herself to our little party! As earlier the magic of mere footlights had made her fairer, so now this friendly courtesy, this poor little international amenity, made her younger. The kind of life she was leading ages women. I suddenly realized that she had been not so long ago a girl—and lovely. Perhaps when Jim had been——

"I love my love in the springtime——" she began. The pronunciation of the o's was odd. But her voice softened from its habitual rasp and a little of the tenderness of the hackneyed ballad was in her interpretation. Even the grosse Mathilde and Monsieur Tic-Toc gave her a negligent attention. Even I was for a moment transported back across the Atlantic, perhaps not quite to Ohio, but to a simplicity which for the moment stripped my cosmopolitanism from me and the sophistication which I too often fondly imagined was mine. Almost unconsciously I turned to the lady of our party. She sat smiling at the stage, her eyes rapt and tender, yet down her cheeks, so faintly pink, frank and unabashed tears slowly flowed. She put her hand affectionately on my arm and murmured softly:

"Jim used to sing that so much. He had a lovely voice."

"Ah, had he!" and I, perhaps to hide my emotion, turned back to the lady on the stage. The song was finished and we managed to make a small tumult of applause which might almost have recalled the fine days of the Cabaret Mondain when nice larkish, khaki-clad boys had sat where we now were and cried for more.

"I learn ze song from American poilu," she announced. She smiled, shook the over-golden hair with coquetry, and waved her hand gayly at the "American poilu's" compatriots. Yet was I mistaken? Did a tear, also frank and unabashed, flow slowly down her cheek, so brazenly red?

"I wonder if she'd sit at our table," said Mrs. Stanley in a clear, low voice. "You could order her a glass of beer, pa. Or," and she smiled at me, "whatever queer thing that is you have."

Two fat local gentlemen made the girl an equally handsome offer, it is to be presumed, as she emerged from the little door at the side of the stage, but she came straight to us, almost as if she knew that we, too, would pay for an American grog if she liked.

"You like ze song?" she asked.

"Yes, I liked the song," said Jim's mother. "I want to ask you a question," she went on. I felt, and I imagine her husband felt, that matters had been taken out of our hands.

"Did you—did you know my son?"

The girl looked puzzled. She turned to me, who translated. Miss Sunshine gave a light laugh. She shrugged her shoulders.

"How should I know?" she asked. "I saw so many, knew so many."

"He sang that song," began the older woman. "It his song," she went on, using the pathetic broken English which we all suppose makes the matter easier for foreigners. And to my astonishment she began and sang softly with a queer old voice the first line:

"I love my love——"

But she could not go on. Slowly she opened a netted bag of black and drew out a picture. It was in a small silver frame, and the faithful American flag in cheapish enamel was draped at the top. Jim looked at us cheerfully. Miss Sunshine stared at him. What she felt I could not have said, but I felt something icy clutching at my own heart.

"Il était votre fils?" asked the girl slowly. She sounded calm, even hard—or brave, was it? I saw her hands tighten on the table's edge. She started to rise, then changed her mind. Something new swept over her face, over which so many emotions had already surged.

"Votre fils," she repeated, almost angrily now. "He is in America, je suppose."

"In America!" Jim's mother made a funny helpless little gesture with both hands, as if to indicate the black she wore.

"Il est mort," I found myself saying, and then, quite preposterously, as if I needed to translate it, "He is dead."

The blonde girl caught the photograph again and stared at it half dazed for a second, and then suddenly bent over it on the table and broke into a fierce tempest of sobs. It was not opportune for Monsieur Tic-Toc, who was at that moment recounting in song the adventures of a partie carrée bourgeoise who had taken a trip from Paris to Dieppe. He hesitated and then finished his couplet and stopped—we were never to know to what point the liveliness of Madame Broiche led her. For an instant there was an embarrassed silence in the salle. Then the grosse Mathilde got up—she was not so bad after all—and put her hand on her fellow artist's heaving shoulder.

"What can I do for you, dear one?" she asked. What are rivalries to artists but things to forget?

The yellow head was raised a little. Is it not odd the things one remembers?—at that moment I noted how dark her hair was at the roots.

"Make the concert go on!" she appealed.

Was it not the old courage of the theater, even of the theater's dregs? I believe if it had been necessary to save the day—the night, to be accurate— the stricken Sunshine would have gamely sung herself, probably even a gay and comic song. But the dark Mathilde took up the burden. Her performance was, as it were, a recall of the audience to manners. They all knew that it was kindness to seem oblivious of our sorrow, to let two continents mingle their tears at this obscure provincial café table. For there were tears enough flowing as well from Jim's mother's eyes. Yet I like to remember that she remembered what we others forgot, that the promised grog had never been ordered. Back there in Ohio she would have made the girl a "nice cup of tea." The grog was only the nearest thing she could think of in this strange remote France, where all her life now seemed to lie. I smiled, but there were tears enough in my own eyes as well.

I would rather not write too much of the next few minutes. I have, of course, invented the names of Belcotreaux and Stanley—yet somewhere in France the moon does rise behind the tower of St. Roch's church, gilding a girl's hair a still yellower gold. Somewhere in Ohio there are two lonely people who were once pilgrims in France. The girl—Alphonsine was really her name—had only a little of the English speech, they almost

"I'm a goner." She jerked her horse violently out of the road; Laramie had raised his voice and kept right on talking: "Turn your back, Van Horn—you, too, Stone. Shoot up your hands, you Texas—higher!" he called to one of the Texans. And with the words not out of his mouth, he leaped as if one springs to his feet. It seemed as if his rifle covered his enemies all the time, even while he was doing it.

With his head forward, his elbows high, and the Winchester laid against his cheek; stepping like a cat, and swiftly and with his eyes fixed on the men ahead, Laramie walked toward the wagon. In doing so he approached Kate, whose horse had subsided. Laramie took no note of her. She only heard his words as he passed: "You'd better get out of this." Approaching his prisoners in such a way they could not reach either the gate or the wagon without crossing his fire, Laramie compelled Bradley, really nothing loath, to disarm the three cowboys in turn and drop their guns into the wagonbox. Stone, sullen, was gingerly approached by Bradley, under strict orders to keep out of reach of his arms. But the old man knew all the tricks of the play being staged, even though he was not able to turn them. And when Stone, cursing, was ordered to lower his right arm and hand his revolver to Bradley at arm's length, the old man's feet were planted at least six feet from the foreman for a jumpaway in case Stone tried to clinch him and shoot at Laramie from behind Bradley's cover.

But after he was disarmed, Laramie was not through with Stone. Sullen and obdurate, he was ordered to face away, while Bradley from behind searched his pockets. And the crown of his abasement was reached when Bradley drew from a hip pocket a full flask of whisky. The material advantage of the find was not great, but the tactical advantage was enormous. Behind Stone, Bradley, silently but jeeringly, held it up as an exhibit for the thirsty Texas men; and to show it was full, uncorked and with gusto sampled it. Stone was ordered back to his horse.

"How long is this joke, Laramie?" sang out Van Horn, his humor oozing: "Can't you frisk a few cowboys in less than all day?"

"When I frisk a pair of cutthroats with them, it's different."

"Well, don't waste your valuable time on me. This is your innings—I'll wait for mine."

"Drop your gun to the ground," returned Laramie. "Pick that up, Bill," he added to Bradley as Van Horn threw his revolver contemptuously from its holster. He was searched with the same scrupulous care by old Bradley, his morale greatly strengthened by Stone's flask: "I don't give a d—n whether you get me or not," he retorted at Van Horn, in answer to a low threat from his victim.

Laramie having told Van Horn to mount, turned to the Texas men: "Which one of you boys wants to carry the rifles over to that big cottonwood for me?" he asked, pointing toward the creek.

"I do," responded the nearest man, promptly.

"Don't you do it, Tex," called out Stone.

The Texan eyed his foreman: "Why not?" he demanded. "Ain't I been ridin' this country all day squealin' for a drink, an' you had a pocket full of it all the time? I'm through with my job."

Laramie broke in without losing the precious moment: "Who set my house on fire, Tex?" he demanded.

The Texan nodded in Stone's direction: "Ask him."

"He'd lie, Tex; I'm askin' you."

The rawboned horseman hesitated: "I'll talk that over with you when I'm rested," he drawled.

"Go get your Colt's out of the wagon, Tex." Laramie pointed the way. "Pick out the guns of the other two boys and tote them over to that tree with you. The boys'll ride over there after you. Tell Barb I'll give him twenty-four hours to get every hoof, round or split, that belong to me back to the Falling Wall—failing which I'll be over to talk to him privately. Will you do that, Tex?"

"I sure will."

"These rustlers here," he looked toward Stone and Van Horn, "won't be able to carry messages for a while. They're ridin' to town with me. Bill," he added, turning to Bradley, "dump their rifles into the wagon and follow on along."

"What's this?" snapped Van Horn with an oath. "Going to town with you! Not on your life."

"You're headed for jail tonight, Harry; that's all. You boys," he spoke to the Texans and gave no heed to the oaths and abuse from Van Horn, "ride down to the cottonwood and get your guns from Tex. There's two good trails from here to town and plenty of room on both. Today I'm riding the Double-draw bridge. If any of you are going to town, take the other trail. Lead off now, you two."

He spoke to Van Horn and Stone, both mounted, and with the two headed for town, and the Texans started up the road, Laramie climbed into his own saddle. Not until then did he look around for Kate. She had disappeared.

A DUB AT GOLF

one day, almost the first of September, came a most unfortunate episode. It was the day upon which this story began—when Jack said "Damn," and then "Damn" again, and, discouraged, had sought the shelter of the trees by the ninth tee. He had finished mopping his face, and was gazing over the stretch in front of him, abstractedly, when a voice at his side startled him into attention.

"Good afternoon, Mr. Howells," said the voice, and he looked up. There, with a golf bag slung over her shoulder, stood Alice Woods, one of the girls who most especially wanted to carry on a flirtation with Jack. Jack rose mechanically, and, prompted by some innate politeness, relieved her of her bag.

"You are playing around?" he questioned lamely, not knowing what else to say.

"Not around," she answered. "That is, I didn't start at the beginning. Just thought I'd cut across from our cottage and begin at the ninth hole. I happened to see you playing the eighth hole. You seemed to be in difficulty." She smiled up at him with a smile that was meant to fascinate. "You're a little off your game today, aren't you?" And she smiled up at him again. This time there was something in the smile that was altogether too knowing. Jack quailed before it.

"Yes, yes-er-it is," he stammered. "I'm not what you'd call a crack player, anyway," he went on.

Coming down the fairway to the eighth green was a figure, which by a familiar costume was unmistakable. Jack did not see the figure—he was too embarrassed to notice anything. But Alice did see it. The figure was Margaret Evans, Alice Wood's greatest rival.

Alice had many conquests to her credit that summer. She was the kind of girl that men like to flirt with. She had flirting down to a fine art, and there are men who like that. But, try as hard as she could, she had not been able to make John Stuart Howells bow down before her. The failure rankled. Jack was worth catching, but he was indifferent. And it was all on account of that girl, Margaret Evans. She simply monopolized him. What right had she to monopolize the best looking car and one of the best looking men in the club? Jack didn't love Margaret—she knew that. Her brother had been one of the men who had teazed Jack, and he told Alice the conversation in the locker room about "pals."

"Pals," Alice had echoed to herself with disgust. "Why that girl is head over heels in love with him and is hanging on to him so hard that one hardly dares to say 'Good evening' to him. But he doesn't love her." And so Alice had tried to win him for herself. She tried, oh, so hard, but Jack wasn't susceptible to her charms. He wouldn't flirt with her, and so Alice had given him up. Therefore Margaret, who monopolized him, must suffer.

Now on the golf course Alice saw her chance to make mischief. Jack was still looking at the ground in embarrassment, trying to think of some way of getting rid of Alice. Alice was speaking.

"No," she said, and as she talked she kept watch on the approaching figure, "No, you aren't a very good player, if you don't mind my saying so. I believe in frankness, don't you, Mr. Howells? I have often watched you playing from our cottage. We have an excellent view of this part of the course, and I have noticed," the figure was coming nearer—she must hurry— "I have noticed that you have some difficulty in hitting the ball."

She paused and smiled siren like at him, for he had raised his head and was looking at her in alarm.

"You have watched me?" he questioned, falteringly.

She nodded, and with the corner of her eye perceived the figure to be putting.

"Then you know?" he asked.

She nodded again, "I know," she said, "that you are a rotten golf player. And now that you know that I know, we can play this hole together and I won't tell a soul."

Jack started to remonstrate, but he felt helpless. This girl knew his failure. There was nothing to conceal.

"I'm all alone," she was saying, "and if you won't play with me, Mr. Howells, I shall punish you by telling the whole club your secret," and she smiled again. "Come on, perhaps I can give you a pointer or two."

Mechanically, Jack took out his driver, and was about to tee up, when the figure joined them. Alice had timed her triumph well.

"Hello, Margaret," said Alice cheerily.

"Hello," said Margaret. "Didn't know you were playing today, Jack," and she looked first at him and then at Alice with a question in her eyes.

"Just a few holes," he said in confusion.

"Don't wait for us," Alice said to Margaret, "We're taking a little rest before tackling the ninth. Warm day, isn't it? But you are tireless, we all know. We amateurs have to take it easy. So long. Suppose I'll see you at the club tonight."

Margaret said nothing, but turned quickly to the tee. She felt her cheeks becoming hot, and she wanted to get away. She drove off with a fine stroke, and walked towards the distant flag with a quicker pace than was customary.

On the bench Alice sat beside Jack with triumph in her heart. She knew that Jack could not explain to Margaret unless he told her about his golf. She really didn't care what he told her. She couldn't get him, but she had made it uncomfortable for Margaret. As for Jack, he was dumfounded, speechless, and altogether miserable. Like an automaton he played that ninth hole with Alice, and then excused himself on the strength of an engagement.

But of the two whom Alice had hurt, it was Margaret who suffered more. Perhaps it was woman's intuition, perhaps it was only a good guess that made Alice Woods think that Margaret was "head over heels in love" with Jack. Whichever it was, it was true. A "pal" Margaret was to her friend, but deep down in her heart she know that che loved him. And she knew that Jack did not have that same feeling for her. At least he had never spoken of love. He gave her the affection due a "pal," and with that she had forced herself to be content.

There was always the comfort that he seemed to love no one else. To her he gave all his time, except when she played golf, and then she trusted him utterly. Now, today, to find him playing golf with another girl, when he had absolutely refused to play with her because he liked only to play alone! And the girl—the biggest flirt in the club—a girl who always had been anything but pleasant to her! It was too much. Jack was a traitor. He had deceived her.

"Probably he played every day with this—this creature!" she sobbed, when she reached her room, for she had rushed home from the ninth green, and was crying out her sorrow to the unresponsive pillows on the bed.

At the customary hour Jack had the car in front of the clubhouse to take Margaret for her ride. He waited half an hour, and when she didn't come he made inquiries and found that she had gone home. With apprehension in his heart he hurried to the Evans' cottage, and saw Mrs. Evans on the porch. Asking for Margaret, he learned that she was in her room.

"Then I shall call tonight and take her to the dance," he said.

But he called in vain. Margaret did not intend to go to the dance. This was the first one they would have missed. Jack returned in gloom to the clubhouse where he lived. When the dance was well started he went down to watch. But rather to his surprise he found that he was not happy. Margaret was not there. For the first time in two months he was to spend an evening without her, and the prospect was uninviting and desolate.

He tried to shake off his oppression. Why not go in and dance? There were plenty of girls. Without Margaret? He couldn't. A dance without Margaret? Why it was incredible. How could those people laugh and chatter as though Margaret were there? Didn't they know? Were they not aware that the spirit of the party was absent?

Suddenly he realized that Margaret was a necessity. This question leaped into his confused mind. If a dance was empty without her, what was life were she not always there? While he stood there watching the dancing couples a great truth came upon him. In agitation he walked around the piazza to the front of the clubhouse, and started down the steps. Where he was going he didn't know. He must walk—hard and fast—and think this thing over.

Above all he wanted to find Margaret and talk to her. He wanted to tell her everything, even about the golf. What was golf compared to love? If she wouldn't love him because he played bad golf, why then she wasn't the Margaret he thought her. Anyway, he must see her.

Just then a figure in white was coming up the path. The figure was saying to itself, "I don't care—I don't care, anyway—but I must see if he is dancing with that horrid Woods creature—not that it matters." The figure in white was trying to reassure itself.

Jack's heart absolutely stopped beating. He stepped down, and the light from the lanterns shone upon his face. The figure in white saw him, and with a cry of dismay turned and ran. It ran toward the golf course which the full moon lit up with a white light, and it sped on with a swiftness that Jack could not equal. Across the moonlit course they flew—pursuer and pursued—and every once in a while the figure in white looked back to see if the man still followed. Suddenly, the figure, in the excitement of the chase, not watching where it was going, tripped in a bunker, and lay panting against a pile of sand. Before it could scramble to its feet, Jack was at the bunker.

"Margaret," he gasped, and sank down beside her. For a minute or two neither spoke. They were too out of breath.

Then, "Margaret, why didn't you come to the dance with me tonight?"

Now, Margaret had made up her mind that never would she mention the episode of that afternoon. She, also, was proud, and jealousy was a fault. It was because she forgot herself that she answered, "Because you would not play golf with me today."

And Jack had made up his mind that he would confess his fault to her, and so he said:

"Margaret, I have a confession to make. I have deceived you." Margaret shivered, and thought of Alice.

"Margaret," he went on, "I— I— (O, hell, how can I say it)," he thought. "Margaret, I'm a dub at golf. I can't play at all," he hastened on, speaking hurriedly and looking at the sand. "I've tried all summer to learn the game, but I'm a failure, a rotten failure. That's why I've never played with you—I've been ashamed of myself. I dreaded your scorn. I thought I could go on deceiving you. But I couldn't. I'm a failure," he reiterated, and looked at her appealingly. But she sat staring quietly ahead of her at the lighted clubhouse.

"And Alice?" she whispered faintly. But Jack heard it, and wrath filled his soul.

"Damn Alice!" he shouted. "Horrid, flirtatious little fool. She saw me playing this afternoon and threatened to tell the whole club if I didn't play that hole with her. I had to do it because I didn't want you to know."

"Margaret," he went on gently, and he took her hand. "Margaret, dear, I love you."

Margaret did not speak, but Jack could feel a pressure from her fingers. They sat thus for many silent minutes, each dreaming dreams in which they were both together for always and always, while the summer moon shed its light on those two who had found each other.

Then Margaret spoke. "Jack, you have been a long time finding love. I found it a long time ago. I think I have always loved you."

"Dear little pal," he whispered. "We can still be pals even though we are lovers, can't we?" he asked.

"Love will only strengthen our friendship," she answered, and their fingers tightened.

"Jack," she said a minute later, "let's go dance. We musn't break our record, and we haven't missed a dance this summer." They walked slowly towards the clubhouse, arm in arm.

"And tomorrow," announced Margaret, "I shall give you a golf lesson. Will you let me, old dear?"

"I will," he answered, "if you will give me a kiss for every ball I miss," and they laughed like [illegible] no French. I translated a bit, my old job, not so gay now—I translated more than I intend to write.

There was a thin gold chain around her neck and somewhere hidden, somewhere nearer her heart and warm from it, was a pleasant gaudy locket and in it a picture of the finest young man in the world. It needed nothing to persuade any of us that she had loved Jim. But how much had he loved her, I asked myself?

I looked around the Cabaret Mondain and at the streaked face where tears had washed the paint away. A cheap locket and a kodak and a kiss for good-by, and then on gayly to another Belcotreaux and other kisses and so to death—was that not probably all it had meant to the gallant Jim?

What it had meant to Jim was, however, not the real question; rather what it now meant to Jim's mother. I saw her give one slow, bewildered survey of the music and dance hall. And yet I realized that what she asserted earlier was indeed true of her—that anything Jim did was all right. The cheap locket was for her proof enough. Here was where she had found the girl her boy had loved.

It must have been different from what she had dreamed, probably ever since Jim who was to die as a soldier had lain as a baby in her arms. She must have seen a sweet girl from their own town, and a wedding, and a small white wooden house in the village, and grandchildren. And now she and papa, who might have been grandpa, were adrift in France, and a strange, tawdry, oddly beautiful creature sat opposite to them in an only half reputable café drinking a steaming grog and talking to them of their boy in spite of her halting English with a kind of flaming passion that perhaps the sweet girl from Ohio might not have shown so—was it so brazenly?

If I could not really search my compatriot's heart, neither could I that of Alphonsine. What, we may well ask, could she guess of Ohio? Indeed, as my story proceeds I see more plainly how little it is founded upon assured knowledge and how much upon cloudy guess and inference. Yet it may well be that guess and inference, however cloudy, serve women better than they serve us. It may well be that there are many miracles worked by love, that it can make a little woman from home understand more of the life of a painted café chanteuse than she is likely to admit to any men. Indeed, as I confessed earlier, I write with ignorance, but I am trying to write with sympathy.

Miss Sunshine left us a moment; the manager had beckoned to her and she probably meant to repaint after the ravages of tears. While she was gone Mrs. Stanley's slow but noncommittal glance again appraised the Cabaret Mondain.

"Seems funny," she said meditatively at last, "to think of Jim's girl working in a place like this."

How working did she think or mean, I wondered? But I said nothing. And Monsieur Tic-Toc sang another song. As it finished Mrs. Stanley murmured:

"I suppose she'd think Lanesville a queer place."

Even in the genuine solemnity of my mood I stifled a laugh at the thought. But somehow I did not laugh when I heard her again talking to the girl herself. I shall not try to reproduce accents and I shall not report all the actual words.

"You like this?" began the other woman.

I thought the girl flushed underneath her pink and white coating.

"Why not?" she answered, and her voice grew a little louder and harder. "Faut vivre—I must live, mustn't I?"

Then, lower but steadily:

"I've no regrets. If I hadn't been—well, what I am and working here, I shouldn't have met your son."

"Yes. But now——?" urged Mrs. Stanley.

"Faut vivre," was again the answer.

It was incontrovertible. She must live as much as any of us.

And then the dear old thing from back there home rose, I think, to heights in one simple speech of consecration, of atonement on Jim's behalf perhaps, of a divine tolerance, or if not that, of an ignorance equally divine.

"Wouldn't you like to come back with us to see where Jim was born and raised? And stay on if you could stand it? It would be better than this. I think it would be more what Jim would like."

Was it to be expected that the poor Miss Sunshine should understand at once? Or that she should ever understand all the implications? But I believe that somehow she understood that an Ohio village was not possible for her, and that in whatever strange spirit these queer people asked her to come to it, it would not be real kindness to them to accept? Was she protecting their ignorance? Was she, too, in the recesses of her heart, protecting Jim's memory, doing what she thought he would like? Any one may judge as well as I. I tell only the few words said.

"I could not leave," she said. "You see, I have a little child."

I caught my breath. It was Mrs. Stanley alone who gave an answer.

"Is it——" she began very gently, and she paused an instant. It seemed to me that I could almost hear our four hearts beat. Finally the girl slowly shook her head.

"No," she said, and her smile was bitter sweet.

Did she tell the truth? I for one shall never know. But I suspect that for that little instant she stood with the other woman on the heights.

And my dear old friend—was she glad? Glad to know her boy stainless? Or did she in that moment see fade forever the vision of the grandchild she might have held in her arms if her boy had lived and——

"May I see him tomorrow?" was all she asked. "I like little babies so."

This is, I think, almost all of the story which I shall tell. I had a telegram from Paris which called me back. I never saw Riom. I have not as yet seen any of those concerned again. I was not in New York when the pilgrims passed through on their homeward journey. But I can say that the Cabaret Mondain lost a singer—no great loss—and that one of the friendly associations which in Paris dispense American aid to ravaged France helped a girl and her child back to the village her mother had come from, in the hill country toward Le Puy, and established her as lessee of the little Estaminet des Deux Lapins—the little Inn of the Two Rabbits, a business which Alphonsine said she might be some good at.

I had at Christmas-time a picture post card. It had been taken in summer and the little garden was abloom. You could see the kid, too, pretending he could walk. He carried in one hand a tiny French flag and in the other the Stars and Stripes. As he had a right to, for it was kind Americans who had saved his mother from comic songs. He will be, I think, always a friend of America.

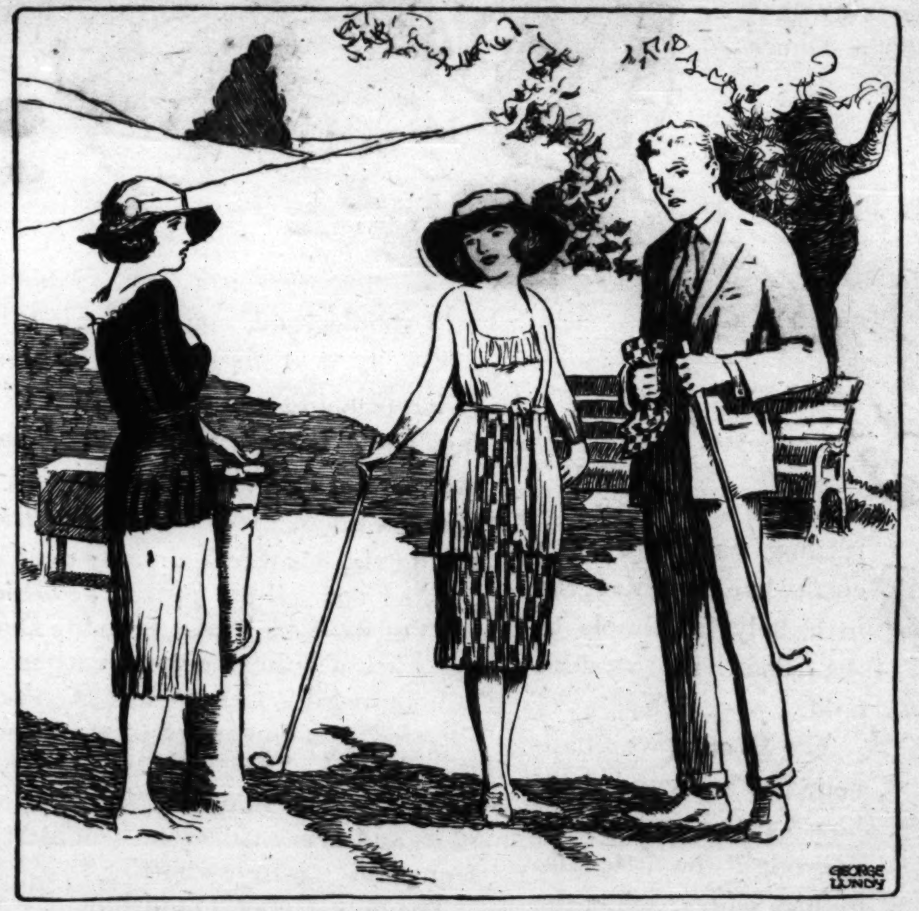
A DUB AT GOLF

The Tale of a Secret Sorrow

By Alva Taylor

Miss Taylor is the daughter of the late Bert Leston Taylor—B. L. T., of the Line. This is her first story.



"Don't wait for us. We're taking a little rest before tackling the ninth hole. Warm day, isn't it?"

"DAMN," said Jack Howells, as a clod of earth flew high into the air and the small golf ball lay untouched at his feet. And then, "damn" again. "Confound this stupid, idiotic game, anyway! Why in the name of all that is decent do I keep on trying? I can't play golf, I never will be able to play golf, and yet I hate to let a little pill like you," this straight at the dimpled offender beside his foot, "get the better of me."

As he stood thus, talking to himself and the little pill, Jack Howells realized that the sun was blazing hot, and that there was a seat under the trees at the ninth tee, a few yards away. Certainly that seat would be better than standing there in a heavy perspiration, swinging at a ball that never seemed to connect with his club, or if it did connect, never went more than two yards, except sometimes to sail far into the tall grass. That always meant a lost ball, because Jack never took a caddie with him, for the reason, as he put it, that "he wasn't going to furnish a free vaudeville show for any little rowdies on the golf course."

This was the first summer of Jack's golfing. Almost at the end of the summer Jack's game was as rotten as when he began. Now, you must not think that John Stuart Howell's was stupid, or inefficient, or good-for-nothing. On the contrary, although but five and twenty, he had already embarked upon a successful business career, after having graduated with a most creditable record from a large university. He had been known then as "clever old Jack," and the name stuck now even among his business friends.

Successful as was his business career, it was equaled by the success of his social career. For he danced well, and he talked well. He had a great deal of social tact, and everywhere that he went he was popular and sought after. And he was a good sport. He drove his car, he sailed a boat, he played baseball. He had played football at college, and his tennis game was the envy of many of his friends. But when it came to golf, he failed—miserably and unmistakably failed. But no one knew this, because John Stuart Howells was very proud. That he should fail in anything that he undertook was to him disgrace, and he meant that no one should see his failure.

He never ostensibly played golf. On crowded days he kept away from the course, and when any one asked him to play he apologized, and said that he had an engagement. And he never started from the first tee, because that was near the clubhouse and there were always idlers about, watching the drive offs. He just dropped in somewhere in the middle of the course and practiced a hole or two, and if he saw any one coming, he swore and pretended to be looking for a ball in the rough.

"Don't mind me," he would say to them, "go on through me. I've just lost a ball."

Of course he knew it would help him to take a few lessons from the champion who taught at the club, but the thought of the ignominy which that procedure would expose him to was too terrifying to consider. And so Jack kept his secret and affected indifference. If he met inquiring friends in the locker room his replies were evasive.

"Good game today?" one of them would ask.

"O, middling," Jack would answer. "I don't take a great deal of interest in golf. Just play to keep up the game, you know."

"Come on with us tomorrow, Jack, old boy, and play a few holes," said an enthusiastic friend one day.

"Thanks, no," refused Jack. "Have a tennis engagement tomorrow. Besides—queer thing—but somehow or other I never like to play except alone. Sort of solitaire, don't you know. Always have been like that—never go into matches." Jack smiled grimly down inside of him. "Matches! Good Lord, if they but knew!" And so his friends learned to let him alone, and Jack continued to dig up the course, lose balls, and swear.

This satisfactory arrangement would have continued without any mishap, probably, had it not been for the girl. Somehow girls always manage to upset the universe in one way or another. Now, this especial girl, whose name was Margaret Hallowell Evans, was a source of great worry to Jack, at least concerning golf. Margaret was the one girl that particularly interested Jack. He was not a "lady's man". He never flirted, because he never wanted to, although there were plenty of girls who would have jumped at the chance of a flirtation with John Stuart Howells, for he was one of the handsomest men belonging to the club, and besides, he had such a lovely car, with just room for two.

But Jack took girls as a matter of fact. He danced with them and chatted with them, but he never thought of love. Margaret had drifted into his life the summer before, and they had immediately become "pals," as Jack liked to say. It soon became a custom for Jack to take Margaret to the club dances every Wednesday and Saturday night. The other nights they were together, too, whether it was just to sit on her porch and talk or read, or go to any gathering that had been scheduled for the evening.

The fact that they were together thus every evening was not intended to signify that they were engaged. A sentimental thought had never occurred to Jack. Margaret was his "pal," and love had never entered his head. He was quite happy with things as they were. When he was with her he was content, for Margaret was sweet and companionable. What else could he want?

Soon the rest of the club understood just how affairs were. At first they had teased Jack, asking him when the engagement was going to be announced, but he put a stop to this.

"Good Lord," he said crossly, "can't a man look at a girl without the rest of the gossip-loving world dragging in love! Margaret Evans is the best friend I've got—that's all—and so, for heaven's sake, don't be idiotic!"

Nevertheless, every evening Jack held undisputed possession of Margaret Evans. But during the day they were not so much together, and that was because Margaret was one of the best women golfers in the countryside. She had won many matches, and there was a grand array of silver cups in the Evans' house. Golf was Margaret's occupation. She spent nearly the entire day on the links.

Now, Margaret was the last person in the world to whom Jack would have disclosed his failure, and so there was an understanding that Jack would never play with her. That he was to play alone was an eccentricity which she must overlook. At first it had hurt her feelings exceedingly that he did not care enough for her to give up his solitary game. But she became accustomed to it, and there were plenty of people to play golf with.

No end of men, who considered it a great honor to play around with one of the best golfers and one of the most attractive girls in the club, were always at her command. And always when her afternoon game was over Jack was waiting at the clubhouse to take her for a cooling spin in the car in which so many girls aspired to ride.

In this way the summer went by without trouble. Jack and Margaret never quarreled because they were not lovers, and lovers do most of the quarreling in this world. But had forced itself on him. And it was getting harder and harder, he realized, to shake it off. But tonight, talk served in some degree as an anodyne, and he sat with the idlers late. The one bit of news that did stir him in his torpor was that Kate Doubleday had had at least the feeling to appear at the funeral of the man who, though rightly regarded as her father's enemy, had, Laramie knew, let go his own life, without a thought, to save hers.

This was the last reflection on his mind before he went to sleep that night. It was the first when he woke. Late in the morning he was sitting in Belle Shockley's at breakfast when McAlpin walked in.

"Jim," exclaimed the excitable barn boss, "I got a word this morning from the Falling Wall."

Laramie regarded him evenly, but did not speak till McAlpin looked inquiringly toward Belle. "No secrets here, Mac," he said briefly.

"Probably couldn't keep 'em from a woman if you tried," returned McAlpin, grinning. He pointed calmly toward the kitchen. "If we're all alone here———"

"Go ahead," intervened Belle impatiently, "we are."

"Punk Budd brought the stage from the Reservation this morning. Coming down the Turkey he met Van Horn. They had a bunch of Barb's boys with them driving in some cattle."

"Whose cattle?"

"Punk says when he run into 'em they was roundin' up yours."

"Was Punk sober?" asked Laramie.

"He sure was," replied McAlpin.

Belle with folded arms stood in the archway immovable as a statue; McAlpin sat in silence; Laramie, continuing his breakfast, looked only at his plate. The silence grew heavy, but two of the three had no reason to break it and the third did not choose to.

Laramie, at length, took up his coffee, and, drinking slowly, finished the cup. Setting this down, he wiped his lips and looked at McAlpin.

"Much obliged, Mac," he said, laying down his napkin.

McAlpin regarded him inquiringly. "What you going to do about it, Jim?" he demanded, when he saw Laramie would say no word.

Laramie pushed back his chair. "What would you do?"

McAlpin spoke seriously. "I'm askin' you."

"I can tell better after I know more about it, Mac."

The barn boss evidently thought Laramie was taking the news too quietly. He was for violent measures, but Laramie calmed him. "If they've got any of my cattle, they won't run away," said he, "and they won't blow up. They'll keep, and I'll get them back—every hoof. I'm riding home this morning, anyway, so I'll be over after my horse in a minute."

McAlpin went away somewhat disappointed. Laramie only laughed when he talked it over with Belle; "So long as they don't burn my place, I can stand it," he said, philosophically.

Nevertheless, he felt disturbed at McAlpin's news—not for its substance as much as for what it might connote in renewed warfare. Getting his horse, he followed the railroad right of way out of town and struck out upon open country toward the north. He had no intention of taking the direct road home; that had long became dangerous, and he rode along abandoned cattle trails. At times he struck, swiftly and straight, across open country, at times disappeared completely in favoring canyons, and, emerging again, headed winding draws up to the divide—any ground that carried him in his general direction was good ground.

He tried always to be thinking just what the other fellow must be thinking as to favorable points to pick a man off—the fellow patiently waiting with a rifle day after day in ambush for him. And not having gone home of late twice by the same route, he meant to keep the other fellow continually guessing. Today he was somewhat handicapped, in that he was riding in broad daylight instead of in the dawn or in the twilight when the uncertain light made it more difficult with the fine sights of a Winchester or Savage to cover a distant man.

This hazard, however, called only for a little more precaution, which Laramie did not begrudge to the pride of disappointing an enemy. At points in his route where the main road could not well be avoided, he rode faster and with quickened circumspection. The Double-draw bridge he could not avoid without a long and difficult detour. Moreover, there, or beyond, he might expect to intercept the raiding party, and this was his business.

He did, however, approach the Double-draw bridge with an uncertainty and a caution not reflected in the pace which he rode toward it; but his horse was under close control and his rifle carefully in hand.

Despite his misgivings, no enemy was sighted. Only a flight of bank swallows, disturbed by the footfalls of his horse, darted noisily from their nests under the south bridge abutment and scattered twenty ways in the sunshine. Spurring freely, as they flew away, Laramie galloped briskly across the bottoms and up the hill. Skirting the long trail toward home, he rode on without meeting a living soul or hearing the unwelcome singing of a bullet.

In fact, things were too quiet; the silence and the absence of any sort of life as he approached his ranch were a surprise. The few head of cattle and horses he usually met, when riding home along the creek, were nowhere to be seen. Evidently the raid had been made. To survey the whole scene without exposing himself, Laramie rode out of the tangle along the creek bottom and took the first draw that would bring him out among the southern hills. As he emerged from the narrow gorge, his eyes turned in the direction of the house. But where the house should be he saw above the green field, only a black spot with little patches of white smoke lazily drifting from it up into the still sunshine.

Kate awoke the morning after Hawk's funeral with a confused sense of having consorted with her father's enemies; and of trying to justify herself for having done what she had felt compelled to do to answer her sense of self-respect.

And all this before anyone had accused her. But being extremely dubious as to how her father would take her conduct, she was not only ill at ease until she should meet him, but glad he had been away. And it was something of a shock to her that morning to find his bedroom door closed: it meant that during the night he had unexpectedly come home.

After her breakfast she walked down to the corral to talk to Bradley about the saddle horses. Not that she had anything to suggest, but because she was nervous. Laramie was intruding more and more into her mind; every time she banished him he returned, frequently bringing someone else with him. Between the perplexities and the men that beset her, Kate was not happy. And when, after a ramble along the creek, she returned to the house, she was not surprised to find that her father, coming from the breakfast table, hardly responded to her greeting. He was much engrossed in cutting off the end of a cigar as he passed her and in walking to the fireplace to find a match.

But the matches were not on the mantelpiece, where they belonged, and this annoyed him. If he said nothing, it did not deceive Kate as to his feelings. She hastened to hand him the matchbox from the table. He took it without saying a word, but he slammed it back to its accustomed place with a silent and ominous emphasis.

She knew it was coming. What surprised her was that she felt no further inclination to shrink from the moment of reckoning she dreaded. Doubleday, his cigar lighted, seated himself in his heavy chair beside the fireplace.

"What kind of a trip had you, father?" Kate, as she asked, made a pretense of arranging the papers and magazines on the table.

There was little promise of amiability in her father's answer. "What d'y' mean," he asked.

"Did you get your notes extended?"

"Yes." His heavy jaw and teeth, after the word, snapped like a steel trap. "Did you go to Abe Hawk's funeral?" He flung the question at her like a hammer.

"Were you told I did?" Kate asked.

"Rode to the graveyard with him, didn't you?"

Kate saw there was no use softening her words. "Father," she said instantly and firmly, "the night I came out from town in the storm I got lost. I got on the wrong side of the creek. My horse gave out; I was dead with the cold."

Her father flung his cigar into the fire. "What's that got to do with it?" he broke in harshly.

"Just wait a moment."

"I don't want any longwinded story."

"I won't tell any."

"I won't listen to you," he shouted. "Answer my question.

Her eyes kindled. "You may call it whatever you like, but you will listen to my answer in the way I make it. When I'd given up hope of saving my life, and my horse was drifting, he fell into a dugout. And in the dugout were two men—Abe Hawk and Jim Laramie. They thought there was a party of men with me. They seized me. They got ready to fight. I was at their mercy."

"What dugout?" demanded Doubleday. His husky tone seemed to indicate he was cooling a little; the question took her off her guard.

"At the old mine bridge."

A flash of cunning lighted her father's eyes. The curtain fell instantly, but not before Kate had seen. "When they questioned me," she hurried on, "I told them what had happened. They believed me. They rode with me back to the creek. We swam our horses across. Mine couldn't make the bank. Abe Hawk pulled me out and Laramie saved my horse. But the bank caved in with Hawk when he pulled me out of the creek and the next thing I heard, he was dead. I didn't go to his funeral except to ride to the cemetery in the procession. Father, could I do any less?" she demanded, wrought up.

Barb's harsh, red features never looked less uncompromising. "D' you expect me to believe that stuff?" he asked, regarding her coldly. She only eyed him as he eyed her. "D' you expect anybody to believe it?" he continued, to drive in his contempt.

Kate turned white. When she spoke, her words were measured. "Oh, no," she said quietly. "I don't expect you any more to believe anything I say. Those other men would believe me when they had me at their mercy—when they might have choked or shot me or thrown me into the Falling Wall canyon—they only believed me. But my own father—he couldn't believe me——"

Neither appeal nor reproach moved her father; his mind was fixed. Van Horn had been sarcastic over Kate's escapade; Barb's own men were laughing at him. He interrupted Kate. "Pack up your things," he said ruthlessly.

She faced her father without flinching. "What do you mean?" she asked.

He tossed his head with as little concern as if he were discharging a cowboy. "Don't want you around here any longer," he snapped. "Pack up. Get out."

She looked at him in silence. Perhaps, as she turned defiantly away and walked to her room, she thought of the man that had deserted her mother when she herself was a baby in her mother's arms. At any rate, anger fortified her against the shock. Her preparations were soon made. A trunk held all she wished to take. She asked Bradley to get up her pony. Bradley was hitched up for a trip to Sleepy Cat and, putting her trunk in the wagon, was on the road ahead of Kate. She spent a little time in straightening up her room and shortly afterwards rode down the trail for town.

Absorbed in thoughts tinged with bitterness and anger, she rode toward the creek as if casting things up again and again in her mind, but reaching no conclusion. When her horse struck the Sleepy Cat road he turned into it because he was used to doing so, not because she guided him. In this haphazard way she was jogging on, her eyes fixed on nothing more encouraging than the storm-worn ruts along her way when a shout startled her. Looking up, she saw she was nearing the lower gate of the alfalfa patch and across the road a party of horsemen had stopped Bradley with the wagon. She recognized Harry Van Horn—his smart hat, erect figure and scarlet neckcloth would have identified him before she could distinguished his features; and he always rode the best horse. Stone and three of the Texas men were with him. With the exception of Van Horn, they had dismounted, and with their drooping horses close at hand were stacking their rifles against the gate and yelling at Bradley.

Swinging his hat, Van Horn dashed toward Kate just as she looked up, and, whipping out his revolver, he pulled his horse to its haunches directly in front of her: "You're held up!" he cried.

The shock on her reverie was sudden and Kate was too confused and frightened to speak.

"You can't get by without giving up your tobacco, girlie," Van Horn ran on in singsong raillery. "Shell out!" He held out his left hand for the spoil and poised his gun high—a picture of life and dash. "You see what's happening to Bradley." The cowboys, in great feather, were dragging the old man with mock violence from the wagon.

Kate recovered her breath; "What's it all about?" she asked.

Van Horn put away his gun. He was in high good humor as he glanced over at the boys crowding around Bradley: "They want tobacco," he laughed.

"O."

"You know what I want."

Kate regarded his expectancy unmoved: "How should I know?" she asked, chilling her question with indifference.

"Because," he exclaimed, sweeping back with a flourish the brim of his hat, "I want you."

She eyed him without a tremor and responded without hesitation: "Well, I can say you will never get me if that's all you want."

He laughed again: "Talk it over with me, Kate; talk it over."

His eyes, always bright and liquid, were a little inflamed. Still laughing, he glanced toward the wagon. The boys were boisterous. Kate could hear Bradley's voice in shrill protest: "What'd I be goin' to town f'r, if I had a bottle?" he was demanding angrily. But, while she looked and listened, Van Horn slipped quickly from his saddle and caught her bridle rein: "Come on," he said, at her horse's head, "let's walk down to the creek, girlie, and talk it all over."

Kate was indignant: "I won't walk anywhere——"

"I'll carry you."

"She suppressed an angry word: "I'm on my way to town," she exclaimed. "Let go my bridle!" She struck her horse. The beast jumped ahead. Van Horn, laughing, held on. But the shock jerked him almost from his feet. As he staggered forward, clinging to the rearing animal, the half muffled report of a revolver was heard. Almost like a thunderbolt, it changed the situation. One of the Texas men had fired in the air, but no one had seen him fire and the other Texans jumped like longhorns. Stone, clapping his hand to his holster, whirled from the wagon wheel. Kate, frightened more than ever, struck her horse again; the bridle was jerked from Van Horn's hand and he turned sharply. Quickest to grasp what he saw as his eye swept the road, he yelled: "Look out, boys! There's Laramie!"

The words were not out of his mouth when Kate caught sight of a man down the road leaping from a horse. As the rider touched the ground he slapped his pony's shoulder and the beast dropped flat. The man, rifle in hand, threw himself behind the prostrate animal and Kate heard his brusque yell to Van Horn and the Texans: "Pitch up!"

It would have been hard to say who was most astonished. Laramie evidently was not expecting an encounter. To dash on horseback into any five men on foot, of the enemy's camp, was the last thing he would be likely to attempt. If he did attempt it, he would never choose Van Horn or Stone to be of the party. The ground about the scene was flat, or only slightly rolling, with the branch road and its old ruts running across it. Caught squarely in the open and without a sagebrush for cover, he had been forced to drop behind his horse for shelter. Lying flat and covering Van Horn and the men with his rifle, he awaited the unpleasant odds against him.

The situation of the five men in front was even worse. Their rifles were stacked against the gate hardly a dozen feet away. But to run a gantlet of a dozen feet against Laramie's rifle fire was a feat none had stomach for, nor were they ready at a hundred yards to pit revolvers against it. One of them might get him, but they knew it would be after some of the others had practically ceased to be interested in the result.

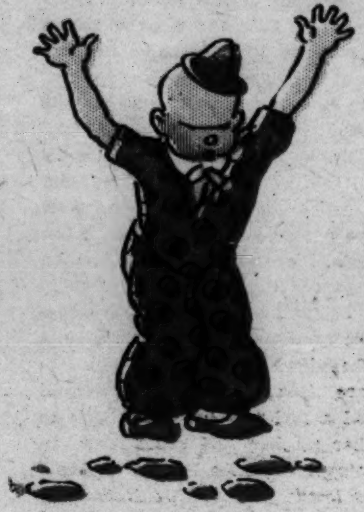
The minds of the Texas men were perfectly clear; their hands shot up like rockets. Stone had taken one big step toward the gate post—he changed his mind, halted, and his hands went up at the very instant Laramie changed his mind, and did not press the trigger against the burly outline darkening the field of his sights. Van Horn, caught, stood helpless and enraged—humiliated in circumstances he least relished for humiliation. Everybody's hands were up. His one chance, Van Horn realized, was to use his Colt's against the Winchester behind the prostrate horse—it was not a living chance and no one knew it better than he; his hands moved grudgingly up to his shoulders and he sang out savagely: "What the blazes do you want?"

There was no answer from Laramie. To add to a difficult situation, Kate's horse, nervous from the shouting and catching its mistress' own fright, jumped and bucked till she was halfway down the road toward Laramie before she could check him. To add to her confusion, words came from ahead just loud enough for her to hear: "Pull the blamed brute to one side, will you?" It was Laramie speaking, she knew. "If he gets between me and that bunch," she heard him

THE TEENIE WEENIES.

THE LITTLE FOLKS ALMOST HAVE A MYSTERY.

BY WM. DONAHEY.



WHEN the Dunce failed to put in an appearance at meal time, it was most unusual, as the greedy little fellow was always hungry, and he was generally the first at the table.

One Saturday noon the Dunce failed to show up for lunch, and the General was much worried when he hadn't appeared an hour after the tiny dishes had been washed.

"I think some of you boys had better go out and see what is keeping the Dunce," said the General. "He may be in some sort of trouble."

"I saw him over by the toolhouse this morning," said the Turk, who with Paddy Pinn had been working on a secret invention for some weeks. "He was headed towards the creek, and maybe he's fallen in."

"I'll go down to the creek and look around," cried the Clown, and running out of the door of the shoehouse he set off in the direction of the creek.

The Clown had been gone only a short time when he came panting back with his tiny eyes fairly popping out of his head. "The Dunce has been murdered!" he shouted.

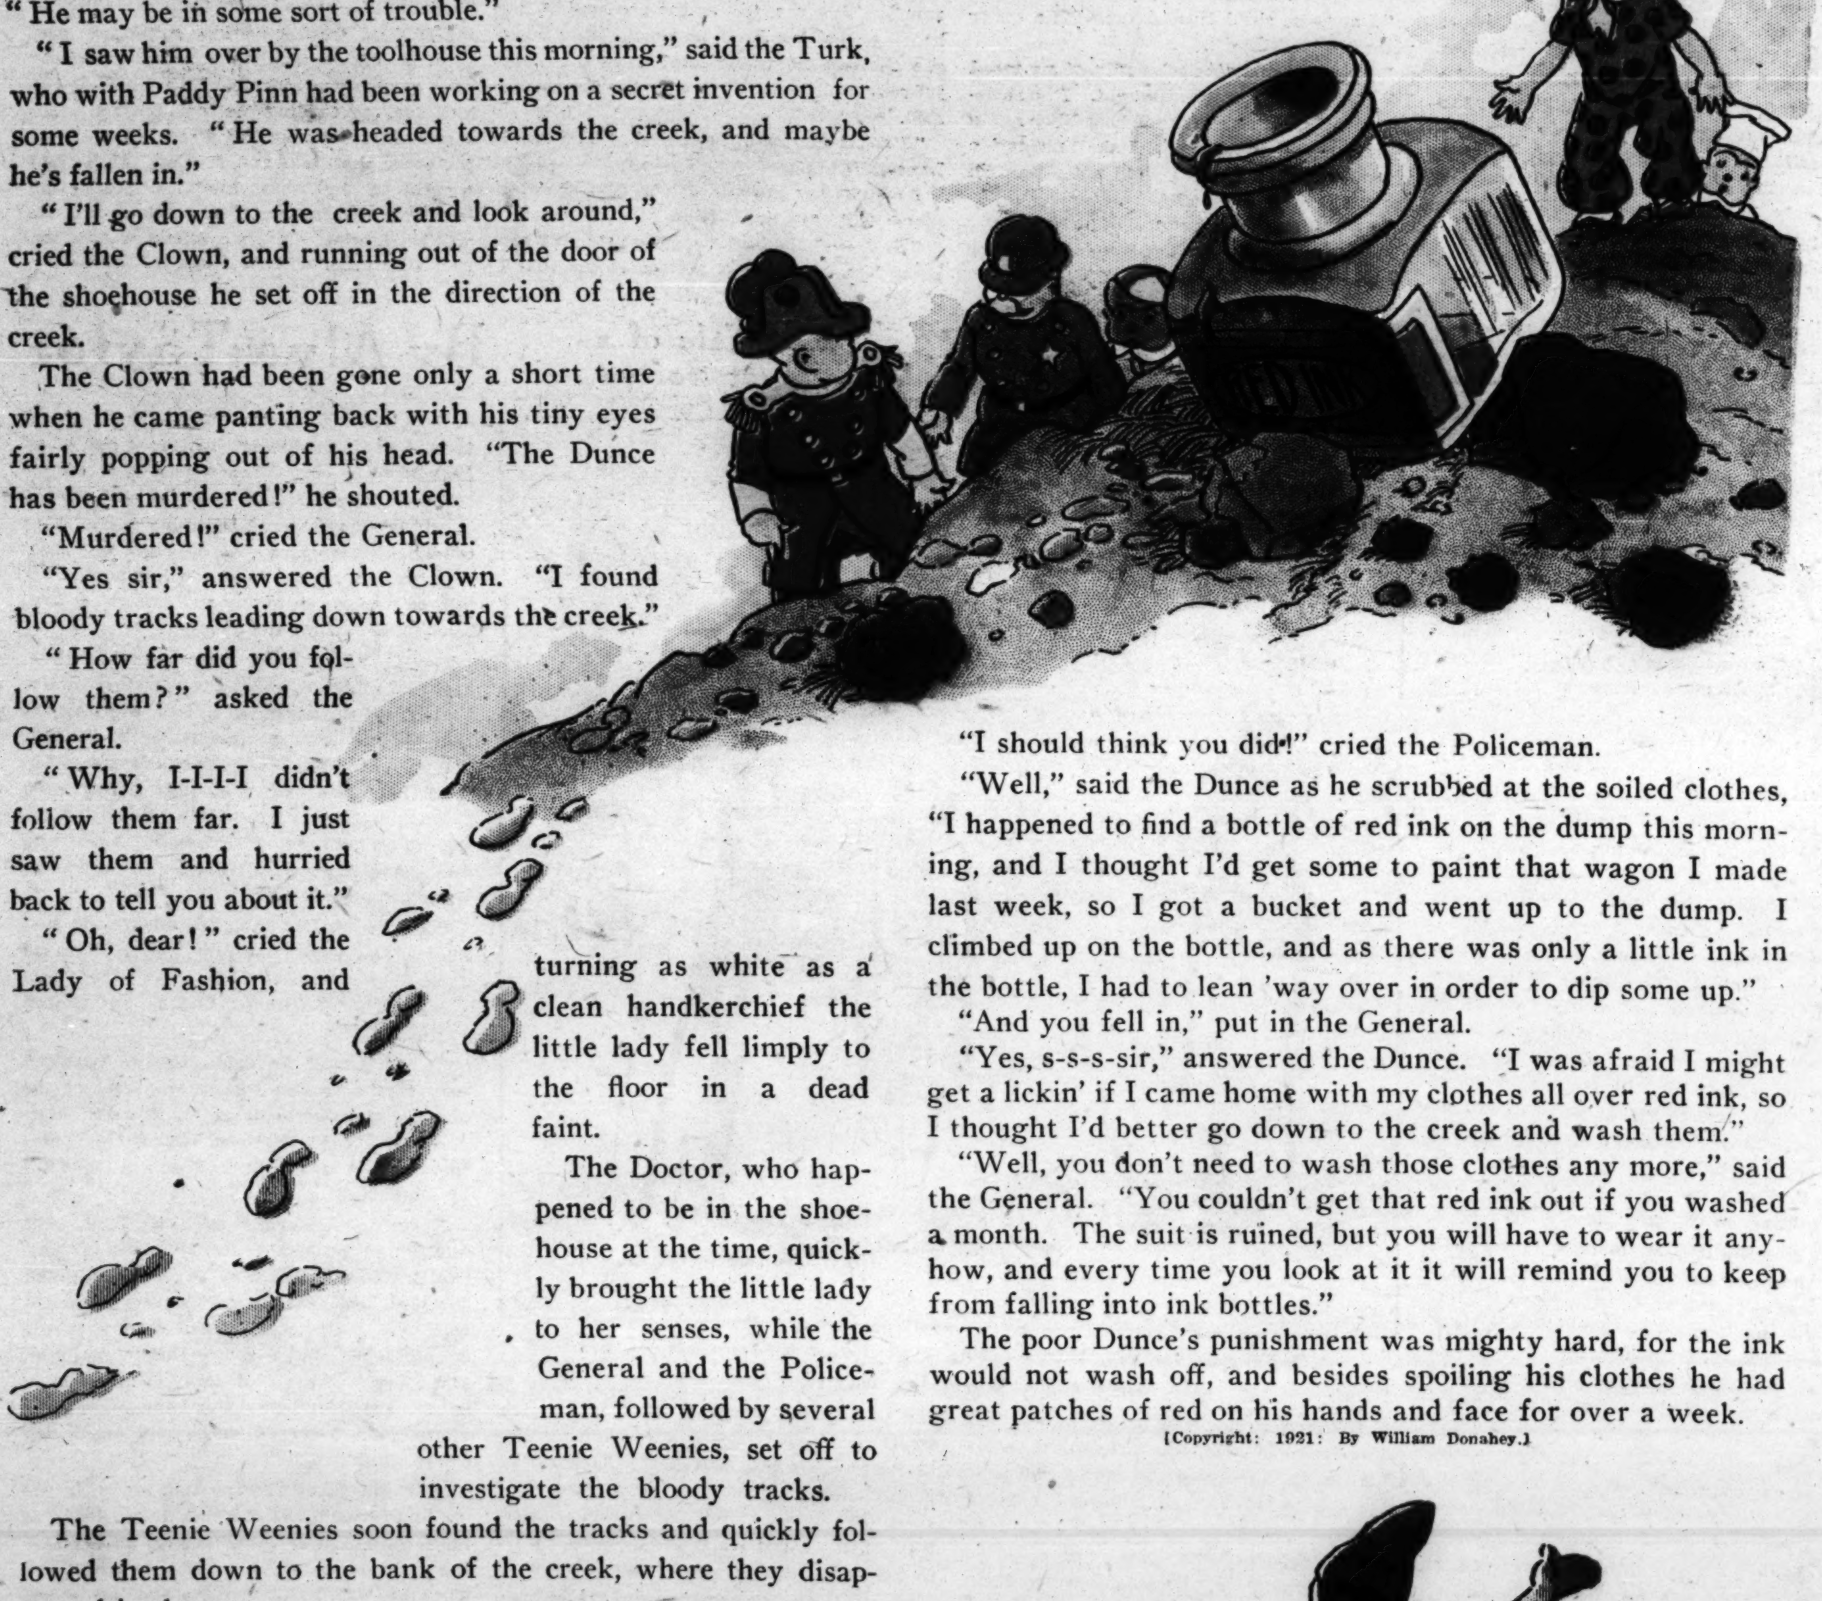
"Murdered!" cried the General.

"Yes sir," answered the Clown. "I found bloody tracks leading down towards the creek."

"How far did you follow them?" asked the General.

"Why, I-I-I-I didn't follow them far. I just saw them and hurried back to tell you about it."

"Oh, dear!" cried the Lady of Fashion, and turning as white as a clean handkerchief the little lady fell limply to the floor in a dead faint.



The Doctor, who happened to be in the shoehouse at the time, quickly brought the little lady to her senses, while the General and the Policeman, followed by several other Teenie Weenies, set off to investigate the bloody tracks.

The Teenie Weenies soon found the tracks and quickly followed them down to the bank of the creek, where they disappeared in the water.

"This certainly is a mystery," cried the Policeman. "Let's track the trail back and see where it started."

Breathlessly the little men followed the bloody footprints back past the toolhouse up to the big dump, where big folks threw all their old broken bottles and rubbish.

The trail of blood was much stronger here, and soon the little fellows followed it to the top of the dump, where it stopped by the side of an old ink bottle, which was half full of red ink.

"That's not blood!" cried the Policeman, pointing to the tracks. "It's red ink, and I'll bet that foolish Dunce fell into the bottle and then went down to the creek to wash his clothes."

Once more the Teenie Weenies hurried to the creek, and down the stream a little ways from the spot where the tracks disappeared they found the Dunce standing in the water up to his waist washing some of his clothes.

"What in the name of peach stones does this mean?" asked the General, trying hard to keep from laughing, for the Dunce was a funny sight with bright red patches of the ink on his face and hands.

"W-w-w-w-why, I h-h-h-had a accident," answered the Dunce, grinning at the Teenie Weenies standing on the bank.

"I should think you did!" cried the Policeman.

"Well," said the Dunce as he scrubbed at the soiled clothes, "I happened to find a bottle of red ink on the dump this morning, and I thought I'd get some to paint that wagon I made last week, so I got a bucket and went up to the dump. I climbed up on the bottle, and as there was only a little ink in the bottle, I had to lean 'way over in order to dip some up."

"And you fell in," put in the General.

"Yes, s-s-s-sir," answered the Dunce. "I was afraid I might get a lickin' if I came home with my clothes all over red ink, so I thought I'd better go down to the creek and wash them."

"Well, you don't need to wash those clothes any more," said the General. "You couldn't get that red ink out if you washed a month. The suit is ruined, but you will have to wear it anyhow, and every time you look at it it will remind you to keep from falling into ink bottles."

The poor Dunce's punishment was mighty hard, for the ink would not wash off, and besides spoiling his clothes he had great patches of red on his hands and face for over a week.

CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE

LARAMIE HOLDS THE RANGE by FRANK H. SPEARMAN

THE STORY.

KATE DOUBLEDAY has journeyed to the far west to visit her father,

BARB DOUBLEDAY, who deserted her mother years before and about whom the girl knows little or nothing. This strange father she finds engaged in certain dubious enterprises which he does not see fit to explain, but he offers his daughter a home at his ranch, and here she quickly adapts herself to her surroundings with the aid and friendship of

BELLE STOCKLEY, a woman of the neighborhood who runs an eating house in Sleepy Cat Junction, the nearby town. Kate hears mystifying references to her father's affairs from

HARRY VAN HORN, a dashing cattleman who promptly develops into a persistent suitor, and

TOM STONE, foreman at Doubleday's ranch, whom she does not like at all. Also she hears much talk of one

JIM LARAMIE, about whose character there seem to be sharp differences of opinion. A bitter war is being waged between cattle thieves and the big ranch owners of the country, and Laramie's position in these feuds is a matter of some doubt. Kate is inclined to be hostile when she meets him, but Laramie falls in love with the girl, and in spite of herself she is interested. Then Laramie bluntly refuses an invitation to line up with Doubleday and his men in the cattle fights, and war is declared. Doubleday and Van Horn organize a raid on the Falling Wall country, where Laramie lives, directing their operations chiefly against

ABE HAWK, known as a cattle rustler and "bad man," and three of his associates—Dutch Henry, Stormy Gorman, and Yankee Robinson. In the fighting Dutch Henry, Gorman, and one of Van Horn's men are killed. Hawk gets away, badly wounded, and with the aid of

JOHN LEFEVER, the marshal, Laramie covers the outlaw's escape to an inaccessible retreat under an old bridge abutment in the foothills, thus incurring the open enmity of the Doubleday outfit, who have their suspicions as to who is protecting Hawk. The same night Laramie goes to the office of

DOC CARPY, the town physician, seeking medical supplies for the wounded man. In the doctor's office Laramie unexpectedly encounters Kate, who denounces him bitterly and charges him with "harboring cattle thieves." The next day a direct attempt is made to assassinate Laramie, but he escapes. Then Lefever and Carpy urge that Hawk be taken to a hospital—a difficult undertaking in view of the fact that the raiders are still on the warpath—and Laramie agrees to get the wounded outlaw into town. He is with Hawk at his hiding place, preparing for the trip, when Kate, who has lost her way in a blinding storm, unexpectedly blunders on the retreat. Bitter toward the girl but still in love with her, Laramie takes her with himself and Hawk on their desperate ride through the storm. They find it necessary to swim their horses across a swollen creek, and here Hawk saves Kate's life, though he himself is carried down stream. Later Kate hears that Hawk is dead, and that his funeral is being arranged by HARRY TENISON, keeper of the hotel at Sleepy Cat, together with an old-timer named Sawdy and other notables of the region.

TWELFTH INSTALLMENT.

Hawk's Funeral.

THE funeral had been set for the following afternoon, but preparations were going forward all morning. In spite of the brief notice that had got abroad of Hawk's death, men from many directions were riding into town that morning to help bury him. A reaction of sentiment concerning the Falling Wall raid was making itself felt; its brutal ferocity was being more openly criticized and less covertly denounced. Hawk's personal popularity had never suffered among the cowboys and the cowboy following. He had been known far and wide for open-handed generosity and blunt truthfulness—and these were traits to silence or to soften reprobation of his fitful and reckless disregard for the property rights of the big companies. He was a freebooter with most of the virtues and vices of his kind. But the crowd that morning in Sleepy Cat was assembling to pay tribute to the man—however far gone wrong. His virtues they were no doubt willing to bury with him; the memory of his vices would serve some of them when in the future they might need a lawless precedent.

Up to the funeral hour the numerous bars of Sleepy Cat were points of interest for the drinking men. In front of these reminiscences of the dead man held heated sway. Some stories pulled themselves together through the stimulus of deep drinking, others gradually went to pieces under its bewildering effects; but as long as a man could remember that he was talking about Abe Hawk of the Falling Wall his anecdotes were tolerated.

Nor were all the men that had come to town to say good-by to Abe lined up at the bars. Because Tenison had insisted that it should, Hawk's body lay during the morning at the Mountain House, in the first big sample room, opening off the hotel office. All that the red-faced undertaker could do to make it presentable in its surroundings had been done at Harry Tenison's charge. Laramie's protests were ignored. "You're a poor man, Jim," declared Tenison, "and you can't pay any bills now for Abe. He thought more of you than he did of any man in the world. But most of his money he left here with me, upstairs and down. Abe was stiff-necked as hell, whether it was cards or cattle, you know that. And it's only some of his money—not mine—I'm turning back to him. That Dutchman," he added, referring with a contemptuous oath to the unpopular undertaker of Sleepy Cat, "is a robber, anyhow. The only way I'll ever get even with him is that he'll drink most of it up again. I played pinochle with that bar-sinister chap," continued Tenison, referring to the enemy by the short and ugly word, "all one night, and couldn't get ten cents out of him—and he half drunk at that. What do you know about that?

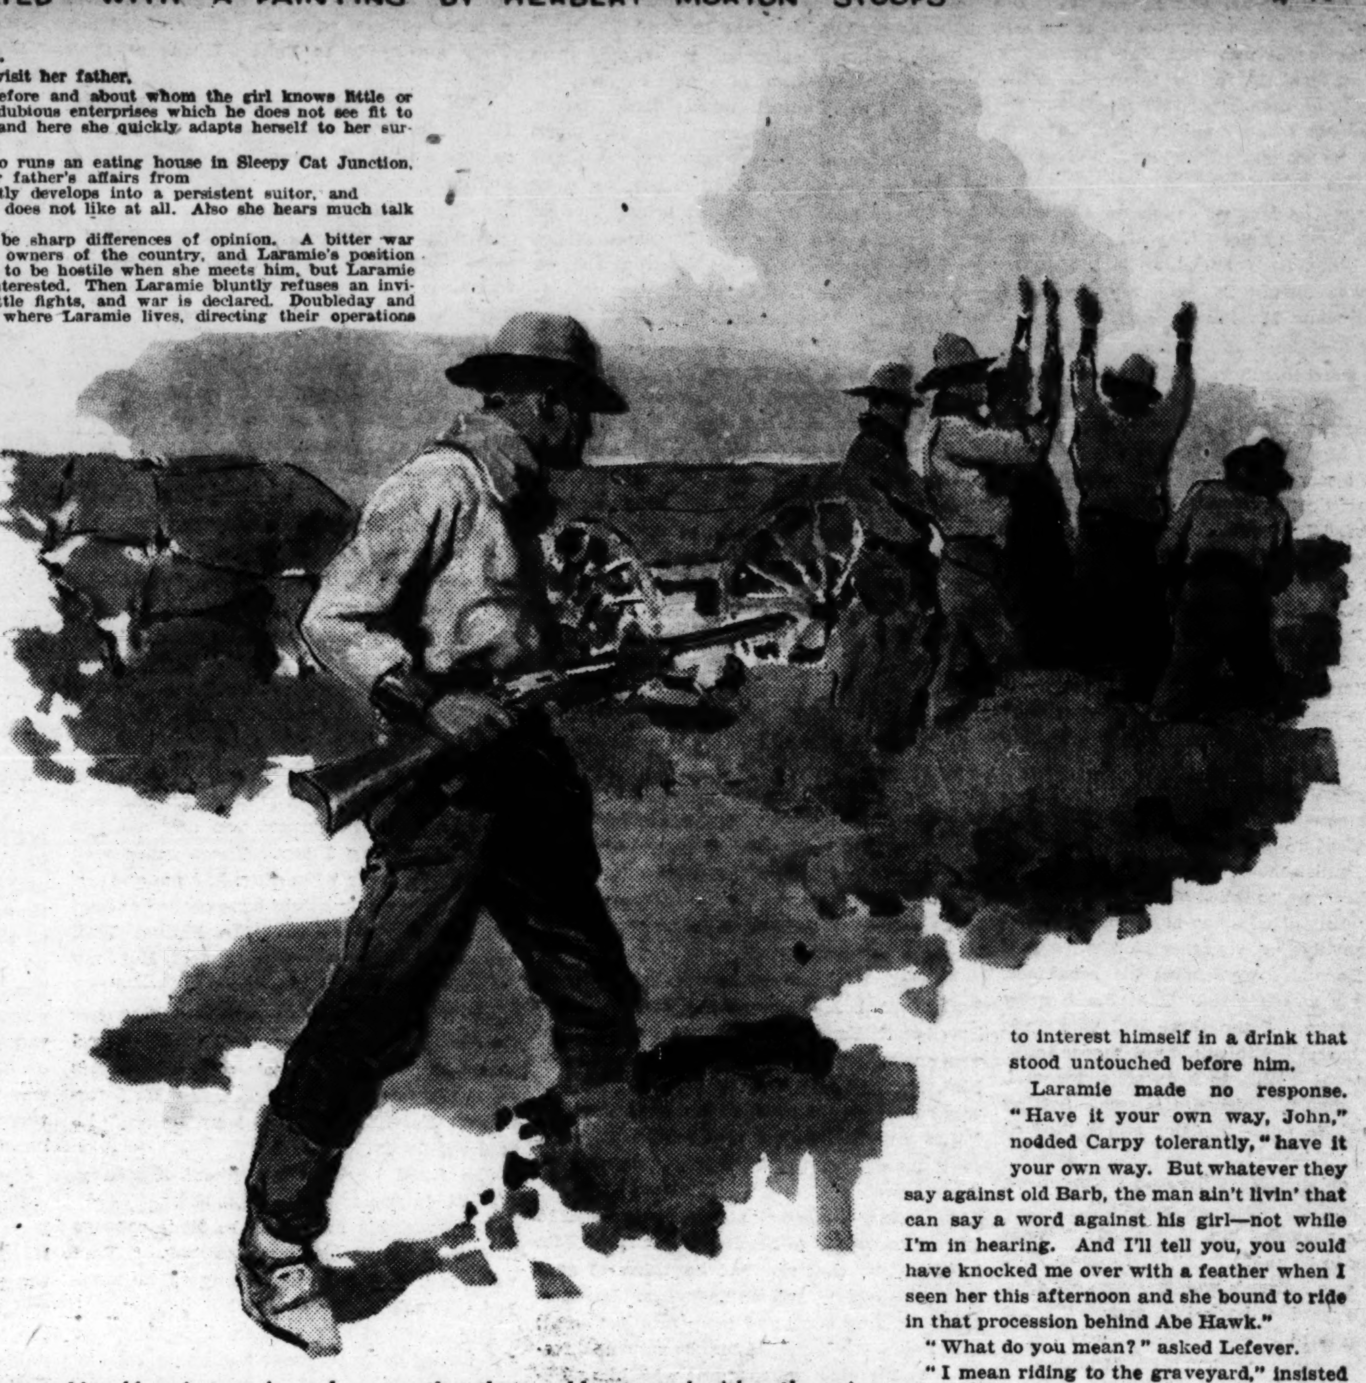
Laramie looked up. "Why, Harry," he said quietly, "I told you where I found him that night—he got out of the creek at Pride's Crossing."



Approaching his prisoners in such a way that they could not reach either the gate or the wagon, Laramie compelled Bradley to disarm the three cowboys in turn.

Tenison shook his head. "But what I want to know is what went on before he got to Pride's Crossing."

"Well, I started with him that night for town."

"That's what you said before," objected Tenison with an impatient gesture. "What you didn't say is what I want to hear."

"Harry, I won't try to give you a long line of talk. I can't tell it all—and I don't want to try to fool you. There's another name in the story that I don't feel I've got a right to bring in—that's all. Some day you'll hear it."

Neither Lefever nor Sawdy could get any more out of Laramie. He showed the strain of sleeplessness and anxiety. Sawdy kept the crowd away by answering all questions himself—mostly with an air of reserve, backed by intimations calculated to lead a man to believe he was really hearing something, and counter questions skillfully dropped into the gravity of the occasion. Those who could not be put off by Sawdy were turned over to Lefever, who could hypnotize a man by asking questions and send him away satisfied but vacantly speculative as to whether he was crazy or Lefever was.

To Lefever also were referred the men arranging the details of the funeral. Not till two o'clock was the word given for the procession to move from the Mountain House, but for two hours before that horsemen—peers of any in the world—dashed up and down Main Street before keen-eyed spectators, on business if possible, but always on display.

Stage drivers and barmen from Calabasas and Thief River mingled with cowboys from the Deep Creek country—for Hawk himself had, years before, driven on the Spanish Sinks line. From the barn at Sleepy Cat these men brought out and drafted the old Wells-Fargo stage coach that Abe had driven on the first trip to the Thief River mines. Six of the best horses in the barn were to pull it in the procession. These horses were driven by the oldest man in service on the Calabasas run, mounted on the near wheel horse, with the driver's seat on the box empty and covered with wreaths of flowers. Old time Indians from the Reservation who had known Hawk when he first went into the Falling Wall country were down to see him buried; they rode behind the cowboys.

At two o'clock the roundhouse whistle blew a long blast. It was taken up by the engines in the yard and those of an overland train pulling out; and the procession, long and picturesque, moved from the hotel. Laramie, Tenison, Lefever, and Sawdy rode abreast, behind the hearse, and as the procession moved down Main Street the cowboys chanted the songs of the bunkhouse and the camp fire, the range and the roundup.

"My God!" exclaimed Carpy when it was all over, "if Sleepy Cat could do that much for a thief, what would it do for an honest man?" With Sawdy and Lefever, the doctor sat at a table in the billiard room of the Mountain House. Tenison and Laramie sat near them.

"Not what they did for Abe," averred John Lefever promptly, "and don't you forget it. But I don't call Abe Hawk a thief—never. Abe was a freebooter born out of time and place. He called himself a thief—he wasn't one. He hadn't the first instincts of one—no secrecy, no dark night stuff, no lying. He never denied a raid if he made one. And never did worse, when the big cattlemen protested, than to tell them to go to hell. He had a bunch of old Barb's calves branded along with his own one year. 'Well, you're the coolest rustler in the Falling Wall,' I says to him. 'They're my share of Barb's spring crop,' was all he said.

"You know, he lent Barb all his savings one year—that was when he used to save money, before his wife died. He never got a red cent of it back, never even asked for it. But when he wanted money he'd drive off some of Barb's steers. Yes, Abe stole cattle, I admit; yet I don't call him a thief—not today, anyway," said John, raising his glass. "Why, if Abe Hawk owed a man a hundred dollars, he'd pay him if he had to steal every cow in the Falling Wall to do it. But take a hoof from a poor man!" he went on, freshened, "why the poor men all used to run to Abe when Dutch Henry or Stormy Gorman branded their calves. They'd yell fire and murder. And Abe would make the blamed thieves drive their calves back! You know that, Jim."

Lefever between breaths threw the appeal for confirmation across at Laramie, who sat moodily listening and trying without success to interest himself in a drink that stood untouched before him.

Laramie made no response.

"Have it your own way, John," nodded Carpy tolerantly, "have it your own way. But whatever they say against old Barb, the man ain't livin' that can say a word against his girl—not while I'm in hearing. And I'll tell you, you could have knocked me over with a feather when I seen her this afternoon and she bound to ride in that procession behind Abe Hawk."

"What do you mean?" asked Lefever.

"I mean riding to the graveyard," insisted Carpy.

"What are you talking about?" demanded Lefever, to bring out the story. "You never saw it."

"I'll tell you what I saw." Only those who knew Laramie well could have told how keenly he was listening. "I drove down Hill Street," said the doctor, "just after the funeral started, and sat there, quiet, to one side, waiting for it to pass; a doctor's got no business around funerals. Right then Kate Doubleday pulled up close to me on horseback. She was just from the trail, that was sure; her horse showed the pace and the girl was excited—I seen that when she spoke to me. 'Doctor'—then she hesitated—'is that Abe Hawk's funeral?' 'It is,' I says. She looked at it and kept looking at it. The tail end of the procession was passing Hill Street. I noticed the girl bite her lip; she was as restless as her horse. 'Doctor,' she says, hesitating just the same way the second time, 'do you think people would think it awfully strange if I—rode to the cemetery with them?'

"I never was more dashed in my life. 'Well,' I says, 'I expect they would, Kate.' 'I feel as if I ought to do it,' she says. 'Don't do it for the fun of the thing, Kate. The boys wouldn't like that.' 'Oh,' she says, looking at me mighty hard, 'I've got the best of reasons for doing it.' 'Then,' says I, 'do it, no matter what they think or don't think. That's what Abe Hawk would 'a' done!' 'I'm such a coward,' she says, but I want to tell you there was fire in her words. 'Go ahead,' says I. 'Doctor, will you ride with me?' 'Hell!' says I, 'I never went to a funeral in my life.' 'Will you ride to this one with me? I can't ride alone; all the rest are men.' 'Doggone it! Come over to the barn,' says I, 'till I get a horse.'

"That's the way it happened.

"When we got to the graveyard we kept back to one side. All the same, she saw the whole thing. But just the minute the boys turned from the grave, away we went down the hill lickety-cut. We took the back streets till we struck the divide road, and there she turned for home."

Laramie felt no inclination that night to go home. In his depression he could think only of Kate Doubleday and reflect that the years were passing while he faced the future without an aim and life without an outlook.

It was not the first time this conviction

SUMMER FROCKS FOR GIRLS FROM EIGHT TO FOURTEEN

BY CORINNE LOWE

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—One of our popular writers once referred to the heroine of a story of his as the kind of girl who esteemed motherhood because it gave you the privilege of dressing something in Irish lace. This particular story was written, too, some years ago before children's clothes had emerged so completely from their former chrysalis of dullness. Today—well, the clothes one sees for children are enough to make the most confirmed spinster sigh in their presence, "If I only had something to put in them."

The clothes of the small girl are particularly fascinating—so much so that the lady of the rhyme who declared "when I am very, very old—say twenty-eight or nine, I'll take a little orphan boy and bring him up as mine," will probably be induced to change her mind. She will be driven to adopt a little orphan girl instead—just for the pleasure of seeing her in these new things.

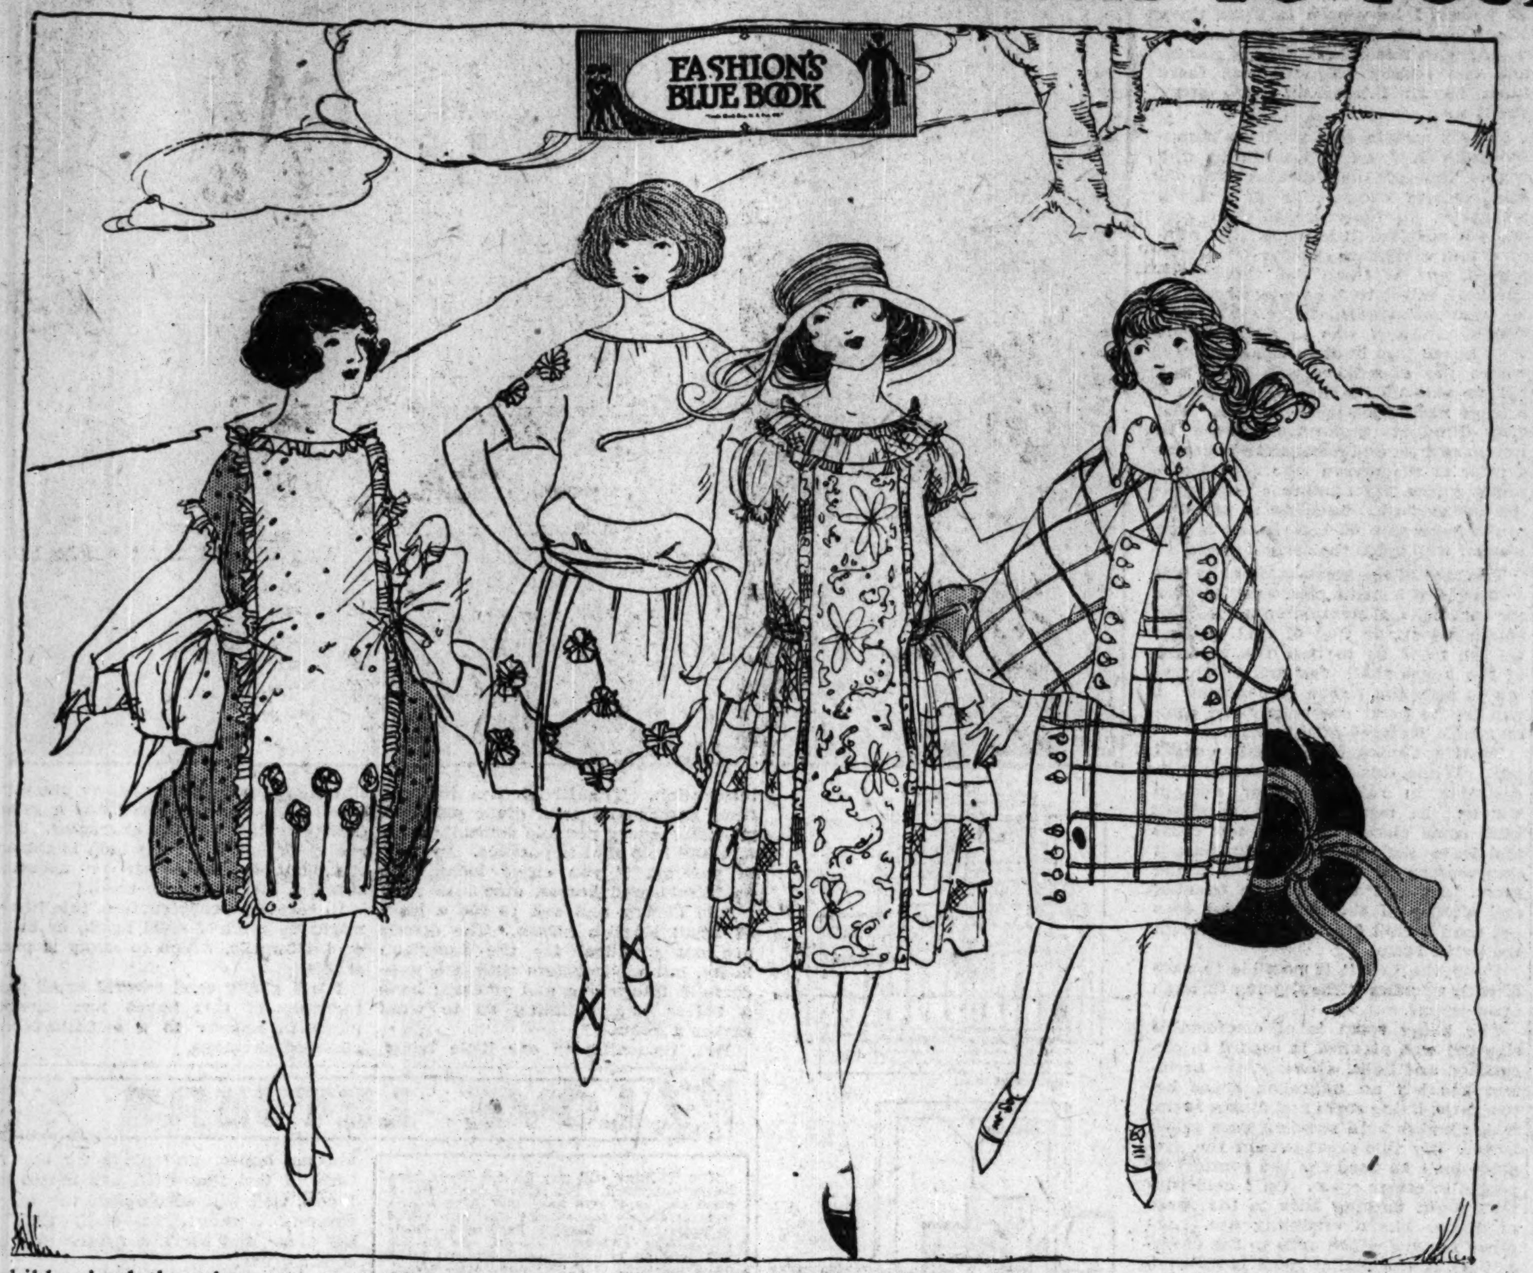
The girl of from 8 to 14 is the subject to whom I have dedicated today's page. Most fittingly we tee off at the left with a dotted Swiss. This fabric is undoubtedly the most popular cotton for children's wear this season. It yodels—does Swiss—all over the kingdom of childhood in rose color, tangerine, yellow, red, and delft blue.

Any girl from 2 years up is entitled to her dotted Swiss allotment, and frequently these charming little creations, trimmed perhaps with Valenciennes, perhaps with rick rack, or perhaps with organdy of contrasting tint, are accompanied by hat to match. Thus a charming little costume for a girl of 6 or 7 seen in one of the shops the other day finished off its red and white Swiss trimmed with Irish lace by an adorable poke bonnet, with huge bow of the white organdy that formed the sash and collar of the frock.

If you will look at all manner of clothes for the girl of from 2 or 3 up, you will find a decided inclination to side fullness. Recently, for example, I saw a delft blue sateen frock for a child inset on both sides of the skirt with row on row of white organdy ruffles. A slash in the short sleeves encouraged another outburst of these organdy ruffles, and on the front of the plain little bodice above its narrow black ribbon girdle was appliqued a white organdy rose. It was a charming frock for any girl of from 4 to 12.

Let me mention right here, too, that sateen is one of the materials that is figuring prominently this summer in children's wear. Most of this serviceable material—and such a welcome departure from the stereotyped gingham for morning play on the beach—is trimmed with white organdy.

But to go back to the Swiss model illustrated here. This occurs in tangerine tint, and the effect of the side fullness of which I have spoken is achieved here by a front panel of white organdy ruffled with self material and anchored by the two voluminous side sashes of organdy. The flower motifs on the panel may be either embroidered in tangerine wool or cut from tangerine organdy. The latter treatment, however, has the recommendation of greater novelty.



There are really no more restrictions nowadays upon our children's clothes than upon our children's conduct. For example, in the second model from the left we find Miss Eight-to-Fourteen cutting her coupons of style along with the most mature of us. Behold, for example, the fashionable long bloused bodice of this delft blue linen frock, and then swerve from this item to the rosettes of rose colored grosgrain ribbon adorning skirt and sleeves.

Ribbon motifs are, in fact, one of the salient features of children's dressing this summer. Even Renee herself—she who has invented so many new designs in ribbon trimming for grown-ups—would be impressed by the ribbon counter irritant prescribed for children's garb. Crepe de chine frocks for the small girl, for example, are often trimmed with ribbon motifs. By the way, too, this material is just as popular with the young miss as with the old one, and it is remarked that a number of these crepe de chines are gray.

To offset the somberness of this tint, the rain beau is transferred to the rain belle. Embroideries in brightest of tints are used on these foggy little frocks, and, even more modishly, they are brightened up with ribbon.

For the girl at the Louisa Alcott age there is nothing in the world more charming than the short puff sleeves and elliptical neckline of the early Victorian era. It is this finish which is accorded the third frock—one that is especially recommended for graduation or confirmation exercises. The fabric here is white net, and again we find the popular front panel—this one of embroidered net edged with Irish crochet. Incidentally Irish crochet is one of the most favored trimming touches for the girl's summery frock.

As will be seen, the desired side fullness is accomplished in this last instance by row upon row of ruffles. Ruffled skirts are good for girls of all ages, and we encounter the three flounce skirt of maturity translated into childish apparel. A charming evidence of this fact occurred in one of the printed voiles so much used this season for childhood. This one, a delightful combination of gray and delft blue, had a three flounced skirt and a plain bodice peeping out shyly from an adorable little Eton jacket of black taffeta with short sleeves and round, plaited collar.

Eyelet embroidery is employed largely at present for all types of wear. Take a peep in upon any spot where congregate fashionable children, and you may find simultaneously a black taffeta coat almost covered with eyelet embroidery bound in light blue, a white organdy party frock taken just as violently as the coat with this eyelet fever—this is perhaps bound in rose or lavender or yellow—and a little navy gabardine frock of the same mind about trimming.

Both the cape and the cape coat are just as fashionable for childhood as for those of more advanced years. Some of the smartest of the capes are of navy gabardine trimmed with fluted ribbons or with braid, and, no matter if you be a maiden of but two or three summers, you may spend this summer in one of the knitted capes with perhaps collar and bands of angora in contrasting tint. And speaking of the knitted craze, the frock made entirely of this fabric is shown for the small girl in most delectable of color combinations.

Many of the collars of both capes and coats are the obliging kind which you may either button up close about the neck or turn down—often to reveal a gay bit of trimming or lining. One of these convertible collars is employed on the cape of moss green and tan wool which accompanies a frock of similar material. This collar composed of chamois is echoed in the buttoned band on the skirt and edges of the cape and in the narrow girdle. A costume like this is extremely smart for the privileged young miss who is being taken across this summer.

Better Linoleum Laying
Guaranteed by
The Richardson-Method

Linoleum floors are only as good as they are laid. The Richardson-Method of cementing Linoleum securely down over a layer of special deadening felt insures a permanent floor, one that will neither buckle nor bulge, but will give added years of satisfactory service.

Applying paste to floor (whether wood, concrete or tile). Deadening felt is then laid.

Rolling out deadening felt, thereby removing any unevenness and causing felt to adhere to floor.

Applying Richardson cement to felt. Linoleum is then stretched over the felt, rolled and trimmed.

Advantages of Our Method

1. The Linoleum at once becomes a solid, permanent, resilient floor. It cannot buckle, bulge or stretch.
2. The felt foundation, which is pasted to the floor, absorbs most of the expansion or contraction that may take place in the wood or concrete base.
3. The felt layer makes the Linoleum more durable, thereby lengthening the life of the Linoleum floor.
4. The possible damage from water when laid by other methods is eliminated when laid by the Richardson-Method.
5. It adds to the resiliency and life of the Linoleum, making a noiseless and durable floor.
6. Economical both in first cost and in the constant savings in maintenance expense as compared with other methods of laying and types of floors.
7. In most cases the work is completed in one trip, making it unnecessary to return and disturb the room.
8. Linoleum when laid by the Richardson-Method can be removed without difficulty or damage should the necessity arise.

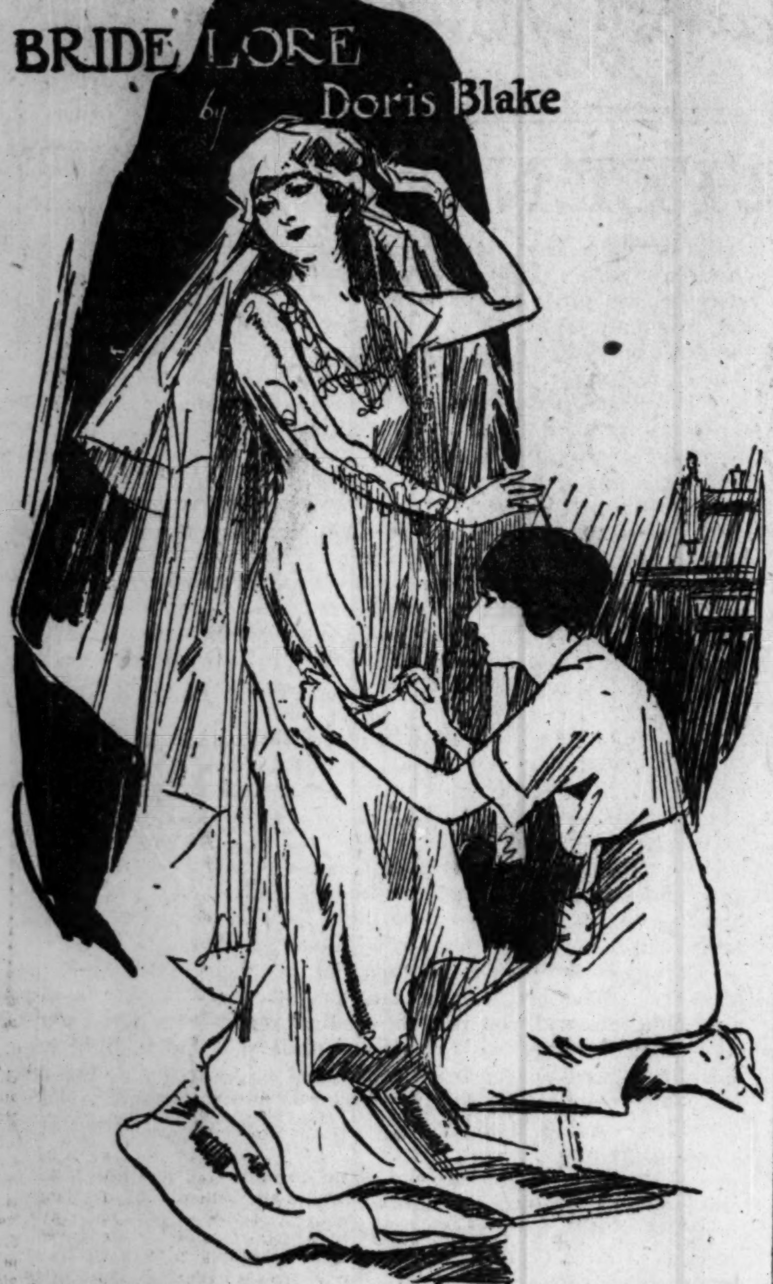
BRIDE LORE

by Doris Blake



COUNTLESS superstitions, symbols, and myths in every tongue and tribe of every part of the earth hover around the bride and the wedding day. While they are to be treated as superstitions in this enlightened age of ours, still it is interesting to read the fairy tales woven into the wedding fabric and mixed with the more substantial ingredients of the wedding cake, is it not?

"Happy is the bride that the sun shines on," is one of the best known and most oft repeated wedding day superstitions. Yet hundreds of thousands of happy couples have been married on cloudy days and rainy days and stormy days, and knew no more trouble or sorrow than those married under a sunny sky.

Continuing from last Sunday's story on dress and trousseau, it is recorded further by folklorists that:

A raveling on the garments of the groom shows that another woman clings to him with her heart.

If the groom buys the bride's clothes she will not be happy with him.

It is lucky for a child or grandchild to wear her mother's or grandmother's wedding dress.

It is said that a married couple will not get rich until the wedding clothes are worn out.

If a friend loans a pin to a bride to use in her dress, it should be bent in order to avert bad luck.

If you try on the bridal costume of a girl friend, it is a sure sign you will have to bear all the troubles and trials she will have to bear, as well as your gown.

A bride, when paying for the making of her wedding dress, should be sure there are at leaast two pieces of silver money in the change paid, otherwise one of the contracting parties will be unlucky.

A woman who ruins her wedding dress during the honeymoon will know nothing but trouble in her married life, and is liable to be a widow soon.

When a maid fits on her wedding dress for the first time she will have success through wedded life if the fit is good; if not, she may expect sorrow and trouble.

Unlucky for a bride to wear a figured dress.

There is strong superstition against a bride wearing black. This must be deeply imbedded in the minds of every one, for whoever heard of a bride wearing black? All sorts of misfortunes are prophesied to such a bride.

Nor should one dye a wedding dress black.

Lavender is not a lucky color in which to marry, it is said.

Not a single bit of black should be on the bride's person. One article of black will mean one great sorrow in her life.

As many different colors as there are in your wedding dress, so many years you will have of trouble. Probably this omen has influenced many to wear white. Another version of this is the following: As many colors as there are about your wedding attire, so many deep sorrows you will encounter in your wedded life.

It is said to be an unlucky sign to begin making the wedding gown before the day is named.

If the bride stumbles over her wedding gown, she may be sure that some one is envying her happiness.

"A year's trouble for every tuck in her wedding gown," is an old saying.

Any one stepping on the bride's train gives ill luck to the bride and themselves.

If the groom's tie is askew, his heart is in another place and with another maiden.

Hard Hearted Creature.

"Dear Miss Blake: A young man and I work in the same place of business, and we became quite friendly. Recently we had a quarrel in which he was to blame. Later he apologized, but I paid no attention to him or his apology. Now I am sorry, and I know it is my fault that time. I was thinking of apologizing to him, but decided not to, as I thought perhaps he would think I was crazy about him. What would you advise one to do in this case?

"AGNES."

O, Agnes, are you not a hard hearted young creature? You should have accepted the apology when it was offered. That is only being polite and what you would expect of some one else if you proffered it.

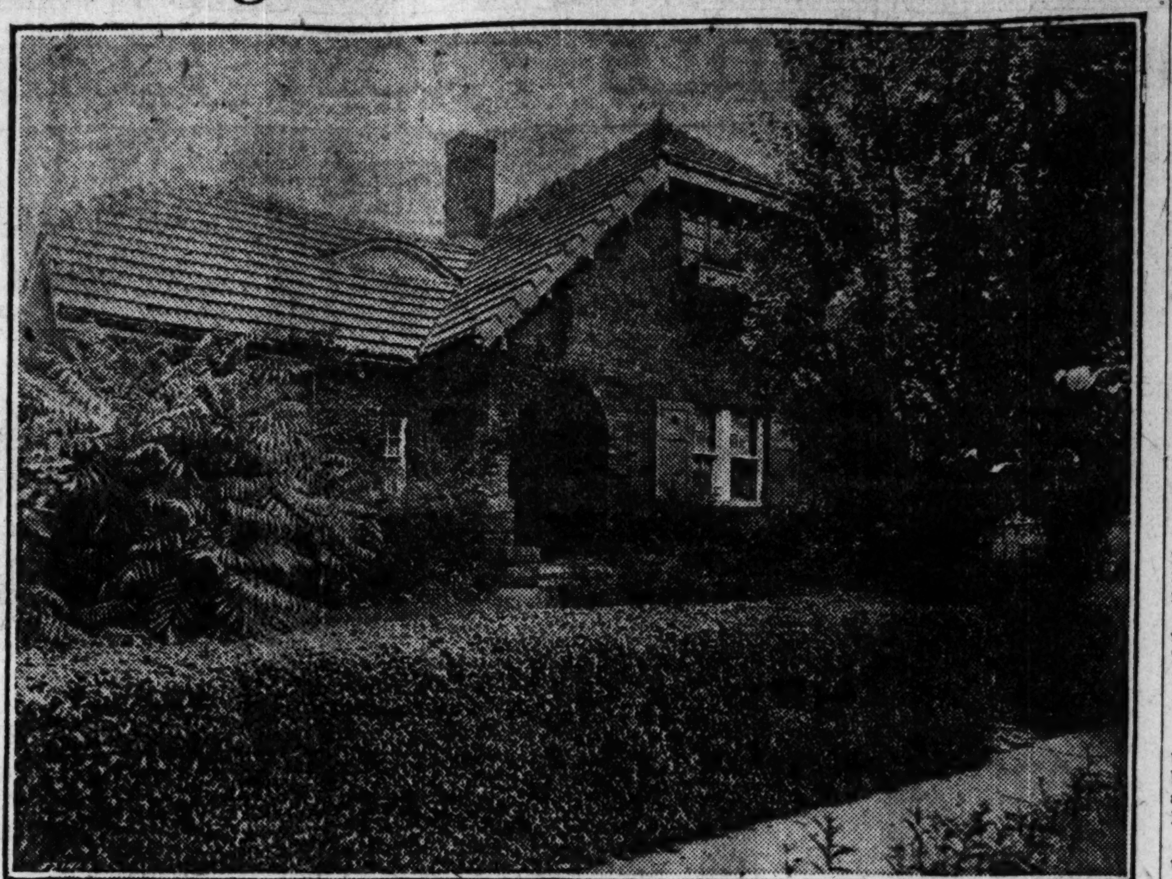
Quite Often Enough.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 17 and am going with a boy of 22. Now, Miss Blake, if this boy really thought as much of me as he says he does, don't you think he could come to see me twice a week instead of just on Sunday? He lives about 35 miles from my home. He has a car. BLUE EYES."

I think one evening a week often enough for a 17 year old girl and her beau to spend together. Don't you really, now, Blue Eyes?

It Was a Good Guess That Gave This Quaint, Homelike Bungalow to Its Proud Possessor

By Anita de Campi.



I HAVE a little treat in store for you this week for I have found one of the quaintest, homiest little houses I have seen in some time. May I tell you the little romance connected with this home? Just a glance, and one readily suspects that there must be an interesting little story about it.

In 1912 certain clay products manufacturers held an exposition in Chicago. One of the features was an architectural competition of a brick bungalow, to be reasonable in cost and yet an ideal little home. Six hundred and sixty-two designs were submitted, and of these was chosen the one best suited to the requirements of an economical small home. The successful architect was L. J. Batcheler. This house was built in the Coliseum, where the exposition was held, and by the side of the house was placed a large flask filled with marbles. The Clay Products exposition agreed to purchase a lot and rebuild the house as a prize to the person who should correctly guess the number of clay pellets in the flask. Needless to add, the proud possessor of this house is the woman who made the correct guess.

The plan of the house stands the two acid tests of a home plan; first, fitness for service, and next, simplicity. The common error is that of first making up the mind as to how the exterior of the house shall look and then trying to plan the rooms to conform. I will try to point out briefly the commendable features of this plan.

The front entrance leads into a small hall. While this is not essential it is desirable in rainy weather and in winter. In rainy weather outsiders have some place to remove wet coats and leave their umbrellas, making it unnecessary to track into the living room. In cold weather the opening and closing of the outside door does not send a chill draft directly through the living room.

From the hall it is possible to pass directly upstairs without going through other rooms.

The living room is of comfortable size and well planned in regard to circulation and light. Cleverly, the architect has left an unbroken space between the living room and dining room, which makes both rooms appear much larger. By this arrangement the fireplace may be used for the comfort of people in either room. On a cold winter's night nothing adds to the cheer of dinner like a crackling fire. Another feature which adds to the cheerfulness of the dining room is its eastern exposure. The morning sun during the breakfast hour tends greatly to start the day right.

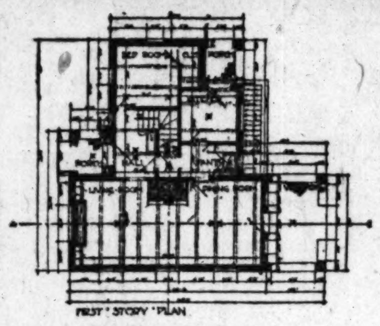
Both of these rooms have a southerly exposure, which in this case is almost essential. In summer the breezes come from the south and are desirable, but in winter the rooms which are most used should be protected against the chill north winds.

In the original plan a veranda was paced off the dining room, but when building, it was decided to close this in and convert it either into a breakfast room or solarium.

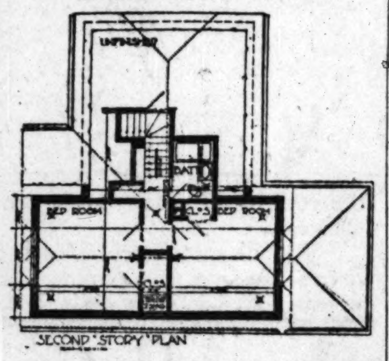
The pantry is well placed between the kitchen and dining room, and will save a great many steps. It will also serve to prevent the odors of cooking from becoming noticeable in the dining room. The south winds in summer will carry the odor of cooking out of the kitchen door rather than through the house.

The kitchen has an eastern exposure and consequently is a cheerful place in which to do the morning's work.

The bedroom is necessarily small, but is provided with a large closet. Less heat is necessary in the bedroom than in any other room, and therefore it is more logical to place the bedroom on the north than one of the rooms in which much of the day is spent.



FIRST STORY PLAN



SECOND STORY PLAN

The second floor consists of two well planned bedrooms and sufficient closet space. The bathroom is conveniently placed at the head of the stairs, but should by all means be given one or two small windows.

On account of their size and arrangement the rooms might be furnished in a becoming manner at a comparatively low cost. However, that is another problem and if this house is of sufficient interest to make it worth while I should be delighted to devote one week's space to suggestions regarding the interior treatment and furnishings.

The exterior of the house is simple and pleasing. The architect was undoubtedly influenced by a study of English cottages, and he could have found no better examples from which to gain inspiration. The Brtish are fond of their homes and take great pains in providing every possible domestic comfort and help that is possible. By way of passing, if you enjoy looking at beautiful small homes, step into your public library and ask to see a book of small English homes. The details are not practical for the American home, but nevertheless they are wonderfully interesting and you will have a better understanding as to what makes a home.

But, returning to our little house. The treatment of the windows, the window boxes, and the vines add a great deal to its interest and character. The roof is of Spanish tile which is attractive, but English slate or asbestos shingles might also be used.

In regard to construction, this house might be built of solid brick, or brick on hollow tile, which to many is preferable.

I will gladly send several small photographs of this house and clearer plans in answer to a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

WITH RADIANT HOPES.

DEAREST GIRL: Ever since my return home, after our wonderful days together,, days so filled with all that is wonderful and beautiful, my one thought has been of you; and will not be denied.

The inspiring quality of your womanliness, the entrancing memories of your sweetness, hold me in thrall everywhere I go—everything I do—you, dear little woman, are there—to inspire, to bring into my heart and life a beauty which I had never dreamed.

Many girls of today look upon marriage as a fetter, but, despite your present life of ease and the many luxuries by which you are surrounded, my heart whispers, "She is not one of the many who look upon the holy state as a vexatious necessity."

No, dear, my heart bids me be brave, because you are one of the truest, finest women God has ever made. To have you as my one possession is all that I desire. My mental equilibrium is lost in the many kaleidoscopic visions, hopes, and plans for our future. I feel that with you beside me I can, and will accomplish the worth whiles. Without you—well, that is too drear and bleak a future to even contemplate.

I have endeavored to suppress these outpourings of my overcrowded heart, but tonight my cup of fire is brimful.

God grant, my precious one, that my love comes to you as a gift from heaven, as yours surely will prove to be to me.

Remember, dear, if you cannot give me what I ask, that the love you have inspired shall guide and sustain my every endeavor, and that forever and always there shall be a cadence of praise and a prayer of thanksgiving in my soul for having known and having loved you. Always yours, JACK.

One Who Knew.

Four men, apparently old friends, were engaged in a game of rummy at one end of the coach. I was seated near the center, and across from me was an elderly man engaged at one of those vest pocket typewriters.

A woman, carrying a small dog, walked through the car, looking neither to right nor left. The card players saw her and all proceeded to talk cuttingly of women who displayed such affection for dogs.

When the man at the typewriter thought they had had their say he asked if any of them were married. They all said no.

"Well," he said, "I'm going to tell you boys something. That woman is my wife, and when you fellows get married you will find that a woman has her likes and dislikes, and you will be glad to grant her right to them." There was a dead silence. F. B.

Nothing to Laugh At.

The bride and groom, followed by the usual shower of old shoes and rice, boarded the train. The traveling man across the aisle enjoyed the fun to his heart's content.

After the train started the groom tried to clean up the rubbish left by the merrymakers. He opened the window and threw out the old shoes and rubbish. The traveling man was so amused that he forgot that he was sitting there in his stocking feet.

Later he came to his senses and then he found that the groom had mistaken the only pair of shoes the traveling man had with him for some that the merrymakers had left. M. B.

Just take your shoes off and then put those weary, shoe-crinkled, aching, burning corn-pestered, bunion-tortured feet of yours in a "Tiz" bath. Your toes will wriggle with joy; they'll look up at you and almost talk and then they'll take another dive in that "Tiz" bath.

When your feet feel like lumps of lead—all tired out—just try "Tiz." It's grand—it's glorious. Your feet will dance with joy; also you will find all pain gone from corns, callouses and bunions.

There's nothing like "Tiz." It's the only remedy that draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up your feet and cause foot torture.

Get a box of "Tiz" at any drug or department store—don't wait! Ah! how glad your feet get; how comfortable your shoes feel! You can wear shoes a size smaller if you desire.

REMOVING WRINKLES

by Antoinette Donnelly

The Remedy Is a Philosophic Outlook on Life, a Healthy Body, and a Few Minutes' Massage Every Night Before Retiring

THE amount of suffering and pain a woman can endure and survive has been glorified in verse and prose so sufficiently and well that reference to it alone will abide here. But, as they say about the strength of a chain being in its weakest link, watch the bravest of our sex go down upon the discovery of a few gray hairs or wrinkles.

Particularly the latter! Why? Because they imply years—additional years, the marks of which few women can bear up under stoically.

Why is a wrinkle? A youthful skin is supple and resistant, chiefly by reason of the presence of fat in the skin. This fat provides a lubrication of the dermis necessary to its health. When this natural fat is abstracted, the skin becomes brittle and dry, and wrinkles appear. In later life there is a natural loss of the subcutaneous fat. Then, as Dr. Pusey says, "The skin of the face is peculiar in having attached to it many small muscles, whose movements, along with the movements of the eyes, cause the play of the expressions. It is the contraction of these muscles that causes wrinkling of the skin of the face in the expression of emotions. . . . Wrinkles come earlier and are more distinct in some persons than in others. This is an individual or family trait of the tissues, just as baldness or grayness may characterize the next individual or family."

Remedy for Premature Wrinkles.

But, in any event, the remedy for premature wrinkles, which are many, is a calm and philosophic outlook on life so that worry is not entertained, and lubricating the skin with massage. Wrinkles may be prevented if the massage habit is acquired early enough. Just a couple of minutes at night will prolong the youth of the skin for years. And the following method of procedure is advised for face and neck wrinkles:

Before you begin to massage, cleanse your face wtih a good cleansing cream or with a complexion brush, a pure bland soap, and hot water. Smear skin food over your face. Then begin manipulations, starting at the forehead. Place the thumbs on the temples, the tips of the fingers so that they meet at the center of the forehead. With a circular motion move them outward and upward to the temples, making the finger tips form small circles and around one line of circles outside of the other. Repeat this movement for five minutes. Remember in this movement the tips of the fingers are pressed most as they pass upward. A light, rapid, rotary movement is used on the downward stroke.

Correcting Those Lines.

Place the fingers of both hands upon your cheeks. To give tone to the cheeks and to correct the lines running from the sides of the nose to the mouth, place the fingers of both hands upon your cheeks, with the tips almost at the chin. Push your hands upward and gently press the fingers into the flesh, continuing the motion upward and outward so that at the end of the stroke the finger tips will be at the hair line of the temple. Repeat this movement about fifteen times. Follow this movement with another series of strokes, beginning in the same position. This time make the finger tips form circles about as big as a half dollar upward and around one line of circles above the other until the forehead is reached. Repeat fifteen times.

Massaging the lines about the eyes must be done very gently, always beginning from the nose and working outward toward the temples. To remove crow's feet (laughing wrinkles) place the ends of the second and third fingers firmly on the temples, then knead deeply upward toward the forehead. For the wrinkles rising over the bridge of the nose, usually caused from frowning and eye strain, rub the fingers in the opposite way in which the wrinkles are formed.

To massage your chin, place your hands so that the finger tips meet in front under the chin; push them outward and upward toward the back of the ear. Then follow this with the circular movements as described before. In massaging, you must use pressure enough to stimulate the skin, but not enough force to bruise it. The pinching process, which is done with the thumb and first two fingers or the first finger and thumb, will help to remove a double chin, but you must be careful not to overdo this pinching movement.

Closing the Pores.

Now that your face has been thoroughly massaged, the remaining skin food is wiped off. If possible, rub a piece of ice over the face. It closes the pores and tones the skin. Then apply some more of the skin food, rubbing off what will not absorb easily. It is best to give this massage every night just before going to bed.

The best skin food is to be found in the following formula: One ounce white wax, one ounce spermaceti, two ounces lanolin, two ounces cocoanut oil, four ounces oil of sweet almonds, four ounces orange flower water and a quarter ounce boric acid. Melt all the oils and wax in a double boiler, remove from the fire and beat until cold, adding slowly and gradually the orange flower water in which the boric acid has been dissolved; lastly, pour in five drops of benzoin. Be sure that the ingredients are fresh and of the best quality.

Massage from the base of the neck upward toward the chin and outward toward the ears. Cleanse the neck thoroughly first; scrub it with a camel's hair brush, warm water and soap; rinse in warm water. Then massage the skin food given above into the neck for a couple of minutes, giving extra movements in care directly under the chin. Wipe off carefully and go over the throat with ice, which is an excellent astringent and will prevent wattles from forming under the chin.

VIRGINIA: IF YOU CHANGE TO a broader toe shoe with the aid of a bandage to straighten the large toe as it should be, you will stop the joint from enlarging. In most of the shoe stores nowadays they have men who are versed in correction of foot troubles. Could you not see one and have him show you the shoe to wear?

MRS. M. B.: YES, WITH THE greatest of pleasure I shall give you my best advice, but won't you please send s. a. e. for the exercises, which are quite too long to print here; besides they are illustrated in the little pamphlet I will send you.

M. Mc.: IT'S HIPP-ITY HOPP FOR you, young lady! Twenty pounds extra all on your hips. Send along the s. a. e. and I'll put you on a diet and through a course of "sprouts" that will make a hipless Helen of you before the short skirts have all gone out of style.

THANKFUL READER: WOMEN do have their eyebrows darkened out of the same dyepot as their hair has been immersed in. But it requires skill to get away with this treatment without detection. Just a light touching up with an eyebrow pencil is all right. But you must err on this side rather than on that if you do not want to get a hard look.

MARION C.: THE SUPERFLUOUS hair remedies that are applied locally in the form of pastes and powders and ointments require repeated applications, whereas the only permanent remedy is by electrolysis. Let me warn you, however, to have the work done by an operator you know to be conscientious and painstaking. Electrolysis inefficiently done has left scarred and burned faces to bemoan their shortsightedness in not going to the best to have the work done.

M. M. B.: HAVE SOME GOOD EXercises for the legs and hips. Send s. a. e., please.

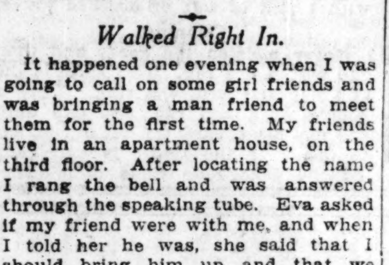
Liked to Be Informal.

My husband and I were invited out to dinner. When we got to the house, I wanted to go up the fire escape, which is in the rear, to surprise them. Husband went up the front entrance. I thought I'd climb in the window quietly. When I did so I came face to face with a man sitting reading the paper. He was a roomer. I couldn't speak, I was so surprised, and stood there with one foot in and one foot out. L. G. F.

In Came Some Sausages.

I am 10 years old. I was sitting down at the table. It was some one else's house. I had never been there before. In came some sausages. I said they were my favorite dish. Which pleased them so much. I went on saying how I liked them, when suddenly some one looked at me curiously. I turned around, and there I saw that I had absent mindedly taken all the sausages. I felt a bit embarrassed, I'll tell the world. S. F.



Walked Right In.

It happened one evening when I was going to call on some girl friends and was bringing a man friend to meet them for the first time. My friends live in an apartment house, on the third floor. After locating the name I rang the bell and was answered through the speaking tube. Eva asked if my friend were with me, and when I told her he was, she said that I should bring him up and that we should make ourselves right at home in the living room, as they were not through dressing.

I did not notice that I had rung the bell and talked with my party from the third floor, but as we were walking up took it for granted that it was the second. As the girl had suggested, I opened the door on the second floor and brought my friend right with me into the living room and shouted in a loud voice: "Are you girls ready?"

A man and a little girl came in to see who was in the living room. Since I did not recognize their faces, I asked: "Do Grotes live here?"

The man was too surprised to answer, but the little girl said: "No; they live on the third floor."

I managed to mumble a few words of apology and made for the door. After I had got out into the hall I told my friend that hereafter I would rather wait to be ushered in than to cause such confusion. F. T.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

A BRIDE IN LAVENDER.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—The Princess Pat, shivering in a big sable coat and a hat of what the French call crin—or fine horsehair—is a picture to remember. At least, it is what I remember of a smart wedding that took place in our otherwise unexciting neighborhood last week. She was one of the witnesses, and signed the register with shaking fingers—that signifying the kind of spring we have over here.

The bride was Mme. de Mier, daughter of the retiring ambassador from Mexico to London, and the bridegroom a Scotchman, Arbuthnot Leslie. But, of course, the important things are the bride, the attendant, and the church.

It was one of the old monasteries, dating back centuries, which got pretty badly beaten up in the revolution. We pass and repass it every day, and seem to hear the dull echoes of the past from its somber, empty interior. It has been a long time since anything "swell" was consummated there before. But in Paris, the older, the dingier, the more shut up your church, and the more people you have to get to work putting it in order for you, the more chic it is to be married there.

Right round the corner stands the Madeleine, "all set" for any wedding, however smart. But this bridal party called the officiating clergy away from their regular post there, and brought them to the historic relic five doors from us.

The bride sprang a brand new note in costuming. She was got up in the conventional bridal dress, with court train, veil, and flowers—only those flowers were blue, and not white. That bridal dress was not of ivory satin, but of crepe georgette and crepe de chine—and in lavender. Thus was it signified that this was a second marriage of the bride, and not her first.

She was small and blonde, and the minionettes and fruit women along the street, who formed a lane to watch the entourage enter, gasped at her prettiness. The crepe georgette formed the body of the dress, with its heavy hanging lines, and the thinner crepe de chine made the sleeves, that the arms showed through. The mauve bridal veil was held in place with blue hyacinths, and the color scheme was lovely. Hyacinths and harebells decorated the church.

The wedding was so different from one of ours. There are never pews in these churches, but chairs, and they were arranged informally as at a reception. The bridegroom sat up near the altar in one of them waiting for his bride. She, after the worldwide custom, walked to meet him on the arm of his father.

The wedding was really awfully smart. Mme. de Lana, sister of the bride, was the first attendant. Her dress shrieked Vionnet so loudly that you could hear it. It was of beige, and it had pieces of the material crossing the bodice horizontally, in contrast to the tooth shaped points that flounced the skirt. The big hat was of beige crinoline and transparent in the crown, so that one could see every wavy hair of the beautiful coiffure.

The value of the costuming of the Lady Patricia Ramsay lay in its contrasts. The thin hat was indeed effective with the heavy coat, and then, too, the hat was a feature in itself. It was a mustard yellow, with oats of the same color flattened against the crown, and these were punctuated with yellow buttercups—an Anglo-Saxon hat with a French turn to it. Results were excellent.

The third dress shows what is perhaps the winning silhouette of the day. Go to Claridge's for their tea dances and you will see eight out of ten of the dresses made on these lines. This one is valuable as indicating further the tri-color vogue in robes.

The dress itself is white, and the stripes are in red and blue. As you can see, the bodice is tight fitting and the skirt plaited. It is run lengthwise with ribbons of marine blue velvet. The low cut bodice is finished with a Charlotte Corday collar in white embroidery. Alice Bernard is the author.

The fourth offering is valuable for showing the way that Vionnet is using straw for cuffs and collars instead of fur. Of course it is awfully uncomfortable stuff to have around your neck, but you must put an up to date appearance. This is gray straw on a pale gray coat. (If you sat down in it on a cane seated chair you would be lost—or the coat would, and nothing short of dyeing would ever save it.) People are ordering it in numbers in more conservative colors, and then again there are the smart purchasers—and rich—principally from Spain and Portugal, who are getting the models exactly duplicated.

They say it will be so useful for spring. I should not think it would be exactly useful for anything except for contributing toward a chic appearance, because, aside from its being a little more delicate than white, you of course mustn't have an interlining in it, lest you look fat.

The hat is by Reboux and is Russian in shape. It is of gray silk cord, braided.

Mary Ellen has passed through the horrors of moving twice in her three short years, and the last time made a great impression on her. The other day she passed a house which was being torn down—roofless and wall-less—showing all the empty bedrooms. After long watching she made one brief comment, nodding her wise little head: "Dose people going to move." M. P.

One day Harold's sister gave him 3 cents to buy a top. After entering the store, he walked up to the counter and asked the clerk the price of a top.

"They are 5 cents each, sonny," was the reply.

"Can'tcha give one to me for 3 cents?" Harold asked.

"No," the clerk answered. "I'll take either 5 cents or nothing. What do you say?"

"I'll take it for nothun," was the prompt reply. E. W.

Gertrude sorrowfully watched many children buy regular rations of candy, and approached her mother on the subject.

"Mamma, I see so many children in my class buy all-day suckers, while I seldom receive a penny for candy."

"Yes, Gertrude, many parents have so much more money than we have and therefore can give their little children more money for candy."

"But, mamma, that belongs to a child's living." P. T.

1033—Girl's dress. Sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Size 8 requires 2⅞ yards of 36 inch material.

How to Use the Patterns

EXCELLENT patterns for a sweater coat and box plaited skirt are given in No. 9961 and No. 9526. Neither one will be too difficult to attempt if one has been accustomed to making one's own dresses successfully.

Silk or wool jersey cloth for the coat and one of the sports silks or light woolens for the skirt will make a stunning suit; or, if you want something for the warmer weather, there are heavy wash materials that will be smart.

The seams of the coat should be finished with a binding, and it must be easily put on, for if it is held too tight in the basting it will make a hard line that will be apt to show through to the outside.

No lining is necessary, unless a shallow back yoke lining is put in for those who feel drafts and catch cold easily.

The skirt is box plaited all around—there being ten plaits. It is a style that is becoming to nearly everybody. Take plenty of time in working on the skirt, so you will make no errors, and do your work on a large table. It is not a bad idea to pin the pattern together first, so as to be sure you understand just what all marks mean. Be sure the hip and waist measures correspond with your own, and if they do not jot down on a piece of paper the differences to be allowed. Any changes of this kind should be made in the plaits that come on the side, letting out or taking in a little, perhaps, on several, so the good lines will not be destroyed.

When you have verified these measures, including the length, pin the pattern on carefully and cut out. Then, with a basting thread, accurately mark the perforated lines on the cloth, using a short and long stitch. In pinning the plaits in place, pin first from the bottom up to the hip all around and, before basting them down, run your hand under each plait, so that your fingers touch the inside fold. If there is even a slight pucker felt, change the fold until each part is smooth. No plait will sit well unless under and upper folds are perfectly smooth.

Then pin the plaits down between the hip and waist lines, being particular here also about the smoothness. When this part has been successfully done, baste each plait down from top to bottom and try on. It is well to remember that the skirt may be tighter after the plaits are held by the stitching, and an easy fit will be necessary to prevent the skirt "riding up" about the waist when you sit down. On some figures the line between the waist and hips has to be more or less curved, instead of being laid perfectly straight between the two points.

If the work up to this part is done right it will not be difficult to finish the skirt.

No. 1033 is a darling dress for a small or young girl, and it seems to be especially designed for one of the summery materials. For instance, a white muslin or organdie with tiny pink rosebuds would be charming if the sash were made of the rose organdies and the panels bound with the same, or edged with the tiniest of ruffles of the plain rose color.

There are no special difficulties in making this dress, the skirt being a one piece, straight gathered pattern, and the panels that make the overdress simply taking time to make nicely. If the ruffles are decided on for the trimming, cut the organdie on the straight, and have the ruffles, when finished, three-quarters inch wide. Probably cutting the strips one and one-quarter inches wide and using the narrowest hemmer on the machine will bring them to that width. They should be put on without a heading. Have the seam come to the wrong side, overcast the edge, turn the seam up towards the panel, and stitch from the right side a little distance from the first seam. This will hold the seam on the wrong side in place.

No. 1010 is about as simple looking a design as possible, yet it is an ideal one for a charming summer's dress.

The skirt is the usual straight, one piece gathered one, finished with a deep hem at the bottom, and measures, for size 36, two yards.

The waist is cut from a plain kimono pattern, has short sleeves and a rather wide shawl collar.

The trimming suggested in the picture cannot be improved upon, and it is enough. Dark blue organdie—just the solid color—would be lovely, with the ruffles made of organdie in white and the hem of the ruffles chainstitched or featherstitched in red or black. The stitches would have to be the smallest possible, else the effect would be too heavy.

Green organdie with the trimming in white, the right shade of yellow or even blue, would make a pretty gown.

Any one of the cotton voiles would make up well in this design and so would the ginghams, and of course the dress would be pretty if the material were figured. Then if one wished something with a little more weight there are the sateens—and there is no material showing more beautiful shades of the different colors than sateen. There are different weights in it generally; the light weight would seem to be preferable.

One often sees ruffles that look as though they had been carelessly gathered and put on, and the appearance is not pleasing.

They should be quartered, and where the space to which they are to be sewed is a long one they should be divided in eight parts. Have a separate thread for each part, lay the gathers carefully, and pin at close intervals to the dress. When basting in place use the needle point to shift the fullness as you baste, so there will not be any ugly bunches. The stitching, too, has to be done rather slowly so as to watch and see that the foot of the machine does not push any of the gathers out of place.

DRY CLEANING AT HOME

by Alma Harding

ALPHABETICAL TABLE OF SPOT REMOVERS.

This is the fifth article of a series giving instructions in dry cleaning, fine laundry work, bleaching, and dyeing.

CALF BINDINGS. — Wash the book bindings lightly with a sponge dipped in a mixture of one-half ounce of the best glue dissolved in one pint of warm water, to which one teaspoonful of glycerin has been added. Rub well with a chamois when dry.

Candy.

Use soap and water. If chocolate is present, it is often necesary to spot with glycerin, especially on silks of a close weave.

Carbonterachloride.

This is a noninflammable solvent, in every way superior to all other solvents in the experience of the writer. It has no smell, does not leave rings, is better for dyes, especially of silk; has less tendency to spread, and thus make the spot larger; leaves leather softer and less liable to crack. It has less evaporation than any other solvent, and being noninflammable (in fact, is the basis of all fire extinguishers) may be sent parcel post, a great advantage to those living in rural districts. The dangers of accidents and fires are avoided. It is insoluble in water and in alcohol under 75 per cent and in glycerin. But it dissolves in acetone, glacial acetic acid, oleic acid, etc. It dissolves oils, fats, wax, ceresin, spermaceti, paraffin, stearine, boiled oil, lacquers, shellac, asphalt, pitch, balsam, coal tar, pine tar, gutta percha, rubber, and hard and soft soap.

Carpets.

First beat thoroughly and go over with a vacuum cleaner. Then make a wad about the size of an apple of cotton wrapped in a piece of linen. Go over the carpet by squares with this wad dipped in a 5 per cent benzine soap solution, after which sponge with a weak acetic acid solution to bring out the colors. For another fashion of cleaning, see Rugs.

Ceresin.

Soak first with a little castor oil to soften. Then use carbontetrachloride. If necessary use benzinized magnesia paste afterward, but it probably will not be necessary.

Charmeuse.

Be careful in spotting not to rub the stain but gently to daub. This silk of all materials is left with a lighter spot if rubber. The colored is almost never washed, but the white may be wet cleaned without damage.

Checked Goods.

Those checks which run or blur upon being treated with soap may be cleaned by a weak acetic acid solution almost or quite cold.

Cherries.

Same as fruit stains.

Chewing Gum.

Apply ice until the gum is brittle. By working the cloth in the fingers and brushing, it will usually all disappear. If any remains, it may be dissolved by chloroform.

Chloride of Lime.

This is the basis of most bleaching processes. A too vigorous action of the chlorine upon the fiber may be counteracted by immediate immersion in a solution of sodium hyposulphate or in an ammonia solution. It should be used only on vegetable fibers.

Chloroform.

This is a useful solvent, less dangerous than ether, and noninflammable. It removes most fats and several obstinate stains as varnishes, and will dissolve grass green. As it is extremely volatile it should be kept in a bottle with a firm glass stopper.

Chocolate.

This is one of the most difficult stains to remove. When it is new often sprinkling borax on the spot and letting it stand for a little while in some cold water before pouring boiling water on it from a height will do the trick. But usually it is necessary to use glycerin, which may be applied directly to the stain, and then the whole spot removed with carbontetrachloride, or glycerin may be mixed with alcohol and used to remove the spot. In white goods it does no harm to get as much as possible of the stain out with soap and water before beginning the glycerin treatment.

Citric Acid.

This acid should be used wherever tartaric acid is prescribed, as it is much cheaper and much safer to have around delicate materials.

Cleaning Fluids.

There are several mixtures which may be made at home, and it has been discovered by European research that various solvents attack spots with varying intensity. So that a mixture of several different solvents is usually a great advantage, especially in the overall cleaning of a dress, for instance, where there is no sure knowledge of the origin of the different spots.

The following fluids are suggested: (a) Benzol, 4 parts; ether, 1 part, amyl acetate, 1 part. (b) alcohol, 3 parts; ether, 3 parts; ammonia, 1 part. (c) ammonia, 4 ounces, bay rum, 4 ounces; salt peter, 1-6 ounce mixed with 1 pint of soft or distilled water.

Cleaning.

Never moisten the goods and then rub with a dry rag. This spreads the dirt out and makes a ring. Take a sponge or a soft rag, and dab until the spot disappears; try not to rub, but to dab. If the tissue is extremely fragile, take four folds of blotting paper and soak well in carbontetrachloride, place the stained article on the paper and cover with four thicknesses of plain blotting paper. Then press firmly with a cold iron. Repeat until the stain has entirely gone. Use a sample of the fabric if possible. When using acids always try out the effect on a piece of the goods, a seam or hem, if necessary. If the nature of the stain is not known, use distilled water fast, avoid wrinkles and dry streaks.

Dry as quickly as possible. A piece of buckskin is a good thing to keep on hand to dry with. Or you may dust a little plaster of Paris over the spot to absorb the moisture, and brush off when dry. For dark goods use Fuller's earth in this connection.

Embroidery hoops are good to use when applying acids, as they hold the material firm.

Don't clean on damp days, and see that all materials are thoroughly dry before attempting to dry clean them.

Coats.

Coats which are lined must be worked on quickly and dried with buckskin as quickly as possible to prevent the lining from running.

"We have in our little village a young man who has recently contracted tuberculosis. He is not normal mentally and has never gone to school. His mother is a widow and has a hard time to get along. Now that the boy is confined to the house, he hasn't much to amuse himself with except a little phonograph. I wonder if some of the good readers of this column would send him some of the records they are tired of? It doesn't matter if they are nearly worn out; he'll enjoy them anyway. A short time ago there was quite a fad among both children and adults piecing together cut out picture puzzles. If some readers have any of these puzzles they are tired of I know this unfortunate young man would derive much pleasure from them. C. S."

This letter makes its own appeal. If you have picture puzzles or a record or two to spare I'll be happy to supply the young man's address.

"I have in my possession some sheet music, both vocal and instrumental, I should like to send to some one who would care for them. I also have a particularly new hard rubber washable right side truss, I should like to send to some sufferer, who would feel they could make use of it. H. A. H."

Your name will be given to any of the host of music lovers, who may be interested in your generous offering.

Business Girls

ABUSE OF PRIVILEGE.

ANN, Dorothy, and I were halfway through lunch yesterday before Marion joined us. We had given her up, but when she came in she explained that she had been delayed on the point of leaving by a group of girls from her office who were holding an indignation meeting over the enforcement of some new office rules and who wanted her condemnations of the rules and the originators of them added to theirs.

She confessed to us that she didn't add much to the denunciatory effect of the meeting because, while she sympathized with the girls—their loss of privileges was hers also—she realized that they all, including herself, deserved what they got by their flagrant disregard of the few rules hitherto set down and their ungrateful abuse of privileges.

"We didn't know how well off we were until this morning," Marion sighed. "I had an idea, though, for some time that things wouldn't be tolerated as they were for long, and I did warn the girls in my department. Only about a week ago I told them that we'd all have to pay a little more attention to house rules and try not to override all our privileges or else we'd have the lid clamped down tight on us. Conditions were pretty bad all over the house, of course, and we hardly had a chance to show any improvement in our department when the thing happened."

"How did they do it?" Dorothy asked.

"A letter was sent around this morning directed to all department heads," said Marion. "It was signed by the head of the firm, and requested each manager to call a meeting of all the employés in his department and read the new rules to them. You can imagine the excitement it caused all over the house—and the gloom."

"But do you think it'll have much effect?" asked Dorothy. "I mean, don't you think the new rules will be forgotten in a little while and that you'll all go back to taking the same old advantages?"

Marion laughed a bit ruefully. "I don't think there's a chance of that happening," she said. "After our meeting this morning Mr. Wright told us that all the department heads were called to the executive offices yesterday and prepared for the letter that came this morning. They were told, collectively and individually, that if they had been more efficient in the management of their departments such drastic rules wouldn't have been necessary. And that now, since they were necessary, they would have to enforce them. They would be held personally responsible, they were told, for any infringements by the people in their departments, and if any of them failed to maintain the proper discipline a new chief would be found for his department."

"That doesn't mean that your industrial council is abolished, does it?" said Ann. "I think it would be a great pity if it did."

"O, no," Marion assured her. "That's a permanent thing, of course—life insurance, sick benefits, pension list—that all stands as originally planned. It's keeping regular hours, limiting our personal telephone service, prohibiting social visits among employés, loitering in the washroom, and so on, that all the fuss is about.

"As I said before," continued Marion, "it's nothing more than we deserve. We were getting frightfully lax about office hours; now we'll have to be at our desks promptly at 9 and not leave them to go home a minute before 5. No more extra half hours at noon time, either. "And," her voice grew doleful, "no more telephone calls.

"That," Marion went on, "is what everybody regrets more than anything else. Personal telephone service was our greatest privilege—at least I considered it so—but it was more abused than any other. I've seen girls in our office holding a wire for nothing more than a gossipy conversation with a friend for fifteen minutes."

"There you are," said Ann after Marion had gone. "We don't appreciate our advantages until they're taken away from us."

"Well," Dorothy announced, gathering up her bag and gloves, "I'm going to tell the girls in our office what's happened at Marion's place. The same thing might happen to us at any time. And I, for one, am going to guard my present privileges carefully."

A RIBBON ALPHABET.

THESE ribbon initials are quite a little out of the ordinary, and will work up beautifully on many things. Transfer the letters to the material by first laying a piece of tissue paper over the letter, and go over each part of it carefully with a sharp but soft pencil. Then lay the tissue paper you have worked on, penciled side down, on another piece of tissue, and go over the same process again. Lay this second impression face down on the material, pin it securely, and go over each line for the third time.

The reason you have to do the work on both sides of the tissue is that if you used the first impression you made the letter would be the wrong side around on the cloth.

The raised satin stitch is the handsomest for these letters, and the first step is to use a running stitch on all outlines. These stitches must be well done, so as to keep perfectly the shape of the letter. The stitches can be quite long where the line is straight, but where there are curves the stitches must be short and must follow the curves perfectly. Of course, the stitches on the wrong side are tiny ones.

The next step is the padding, and this is done by using three or four strands of the floss and taking running stitches that are quite long on the right side and short on the under. Or you may fill in with a chain stitch. As you near the outline make the filling less pronounced.

The embroidery is done with a finer floss than that used for the filling, and the stitches are always at right angles to the edge. Of course, this work is all done in a frame, and has to be done slowly, so as to have even looking work. Where there are curves the stitches have to be taken close together on the inside, and on the outer side there must be no spaces, but try and have them come just together. And on the inside they must never lap.

A little practice will make it possible to do beautiful work, and where one is inexperienced time will be well spent by practicing first on an ordinary piece of cloth. It is a fascinating work, but unless it is well done there is no beauty in it.

Where the ribbon ties across the letters you might work the edges in a fine outline stitch and fill in the spaces with the seed stitch.

The last installment of the alphabet will appear next Sunday.

MRS. M. W.: It would be difficult to give you some home sewing rules, unless I knew what points you are in doubt about. If you will write and tell me just what you want to know, I will be glad to try to help you out.

THE LADY OF THE CHAIR.

I WAS told that a month's rest at a quiet resort was essential if I wished to avert a breakdown. I am by nature a hard working, bashful young man.

On the last day of my stay at the resort I was trying to picture myself back in the office. Seated in a rocker on the hotel porch, I had nearly fallen asleep, when suddenly my rocker bumped into another immediately in the rear. I heard an exclamation, the sound of a falling book. Turning, I found a pretty woman looking in my direction with a startled expression on her charming face. I hastened to make my apologies. She said it was partly her fault. After a delightful talk we parted, she saying that in the event of our meeting again she would present me to her parents.

Next day found me back in the city, and the incident became forgotten.

A year later came another visit to the doctor, the same one who sent me on the "rest cure." This time he told me an immediate operation for appendicitis should be undergone and suggested he operate early the following day—mentioning he was to operate on a girl before my turn came, for the same complaint, and that he hoped to see both of us sitting up in our chairs inside of ten days.

The morning after the operation, lying quietly in my bed and turning my eyes towards the door of my room, I noticed the door stood open and that a woman's face was reflected in the mirror in the room opposite. It was the face of my "lady of the chair."

At that moment my nurse arrived, and I asked her to leave the door open—this was in the hope of getting further glances. If the girl happened to remember me I should not be sorry. I found this hope of a recognition passed the time and diverted my mind, which was kept on the alert listening for the opening of the door opposite. In fact, I forgot my own troubles to a great extent.

One morning the doctor surprised me by saying I might sit up for a while. I looked at a calendar and found I had been eight days in bed, that most of the time had been spent trying to look across where once in a while I would see a woman's face, for the more I saw it the more I liked it.

Next day the nurse wheeled me into the hallway, and there was my lady—also in her chair! Thus came about our second meeting, and we were both in chairs. We smiled and shook hands, and I was telling her how I had passed my time for the last nine days. The following morning we walked our first faltering steps towards convalescence together, and our return to normal health was not long delayed.

Tomorrow it will be the anniversary of the first collision of our chairs, and tomorrow a minister is to do his bit in bringing us together, for before leaving the hospital I was accepted, and any future collisions life may have in store for us we mean to share the bumps together.

SUMMER LUNCHEON MENUS.

ARE menus fascinating? A large number of people think they are. I have especially good reason to think they are, since I have collected them from my youth up. But today some menus bore me. Others excite my fears. Rarely do I see one that really and truly fascinates me.

This is in part the fault of our present day markets. In only rare instances do they furnish the wherewithal for fascinating menus. Paris and London owe part of their fame as world capitals to the fact that they do have the material in their markets for fascinating menus, and Italian cookery has done its part in making Italy a great playground for the traveler, because of its interesting foods. The menus of Italy are fascinatingly different not only because of different materials but because they have not our ordinary frame. The appetizers—the "antipasto" — is more omnipresent than in Paris menus.

To have a frame for a menu is a great convenience, but too swift an adherence to it makes for extreme table or eating dullness. A few people seem to have a genius for wreathing each item of this frame attractively, and attractiveness is a great point, but making a menu that will stand the test of reason as well is a highly important thing.

A Perfect Menu Is Rare.

A perfect menu is a rare thing. One eminent cook has compared it to a perfect musical program, hard to make. We may also compare a perfect menu to a string of perfect pearls, knowing well that too many menus are but strings of the most common glass beads—showy, and bright, and satisfactory to those who are not learned in food qualities.

Take a luncheon menu for experiments in near perfection. It is easy to find many flaws in luncheon menus, yet on the whole they are ordinarily superior to dinner menus. Soup is not considered necessary on a luncheon menu, yet for many occasions a light soup in cups instead of a middle dish of meat is desirable. For anybody who must do a heavy afternoon's work, light stimulating items like a cream soup, the simplest of breads, or something like crisp rolls, is the most desirable thing. A glass of milk on a hot day may take the place of the soup.

When one begins to consider possibilities in luncheons, confusion is imminent. It is best to fix on seasonable things, even voguish things if we choose, and straightway fill the frame.

A Luncheon Menu.

Let us reason together, then, on a luncheon menu which with slight changes could be used either for the indoors well set table or could be served out of doors:

Radishes. Hot or Cold Meat Appetizer.
Chicken en Casserole. New Potatoes.
Asparagus with Melted Butter.
Crisp Rolls or Bread and Butter Sandwiches.
Frozen Fruit Salad, Sweet Graham Wafers.
Cake or Gingerbread and a Beverage.

Today we have year around appetizers in the shape of celery and radishes. Cool and crisp, we never tire of these. They can be served "au naturel" or the celery may be curled and the radishes cut ornamentally in a number of charming fashions. Some people seem to forget that a few of the inner leaves form a most convenient handle, and are ornamental as well. In general it is rather a nice, even an aristocratic, thing to leave them on.

We might say that we eat the radishes or the celery for life insurance. We do not eat them for nutriment, for they have next to none, being largely water, but a precious mineral water with a unique flavor far pleasanter than that from sulphur or salt springs.

When we stimulate the appetite with a piquant meat or fish paste, served on a strip or small round of thin bread toasted, which we call a canape, we have a good chance to exercise our reasoning powers both in preparing and eating it. It is undoubtedly best to have the bread foundation of the coarser sort, and brown or oatmeal breads are as palatible if lightly toasted or when not toasted for that matter, if they are not too dry, as white. From a digestive standpoint there are certain reasonable objections to meat cut fine and highly seasoned, but these may be balanced by serving them with good digestive roughage like coarse grained bread.

Another way of preparing these appetizers is to put them on several layers of lettuce leaves, packed closely and lightly seasoned, then cut in rounds, triangles, or strips as we choose.

Meat Pastes.

Carefully boiled meats, like chicken and pork—not beef—put through a meat chopper, coarse disk, work up best into meat pastes. Half a cup of paste will go a long way in making appetizers, and any flavor destined for that use should be prepared at once and mixed with mayonnaise dressing which is a way of potting it. At the same time a few nuts may be put through the food chopper, and a bit of toasted bread may follow as an economy and not objectionable for extending the whole. But if the liquid in which the meat was boiled or simmered is available, it is best to keep the meat in that and prepare it only at the last.

For a hot canape on hot toast a small amount of sauce should be made from the liquid with pronounced seasonings. For the cold or more common canape mix the meat and chopped nuts—only a few of the latter—to smoothness with mayonnaise dressing, well seasoned with mustard and a few grains of cayenne. Some celery cut fine, and always some green or red sweet pepper chopped fine, enhance this mixture.

At the last add a little whipped cream to make it extremely smooth and spread. A dot or two of mayonnaise may be used on the finished appetizer, but this is not common.

Adaptations of the Meat Paste.

A meat paste prepared as above—a larger quantity of it—may be packed in a mold, chilled, and then served in exactly the same way as a meat loaf, to which it is superior and safer for summer than the loaf with gelatin. Or with enough whipped cream to make it as smooth as a mousse it may be pressed into a mold, packed in half ice and half salt for several hours, and served on a bed of lettuce as a frozen salad. These are becoming increasingly popular for summer use. They may be served with or without a salad dressing, and those of meat go well with bread and butter.

To Prepare Celery for Meat Pastes or Fine Salads.

Wash the celery, scrape off coarse fibers, if any, cut into convenient lengths for stripping, strip lengthwise into three or four pieces, and then hold these together and cut across, making exceedingly fine pieces. In this way a small amount of celery can be well distributed and is a summer economy when celery is nominally out of season, but rarely out of the market.

Buttered Asparagus.

Buttered asparagus is as good cold as hot. It may be made more piquant when cold by adding a bit of French dressing or by dipping it in a bit of salad dressing of some sort, although these are not needed for palatability. Wash carefully, scrape off scales, break off hard end, drop into boiling water to blanch for five minutes or more, according to size, dip into cold water, drain and cook in small amount of water, serve on several little pieces of toast per serving with just melted butter poured over all. Eight stems per person is considered a good serving.

Frozen Fruit Salad.

One may make almost any combination of fruits for the increasingly popular frozen fruit salads. In strawberry season we may always get a pink salad by using some of these berries. Whether we shall combine fresh fruits with dried fruits, like dates and raisins, is a matter of taste.

For enough salad for two or three people take one-fourth cup of strawberries, one-fourth cup of diced orange, one-fourth cup of pineapple cut fine. Stir into the mixture a little fine sugar and let them stand ten or fifteen minutes before adding enough boiled dressing to cover each piece of fruit well. Then fold in a little whipped cream—from three to six tablespoons before it is whipped will probably be enough for this quantity—and put in single mold or individual molds before packing in a mixture of finely broken ice and salt—half and half—for two hours.

Stiffened Fruit Salad Dressing.

Beat one egg slightly, add it to one cup of sour cream, two tablespoons of vinegar and one teaspoon of gelatin which has been soaked for a few minutes in a tablespoon of cold water. For further seasoning use a teaspoon of sugar, or more if to taste, or none at all, one teaspoon of salt, one-fourth teaspoon of mustard, or none if you do not approve of it in a fruit salad dressing, and a tiny bit of pepper if you are trying to make a rather piquant dressing. A grain or two of cayenne may be the pepper.

Put these all together in a double boiler and stir constantly until the mixture thickens, or if you are a careful cook put the mixture directly over the fire, stir every minute and cook in about five minutes—in a broad bottomed saucepan. When this is to be frozen add it to the fruit before it is cold.

Sweet Graham Wafers.

The following little wafer should be in the repertoire of every home cook who likes to serve rather rarely dainty things of a wholesome order: One-half cup granulated sugar, one-half cup sour cream, one-third teaspoon of soda, one-half teaspoon of salt, one heaping cup of sifted graham flour, white flour to handle and roll.

Sift the graham flour. Put cream in mixing bowl with sugar and salt, and beat with egg beater. Sift soda with once sifted graham flour and stir or fold into wet mixture to get a stiff dough. Put a little white flour on the bread board, make the dough into a smooth ball, then roll it out as thin almost as possible and cut in small rounds, or if you can make a straight line with a knife cut it in small dominoes.

Before cutting sprinkle dough lightly with sugar. If cut in small dominoes these may be pricked before being baked in a rather medium or even slow oven until crisp and brown.

Epsom Salts like Drinking Lemonade

If you want epsom salts without the awful taste and nausea, ask your druggist for a handy package of "Epsonade Salts" which looks and acts exactly like epsom salts because it is real epsom salts combined with fruit derivative salts, giving it the taste of sparkling lemonade. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of cold water when bilious, headachy or constipated.

1921 Is Rewarding Fighters

REVELL & CO.

Wabash Ave. Adams St.

(Memorial Editorial)

REMEMBRANCE

The beautiful custom of strewing flowers on the graves of the dead originated with the women of the south. Gen. John A. Logan, as commander of the Grand Army of the Republic in 1868 and 1869, appointed May 30th for that purpose. Since then—in both north and south—the day has been observed as Decoration Day.

It has come to be a day devoted to the old soldiers, men, every one, who fought nobly to give us what they conceived and we now know to be freedom and liberty. What words to conjure with!

In all our wars men left their homes and loved ones to rally and fight under the "Stars and Stripes." Although we, as a nation, make the least martial noise, want nothing that is the treasure of others, yet we are ever ready, in any apt emergency, to join where liberty and freedom are menaced.

Those of us who bask in the sunshine of peace today, especially those who could not join the Army or Navy, must hark back to all the dark days and thank God there are millions of brave men—and exalted women to cheer them on—ready and anxious to stand by the colors, defend our homes and our people.

May the present reign of peace be perpetual! May the victories of humanity hereafter be in the fields in industry, education, self-control, and happiness.

Let the graves of all our dead be decorated, but place a garland of choicest flowers on the graves of the soldiers whom we especially honor, whose lives made ours safer, happier, more worth while.

As we honor them, we love them; as we remember them, they rest in peace.

"Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment day;
Tears and love for the blue,
Love and tears for the gray."

The Theaters

By Percy Hammond.

Mr. Woods, his keys poised in a welcoming gesture, stands ready to open doors of the new McCormick-Woods Apollo tomorrow night, and dedicate such happiness as may be caused by the drama. In other ports theatrical playhouses are familiar things, and the building of them is as common an ity in New York, for instance, as the building of bungalows used to be here. our Broadway overlords are chary about real estate when it is far from and they are content to produce their wares in this neighborhood in old gloomy shacks, unworthy, almost, of the wares themselves. Although of the most aged of Chicago reviewers in point of service, I have seen four theaters built—the Blackstone, the Colonial, the Cort, and the Woods. efore one may be permitted a bit of provincial agitation on the eve of orrow's event and to bestow upon the shoulder of Mr. Woods, if not upon of Mr. McCormick, a hearty thwack of gratitude and admiration.

The Apollo, it is said by those who have seen it on the inside, is a happy mise between the merry and the dignified; that its decor is rich and that its arrangements for patrons are spacious and pleasing and that d the footlights it breathes an atmosphere of rest and comfort for the ers. Most of the many recent New York theaters are merely crevices nded by brick and mortar, trifling, expedient holes in the wall, little huts y put up like carnival tents, as places to give shows. The Apollo, how- is a theater. Into its sculptured stones its projectors have built a fine and to launch it as a headquarters for the good, the true, and the beau- "The Passing Show" has been selected.

ce the play, not architecture, is said to be the thing, a word should be about the entertainment chosen to inaugurate the new Apollo. It is a t achievement, one of those works of warmth, color, jest, and move- laden with the beauty and the fragrance indigenous to the Winter Garden w York. It contains the Howard brothers, Willie and Gene, and stores, y, of loveliness, timid, soft, and bold. Mr. Shubert, something like Mr. il and Plato, is an exponent of blue veins, pearly skins, and contours d and defiant. He is for clothing women in virtue's robes alone. With an he says:

s shows are spectacles constructed to enchant the eye and the ear of experienced and the unwary. "The Passing Show" is not, perhaps, the you would select to open a fine theater. You may say to yourself tomor- ight at the Apollo, What a waste of the art of architecture and the s of engineering! But you should remember that the theater is the of the arts, delinquent and misbehaving. It is one of our problems. ps with theaters like the Apollo it will improve under the helpful en- ment of other, more honest arts.

s at this time of year that the dramatic commentator with a good mem- y or a scrapbook compiles for his reader the season's record in the aters. The successes and the failures are set down again—the bad plays that won and the good plays that lost, each tabbed with a sapient d of explanation. Largely necrological, as a rule, the practice is a depress- one, inspiring melancholia and a desire for the summer gardens. So it e foregone here as usual, and other more competent mortuarians will t to write the epitaph and bear the moldering urn. It has been, how- , the most prosperous season in the annals of Chicago theaters, made so popularity of "Declassé," "Abraham Lincoln," "East Is West," "Bab," ty," "Smilin' Through," "The Bat," "Welcome Stranger," and the girl . Not much to boast about, but still better than you might expect. ni starred, and was amused thereby; "Beyond the Horizon" failed to the grade of our desires in the theater, and "The Beggar's Opera," a though loudly and enthusiastically talked about, appealed insufficiently those who live this side of the tracks. Nothing much happened, aside "Dulcy," "The Tavern," "Declassé," and "Bab." to cause you to think theater is an adult institution. Still, the drama provided us with e to go in an ennuied hour after the doors of the Art Institute were closed and we were a-weary of books and bridge. And we can still hope successfully that next season will be no better.

Old friends are best, according to rumor, so this week will have its amicable elements. Miss Taylor is to come to Powers' in "Peg o' My Heart," a drama as sterling as woolen blankets or rubber heels, and with the added value of her own priceless presence. Miss Taylor has never played Peg in Chicago, but a rather good imitation of her was given years ago by Miss Peggy O'Neill. Miss Doris Keene is to come back in "Romance,' 'a wise, shrewd and thrifty show, much better than most successful plays, and a splendid field for Miss Keene's unusual prowess. There is also to be at the Illinois that staple veteran, "Robin Hood," sung by a cast that has been singing it to encouraging receipts in the colonies.

From this morning's New York Times:

Sam H. Harris, in his amiable effort to corral practically all of next season's plays and players, has now added Elsie Ferguson to his string. Miss Ferguson will appear under the Harris banner in a play by Zoe Akins—one that has not yet figured in any of the announcements of Miss Akins' labors. Miss Akins, incidentally, will have her opportunity to jump to the fore ranks of American dramatists next season, for no less than four popular actresses will be appearing in her plays. Ethel Barrymore will continue on tour in "De Classee"; Marjorie Rambeau will be seen in Miss Akins' "Daddy Goes A-Hunting," to be produced jointly by Mr. Hopkins and Mr. Woods; Emily Stevens, as announced during the last week, will be seen under the direction of Mr. Harris in "Saint Ursula," the work of Miss Akins and Edward Sheldon, and now comes Miss Ferguson to add a fourth illustrious name to the list. The Akins royalties, if all goes well, will leap into the Hopwood class.

The imminent closing of "The Champion" means that "Queed," Emery Pottle's dramatization of Henry Sydnor Harrison's best seller of some years ago, will be tried out in Atlantic City in about five or six weeks, with Grant Mitchell in the leading rôle.

* * *

Martin Brown's "The Great Music," which the Selwyns will produce next season, has for its central character a composer whose life ambition it is to be a writer of great music. . . . Samuel Shipman's newest play, "Lawful Larceny," written without a collaborator, has been bought by Sam

MISS HELEN MELLETTE in "THE PASSING SHOW OF 1921" APOLLO

Mr. Cohan Enters "The Tavern" and Revels in Its Melodrama

By James Whittaker.

NEW YORK, May 28.—[Special.]—There was always an annoying bit of what it was originally meant to be left in "The Tavern" until last Monday, when George M. Cohan took it out and put himself in. Mr. Cohan is specific for what "The Tavern" hoped to be, which was a romantic fool thriller of the first order. If Cora Dick Grantt had sent her fervid story of the maiden betrayed, the proud villain, the romantic vagabond, and the elocutionary governor to David Wark Griffith it could have been taken seriously as "Way Down East," and Mr. Griffith might have made another million dollars. But not for a million dollars can Mr. Cohan take pathos seriously.

Mr. Cohan played a lone hand with "The Tavern." None but himself fully understood what he wanted done to it. Arnold Daly, who was the original vagabond of the play, tried. He tried to forget that the vagabond, if played for all the tears and heartaches that might be squeezed out of it, could be a tempting rôle for a romantic actor. He tried to forget that the vagabond's speeches were impressively sonorous mouthfuls if elocuted just right and remember, as Mr. Cohan had told him, that they were as funny as grandma's hat if elocuted just wrong. Mr. Daly temporized. He elocuted some lines just right for his soul's satisfaction and others just wrong for Mr. Cohan's.

It was not entirely the public's fault that the first audiences to "The Tavern" did not perceive its enormous satire immediately. Those audiences failed, but Mr. Daly helped them.

Now the audiences in the Hudson theater are a great success. Mr. Cohan helps them magnificently. Lest some dull wit fail to perceive that this play is not being acted, but murdered, he has sharpened the barbs of satire and weighted the clubs of burlesque with which the deed is done. As it is now done with Mr. Cohan in the cast there is only one person in the world who could doubt that the production of the play is a lampooning of the play. That is the author.

A story of the origin of "The Tavern" has grown up which is amusing even if true. At the first benefit show staged by the Actors' Fidelity league several years ago Cohan did a burlesque of mystery melodrama in which all the characters were killed.

The only part of the [illegible] which is remembered is the fact that the heavy always made his entrances carrying a corpse. A year later a play turned up in Mr. Cohan's mail the reading of which caused him merriment which could not be accounted for, as it was in intent a sober tragedy. But he had discovered a character in the third act who carried several corpses around.

Cohan has a theory that laughs are communicable. He decided to try to communicate this one. His first snicker at the expense of the worst play that ever was submitted to him has taken a long time to grow into an epidemic. But—I wish I had written that tragedy I had in mind and had sent it to Mr. Cohan one day before "The Tavern" was mailed.

Negro humor is better in print or in the synthetic face of Frank Tinney than coming from the mouths of its originators. Fifty Negroes have banded together into a musical comedy company which is playing to white audiences in the Sixty-third Street theater. "Shuffle Along," as it is named, makes brave attempts to entertain the white folks in the intervals between its gorgeous songs. It subscribes to the musical comedy formula that, when you are not singing a song, you must be acting a joke.

But racial genius grips the cast and you when the songs begin. At a grand piano in the orchestra pit sits Mr. Eubie Blake, composer of all of the music. He is surrounded by fifteen helpful harmonists. Miss Lottie Gee or Rager Mathews comes down to the footlights and sets a metronomic foot to beating a rhythm. It travels down the expectant spine of Mr. Blake into his and his helpful fifteen's fingers. In two semi-quavers you are quivering to the same magic that has set all these spontaneous musicians to reeling melodiously. You may resist Beethoven and Jerome Kern, but you surrender completely to this. It is perhaps fortunate that there are dead intervals between the songs

H. Harris. . . . Rida Johnson Young will be represented next season by "A Wise Child," as well as by "The Front Row." Mr. Dillingham will produce the former piece with Vivienne Segal in the principal rôle. . . . George H. Atkinson, author and producer of "Survival of the Fittest," is about to present "The Melody of Money," a second play of his own authorship. . . . William Harris' next production will be a farce entitled "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," adapted from the French by Charlton Andrews. . . . Mae Marsh will act on the stage again next season in "Brittie," a comedy by Robert Deering, to be produced by John D. Williams. . . . The Shubert's new theater on 7th avenue near 59th street will be called the Imperial and probably will be devoted to vaudeville. . . . "The Reason Why," a play by Grant Morris and Mrs. Trimble Bradley, will be tried in stock in Toronto tomorrow night. . . . "The Turn in the Road," and not "Poor Mother," will be the title of the A. E. Thomas comedy in which Mary Ryan will be seen in Atlantic City a week from tomorrow. . . . Frank Bacon of "Lightnin'," has written the book of a musical comedy that is scheduled for production next season. . . . Lenore Ulric will have a new play next season, but, although it is now being cast, nothing has penetrated from 44th street regarding it. . . . Joseph Kilgour will act his old rôle in Mr. Belasco's revival of "The Easiest Way" next season—scheduled to be seen at the Lyceum theater. . . . John Arthur, who has followed John Cumberland in countless farces, will succeed him once more tomorrow night. Mr. Cumberland is withdrawing from "Ladies' Night" to appear in "The Scarlet Man." . . . Mr. Klaw's production of "Sonya," with Alfred Lunt and Violet Heming heading the cast, will be seen at the Forty-eighth street theater in August. . . "The Cameo Girl," the Adelaide-Hughes musical piece, closed in Boston last week after some argument with the Equity, but will reopen in the near future.

Otis Skinner, who is to play the bull fighter in Ibanez's "Blood and Sand" next year, has gone to Spain to see some bull fights. He will also visit the author while abroad.

Mr. Belasco finds it impossible to send his production of "Deburau" on tour, because of the expense of everything connected with the out of town theater from railway transportation to acting. "I am not rich enough," says Mr. Belasco, "to take it outside of New York." Commenting editorially on Mr. Belasco's decision, the New York Herald declares that the abandonment of the tour is a social and intellectual misfortune to thousands of Americans, who because of it will be deprived of the opportunity to see "Deburau." It is a money misfortune for the railroads, for the baggage transfer companies, for the workers in theaters, who will not be paid the money they hoped to get out of Mr. Belasco's enterprise. It will be a money misfortune for scores and hundreds of persons who never heard of the play, for money which Mr. Belasco would have put in circulation, and which would have come to them in stimulated business had the charges been right will be withheld from circulation because the charges are wrong. There never has been a case more illuminative of the paralyzing effect of inordinate charges than this case of Mr. Belasco's "Deburau."

The manuscript of "Thy Name Is Woman" on first reaching this country bore the title "The She Devil," a literal translation of the original. It was submitted to George Arliss, who admired the part of the smuggler, but thought him dwarfed a bit for a star rôle by the rest of the triangle in a four part play. Hence Mr. Arliss declined the play.

It was next submitted to Arthur Byron, who had gone into partnership with Benjamin R. Marshall of Chicago. Mr. Byron had just concluded a long engagement in the scantily peopled "Tea for Three," and was not averse either to a short cast play or to the diversion of honors three ways. Leaving aside the frock coats of the philandering physician, he proposed to play the old smuggler, and suggested to Mr. Marshall that if it were possible to decoy them away from the screen he would like to have Mme. Nazimova and Robert Warwick in the two other conspicuous rôles.

Whether negotiations were begun is not certain, but presently it developed that William A. Brady had secured the American rights to the play and had engaged Miss Mary Nash to play it.

"A Wise Child" is the name of a comedy by Rida Johnson Young, selected for production in August by Charles Dillingham, with Miss Vivienne Segal in the title rôle.

Miss Ethel Barymore will play "Declasse" next season, resuming the tour interrupted by her illness last winter. John Barrymore will sail for Europe next month to make a moving picture, and his plans to appear in "Lord Byron" are now announced as indefinite.

The Atlanta, Ga., backers of "The Three Musketeers" failed to produce enough money to cover the show's losses at the Manhattan in New York and the enterprise is no more.

The Shuberts have made so many changes in "The Belle of New York" that they are going to call it "The Whirl of New York" when it is produced next week.

"Dreamy Eyes" will be played under W. A. Brady's direction by Leonard Wiley, Bruce Elmore, and Miss Jane Carleton, whoever they may be. It is by Martha M. Stanley and Adelaide Matthews, also whoever they may be.

Miss Grace La Rue and Hale Hamilton have sailed for London, where they will appear at the Palace music hall in a sketch by Mr. Hamilton.

Miss Emily Stevens will be employed next year by Sam H. Harris in "Saint Ursula," by Zoe Akins, author of "Declasse," and Edward Sheldon, author of "Romance."

Miss Helen Hayes, who has been playing "Bab" since February, 1919, will withdraw from that play at the end of her season at the Blackstone June 11 and will go to Europe for a holiday.

Miss Keane and her "Romance" company and "The Passing Show of 1921" are traveling from New York hither in two special trains—one of twelve cars, the other of fourteen. They will leave New York at 4 o'clock Sunday morning and will arrive here Sunday at midnight. The new Shubert play, "Fools Errant," will be carried as far as Cleveland, where it will open the new Hanna theater tomorrow night.

of "Shuffle Along." Because some of the music is as insidious and heady as absinthe.

The Broadway musical comedies get along nicely with one or less song hits. "Shuffle Along" has twenty. It has more than its slender reason for being can stand. It is probably no more than a sale of "numbers" to next year's music shows. The audiences indicate that. They are audiences of song pluggers, elegant vaudevillians, inelegant vaudeville managers, tin pan alley composers, stage directors, and all the rest of the wiseacres of the Longacres.

Before I suspected their purpose in attending the performance I refused to check my hat. But their predatory instincts are musical. Eubie Blake has probably made a tremendous effort to bring his little city song masterpieces down from Harlem as far as 63d street. The remainder of their voyage to the musical 40s will be easier. They will be carried right down to the music factories in the audience's memories.

Farnum as Farnum Likes Farnum to Be

"WHEN A MAN SEES RED."

Produced by Fox. Directed by Frank Lloyd. Presented at the Alcazar.

THE CAST.

Luther Smith	William Farnum
Violet North	Jewel Carmen
Luther's Sister	Lulu Mae Bower
His Mother	Cora Drew
Sutton	G. Raymond Nye
Logan	Marc Robbins

By Mae Tinée.

THERE are a number of people in this typical my-gawd-Henry film with the typical my-gawd-Henry title, of whom Mr. Farnum is not one. He has been known to act on occasion, but this time his manly ecstasies and rages are principally expressed through much shaking of plump arms toward heaven, much gritting of large teeth in the wide, kind mouth, and much staggering to windward. A performer, I grant you, but not an actor.

"The Painted Lady," a story by Larry Evans, is the base of the picture. Perhaps it was a good tale, but when the camera began to grind this is what it registered:

A noble sailorman comes home from a long voyage yo ho and a bottle of aqua—he doesn't drink—to find his mother wearing black for his adored sister, who has died as the result of an assault committed by—WHOM? The audience knows, but Mr. Farnum does not.)

After a season of sorrow, expressed Farnumatically, the sailor sails again. These things happen to him:

Fate puts him on the same boat with Sutton. Sutton is——? (The audience knows. Mr. Farnum does not.) He finds out, however.

He meets the blonde known as "The Painted Lady"—who, after one look into them noble eyes, renounces a hectic past—but leaves him for his own good.

He goes crazy. Not mildly insane, but stark, staring, raving crazy. (I'll say he raves.)

He kills his sister's murderer.

On a sad south sea island the painted lady comes to him and cools him down. He recovers his reason.

Clinch; fadeout—with Willum sane and wearing a nice white shirt.

The remarkable part of the picture is that most of the events toward the end apparently happen within a few hours' time—off again, on again, made again, sane again, lose again, love again, all's well again, amen again.

(Thank heaven this is over again.) JUST a minute!

P. S.—The people in the cast who are so good are Cora Drew, as a wistful white-haired mother; G. Raymond Nye, as the villing, and Lulu Mae Brower, as the wronged sister.

CLOSEUPS

Harriet Hammond, former Mack Sennett bathing beauty, has, they think, talent for acting. She will be seen with George Nichols in the coming Robertson-Cole production, "Live and Let Live."

Jackie Coogan in "Peck's Bad Boy" will follow "Passion" at Orchestra hall — first performance tomorrow. Wheeler Oakman and Doris May will hold up the love interest of the production. Miss May is cast as Jackie's sister, and Mr. Oakman is a young doctor who loves other than his work.

A motion picture actress named Edith Lennert—(neither do I)—is said to have received a letter from a cat fancier offering to sell one freak Persian kitten with two heads, four eyes, two noses, and two mouths. Kitty has only two ears, one on each head, and only one throat. Now, query: When she sings will it be a solo or a duet?

According to a college election just closed, Betty Blythe is the season's histrionic queen of Princeton, succeeding Maude Adams and Norma Talmadge.

Jean Mathis' parrot has returned. None knew whence it came nor whither it went. Its name should be Omar —ain't?

Ask Me! Ask Me!

JOHANNA: How sweet of you! I can imagine nothing more wonderful than to go with Laura Blackburn to hear Dr. John Dill Robertson lecture on wild oats! Only—give the tickets to somebody more deserving. Alas—that is our busy night!

ETHEL W.: A letter addressed to Ruth Roland at 901 South Manhattan place, Los Angeles, will reach her. Y'wekkum.

W. J. B.: Sorry, but I'm afraid I have not the means of procuring for you a photograph of the home you admire. Why not ask Wanda?

H. J. B.: Yes, I have the gentleman's number—Jasper studios, 6642 Santa Monica block, Hollywood. Glad to oblige you.

OLIVE H.: You might write to Bryant Washburn. The Essanay company is no more, you know. Address him at Hollywood, Cal. Pretty nice to have "a most beautiful telephone girl" in the family!

W. I. G.: Didn't you see the article in last Sunday's paper? Doesn't that answer your query? I believe so.

W. A. E.: The Charles Ray Producing company, Los Angeles, Cal.

HUDSON

Offers These Important Qualities

Special Notice to Fine Car Buyers

Hudson beauty is prized by all owners. It even dictates the choice of many. But to most who know Hudson its chief charm must always be quietness of action and ease of control.

So smooth the response to throttle and wheel there seems no mechanical intervention between the driver's will and its accurate execution by the Super-Six.

What the Old Hudsons Tell

Every day you see Hudsons two and three years old which in both performance and style might well be judged of recent production.

Hudson design has never been guided by caprice. It has never resorted to dubious extremes. It has been too sure of what are the essential permanencies of beauty, dignity and true riding comfort.

The advance ideas you will always find. But every idea must earn its right to belong. No mere straining after something new has ever won place for a single feature of Hudson design.

Thus has developed a mechanical quality that well-nigh removes all consciousness of motor and other mechanism.

A New Meaning In Economy

And with it has come an economy in operation that asserts itself not alone in low fuel cost but more particularly in reduced maintenance expense. Owners experience no concern about Hudson's readiness to meet any requirement. Whether it be the instant throttle response needed to shoot the car out of a possible traffic jam, or the ability to go on tour across the continent, the Super-Six in countless ways has proved its fitness. The Super-Six motor is exclusive and everyone knows how it excels.

Best of all, these qualities are not of today's accomplishment. They have been notably Hudson's for five years.

Ravinia Plans a Full Summer of Operatic Joys

By Edward Moore.

MR. ECKSTEIN made a speech the other day on the subject nearest his heart. It is perhaps unnecessary to state that the subject was Ravinia and the operas that every summer are performed in that lovely inclosure on the north shore.

Some of the things he said—they were said to the Ravinia club—are quoted here. It is quite evident from his remarks that he believes in Ravinia, believes in it more completely than the patrons that go there night after night in the summer season to enjoy its fine music, splendid artists, and informal, comfortable atmosphere. And at that Ravinia has about as enthusiastic a following as one will find anywhere. They know a good thing when they see and hear it, and, knowing it, Ravinia becomes more than a casual experience with them; it rapidly develops into a summer habit.

"If I may be pardoned the repetition," said Mr. Eckstein, "I should like to say again that from the inception of the idea for which it stands Ravinia has been dedicated to service—to the service of the esthetic nature of all those who might come within the circle of its influence. From year to year those of us who have assumed to guide Ravinia's destiny have perceived the widening of this circle until, at last, in this year of 1921—if I may be permitted such an expression of confidence—it achieves a breadth that in the beginning we would not have dared to contemplate as even possible.

"Ravinia—to drop metaphor—is the expression of an ideal. That has been, is, and always will be true. If it ever ceases to be true, Ravinia will be no more—her spirit will have flown."

He might have added here that Ravinia is quite the most romantic achievement in the history of music in America. To have converted what was only a bit of north shore acreage into a spot as full of delight for eye and ear as Ravinia, is to have dreamed an unusually thrilling dream. And sometimes dreams come true.

"And what is this ideal?" continued Mr. Eckstein.

"In plain and simple words, our ideal at Ravinia has been the amelioration of life through art, and through the loveliest of all the arts—music. Our ideal has been to lift the men and women of this community out of the dullness and commonplaceness and triteness into which we so easily slip, or perchance are thrust by the exigencies of earning a livelihood; to set men and women for a few hours each evening upon a high place, where their horizon may be extended and where the winds of heaven may cool their cheeks and slow their racing pulses; to wash the dust of conflict from their faces. For this we have striven diligently, zealously, and, we know, unselfishly."

What Patrons May Expect.

That is what Ravinia is. What it is going to be this summer is best narrated in terms of the officiating artists. Mr. Eckstein makes it his pleasant duty to name what looks at this distance to be an uncommonly good cast.

MISS FLORENCE MACBETH

Anna Fitziu, Marie Sundelius, and Frances Peralta are coming for the first time. They have all sung in Chicago at one time and another, and their memories are too favorable to need any present comment. Florence Macbeth, a beautiful singer and delightful artist, returns after an absence of several seasons. Margery Maxwell and Philine Falco also will be welcomed back.

Alice Gentle will have her third successive season as principal lyrico-dramatic contralto. She has made her mark. In the light of her performance in "Carmen," "La Navarraise," and various other works, it is one of the mysteries why she has never been engaged by the Chicago Opera association. At any rate, she is one of the Ravinia blessings.

Other makers of operatic history, Charles Hackett and Morgan Kingston, will return. They will share the tenor rôles this season with Mario Chamlee, a young artist who in one season has become one of the notables of the Metropolitan. Giordano Paltrinieri will come back to specialize in character parts.

The baritone section looks exceptionally strong. Riccardo Stracciari, brilliant singer, operatic actor, and personality, has been engaged to head a list that already included Millo Picco, Graham Marr, and Louis D'Angelo.

The principal bass rôles will be sung by Leon Rothier, another artist needing no introduction. Some of the buffo rôles will be sung by a famous guest artist, Vittorio Trevisan, and others by Paolo Ananian.

Louis Hasselmans is coming over from the Paris Opèra Comique to conduct French operas and concerts. Gennaro Papi, a versatile and magnetic conductor, will have the Italian rèpertoire, with further performances by Giacomo Spadoni. The Chicago Symphony orchestra, first in the land, will play both operas and concerts, as experienced and able in the one as the other.

For two years there has been occasion for pleasant comment on the excellent staging, lighting, and pictorial effects of the Ravinia season. Consequently Armando Agnini will have charge of that department for his third successive season.

About thirty operas are in the rèpertoire, subject to the unavoidable changes of an operatic season. Those contemplated at present are "Martha," "Traviata," "Cavalleria," "Rigoletto," "Aïda," "Mignon," "Lucia," "Tales of Hoffmann," "Carmen," "Pagliacci," "Butterfly," "Thaïs," "Faust," "Tosca," "Jewels of the Madonna," "Bohême," "Secret of Suzanne," "Manon," "Romeo and Juliet," "Trovatore," "Barber of Seville," "Lakme," "L'Elisir d'Amore," "L'Amore dei Tre Re," "Zaza," "L'Oracolo," "Don Pasquale," "Navarraise," "Fedora," and "Lohengrin."

It is a list in which to take pride.

Final Festival Concerts.

Two more events remain in the Chicago North Shore Music festival now under process of performance at Northwestern university gymnasium, Evanston. The first, Bach's "St. Matthew's Passion Music," will be sung tomorrow.

It will be in two parts, the first beginning at 3:30 o'clock and lasting two hours. An intermission will follow, the second part to be taken up at 7:30 o'clock and to conclude about 9 o'clock. The soloists will be Marie Sundelius, Merle Alcock, Lambert Murphy, Theodore Harrison, Arthur Middleton, Charles E. Lutton, and Robert C. Long.

ARTHUR MIDDLETON

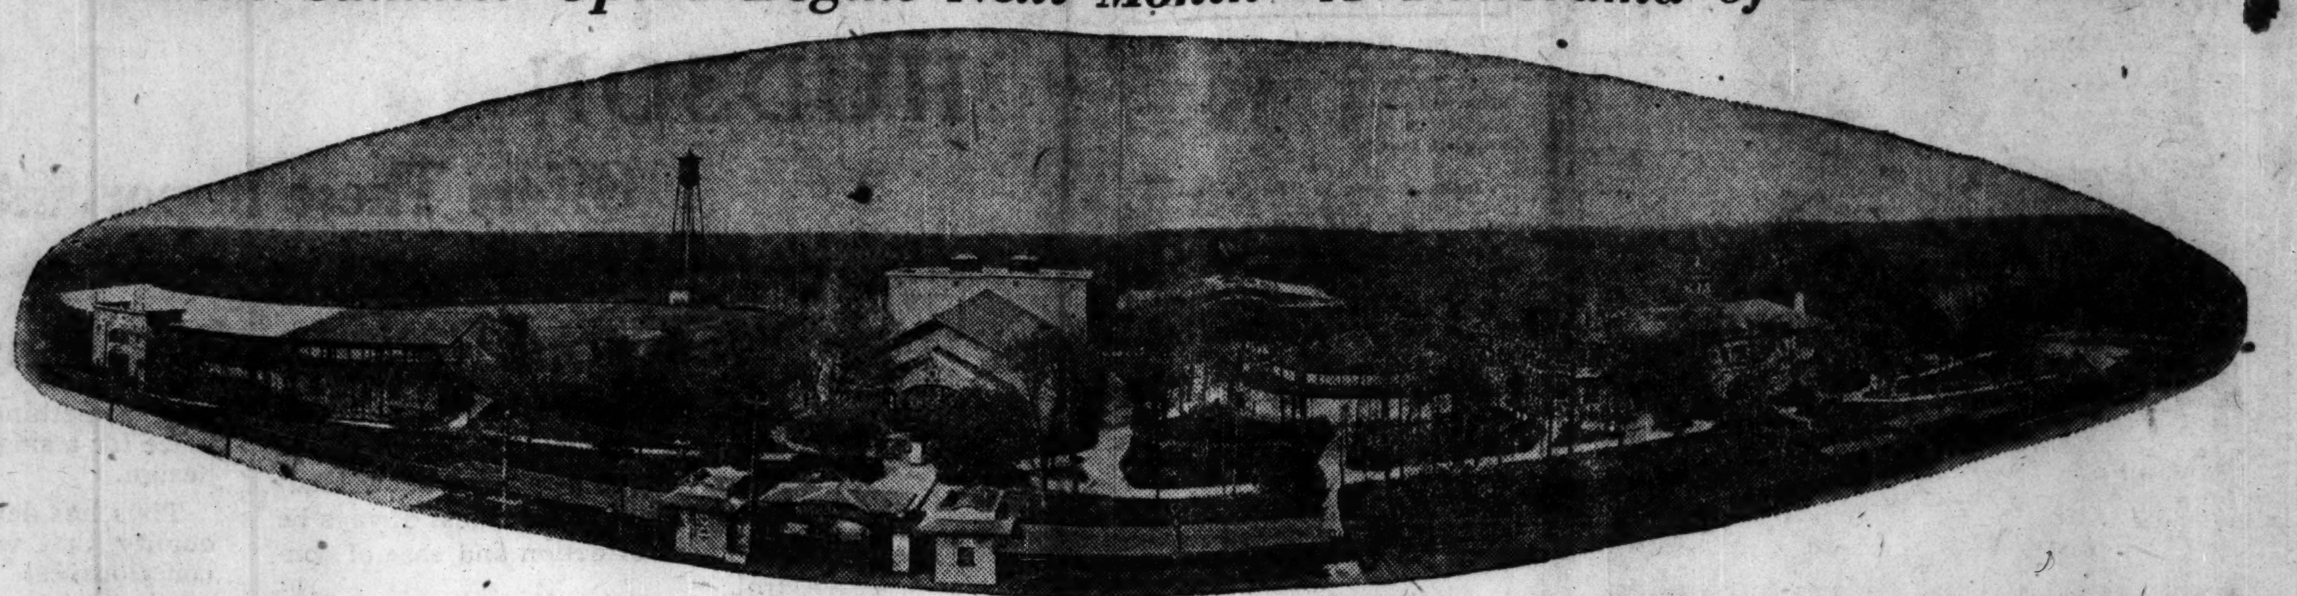
The choral parts will be sung by the festival chorus, a vested boy choir of 800 voices, a high school chorus of the same dimensions, and the A Cappella choir. The Chicago Symphony orchestra will play, and the whole undertaking will be under the baton of Mr. Lutkin.

A public rehearsal of the music will be given this afternoon in the gymnasium at 3:30 o'clock, at which an admission fee of 50 cents will be charged. It will be followed with an organ recital by Clarence Eddy free to the public.

An announcement reaches this column that during the two hour intermission Monday a buffet luncheon will be served in the gymnasium to out of town visitors. Coupled with this is an earnest request that evening dress be not worn during the performance.

The final concert will occur Tuesday evening. Charles Marshall, tenor of the Chicago Opera association, will sing "O Paradise," from Meyerbeer's "L'Africaine," two arias from Verdi's "Otello," and the solo in the final number, Mr. Lutkin's "Hymn of Thanksgiving." The last named will be conducted by the composer. The Chicago Symphony orchestra, directed by Mr. Stock, will play Dvorak's "Husitzka" overture, three sections of Holst's "The Planets," and Strauss' "Don Juan."

Where Summer Opera Begins Next Month—A Panorama of Ravinia Park



HERE is the first picture ever taken showing Ravinia as a whole. The camera was stationed on a tower just west of the railroad tracks, and a complete panoramic view of the delightful home of summer opera was obtained. The west gates of the inclosure are in the foreground. The picture illustrates what many travelers have asserted to be a fact, that no lovelier surroundings for open air music exist in the world. Ravinia is twenty-two miles north of Chicago, accessible by steam and trolley lines, and on the other side, not visible in the picture, by motor road. Its visitors during the summer are to be measured only by the thousands. The operatic season this summer will begin on Saturday night, June 25, and last until Labor day, three days more than ten weeks.

The Music Calendar

Tonight at 8—The Sunday Evening club choir, directed by Edgar A. Nelson, will sing special Memorial day music at Orchestra hall. Parker's "Union and Liberty," Noble's "The Soul Triumphant," and, with Mabel Sharp Herdien as soloist, "Taps" will be included. John B. Miller will sing "There Is No Death." A preliminary organ program will be played by Stanley Martin. Members of the G. A. R. will be guests of honor.

Tomorrow at 8:15—Eda Garver will give a musical for the benefit of the Chicago Junior Farm Home and School. She will be assisted by Adele Bernstein Braudon, Evelyne Hattie Fox, and Ebert Bergstrasser.

Thursday evening at 8:15—Florence Macbeth, soprano, Eric DeLamarter, organist, and Fritz Renk, violinist, will give a concert for the benefit of the Frances E. Willard hospital at Medinah temple. Proceeds will be devoted to enlarging the maternity and children's wards and the nursery. The Medinah temple patrol drill will appear in uniform.

Saturday evening at 8:15—The glee club of Notre Dame university will give a concert at Aryan Grotto under the direction of John J. Becker. Harry E. Denny, violinist, Lenihan Lally, baritone, and Joseph J. Casasanta will be the soloists, and there will be special songs and stories by Harry O'Keefe.

NEWS OF THE MUSICIANS

Another chamber music prize of $1,000 is offered by Mrs. F. S. Coolidge of Chicago and Pittsfield, Mass. This year the best piano trio will be selected by this jury: Ernest Hutcheson, Efrem Zimbalist, David Stanley Smith, Willem Willeke, and Oscar Sonneck. It will be played at the Berkshire chamber music festival at Pittsfield this fall by the Elshuco trio.

Emmy Destinn, the Czecho-Slovak soprano, has returned to Europe. She will be back in this country next November for another concert tour.

Lieutenant Commander John Philip Sousa has plans for another extensive tour with his band. He will begin at Montreal July 14, going from there to Willow Grove, Philadelphia. When that engagement is ended he will head west, with Chicago one of the stops on the itinerary, as far as California.

Turning east again, the organization will go through Arizona to El Paso and then down into Mexico, emerging at New Orleans, from which it will sail for Havana. By the middle of February it will be back in Florida, pursuing its course along the Atlantic coast to New York, where the season will end on March 10 at Madison Square garden. This season the band will number eighty-five players, the largest in its history.

The Mendelssohn club of Philadelphia offers a prize of $100 for the best a cappella composition in eight parts for a large mixed chorus. It appends the customary conditions of no previous performance and the right to use the words in performance and publication. Any text may be chosen, with preference given to one of secular character. N. Lindsay Norden, conductor of the club, will receive manuscripts at 7200 Cresheim road, Philadelphia. The contest will close Sept. 1.

While on the subject of prize compositions, let us not forget that $1,000 is offered to American composers, native or naturalized, for an orchestral work to be played at next summer's North Shore festival. Five works will be chosen, to be played at a public rehearsal of the Chicago Symphony orchestra some time during the coming season. Of these the best will be selected for performance at the festival, and during the following season at Orchestra hall. Contestants will have until next New Year's day to finish their work, and must they turn over their manuscripts to Carl D. Kinsey at the Chicago Musical college.

John Alden Carpenter is to be represented in the congress of the British Music society at London next month. Walter Damrosch will conduct the London Symphony orchestra through the measures of Mr. Carpenter's "Adventures in a Perambulator," together with excerpts from his own incidental music for "Iphigenia in Aulis" and "Electra," and two movements from MacDowell's "Indian Suite."

One of the best bits of news of the week is that Anna Pavlowa is coming back for another tour next season. She is in Europe and has begun her season there with a triumphal reappearance at the Paris opera.

DEPENDABILITY FIRST—THEN THE PURCHASE PRICE

Dodge Brothers have never solicited the patronage of the American people on a basis of price.

They have chosen rather to build their car so well that its intrinsic worth would be unquestioned.

Dodge Brothers will continue to build their car so well, that it will always be dependable and the purchase price will be as nearly as possible the last expenditure.

Price Always Kept Low
And The Reasons Why

THE Chandler price has always been kept low without sacrifice of quality. This has been made possible by the most efficient management, the most modern factory and the highest financial credit with sources of supply, together with the fact that we have always built one chassis, developed and refined as the years have passed, but never abandoned because constantly more popular.

Some lines have manufactured simultaneously as many as three or four distinct models—not styles of bodies, but chasses. They have come and gone. You can probably imagine what such a policy means in manufacturing cost, in selling prices and in the resale value of such cars.

Chandler resale value is relatively higher than that of any car, after a like period of service.

AVIATION

Paterson, Veteran Airplane Builder, Boosting Chicago

Is Constructing Ships in South Side Plant

BY MORROW KRUM.

IT was a bit surprising to learn that laborers were busy removing from a box car on a Chicago team track a car load shipment of propellers consigned to a Chicago airplane company. Jobs of that size are common enough around Dayton, Cleveland, Rantoul or Mineola, but it hardly seemed possible that a local concern could handle a car load of propellers. However Charles H. Paterson merely smiled and conducted the visitor into his storerooms and shops at 6504 South State street.

"A car load of props is a big order at that—but look at the stock in here," he said.

There were uncovered wings, ailerons, control surfaces, fuselages, rolls of Irish linen, struts, landing gears, spars, beams, wheels, tires, tail skids, altimeters, compasses, tachometers, brace wires, joy-sticks, rudder bars, windshields—everything from fur lined helmets to rotary motors. Paterson has one of the most complete aviation stocks of any "supply depot" in Chicago.

Aviation supply depots and manufacturing plants are rather scarce in Chicago. Officials of two flying clubs are doing what they can to bring the center of American aviation to Chicago. They are trying to make up for the loss of the automobile industry. Paterson, who until a few weeks ago was director of one of these clubs, has done more than his share. He is building airplanes. Not many, but enough to entitle him to some recognition in a field that is young.

Paterson has been building airplanes for twelve years. He assisted in the design of the famous Cannuck, the ship that gave so many flying cadets their first thrills during the war training period.

A new ship has just been completed in the Paterson shops. It will be called The Hornet. The ship weighs [illegible] pounds, is powered with a Curtiss [illegible] V-type eight cylinder motor will carry three people, have a duration of three hours without refilling the gasoline tanks, and, Paterson hopes, develop a speed of ninety miles an hour at 1,600 r. p. m.

Hamilton Will Try for Record Parachute Jump

VISITORS attending the flying circus at Chanute field, Rantoul, tomorrow will see as the prize feature of an elaborate flying program Lieut. Arthur G. Hamilton attempt to break his world altitude parachute jump record of 23,700 feet. Lieut. Hamilton was piloted to that altitude by Lieut. Harry Weddington, awakened—riding in airplanes does become a bit tiresome—and told to hop out. That happened at Chanute field a month ago.

Tomorrow Lieut. Weddington will attempt to climb the big De Haviland ship to 25,000 feet before he gives Hamilton the signal. The De Haviland has been christened the Jeremiah III. It is an altitude ship, with a hand fitted motor.

The altitude parachute jump will be but one of five jumps staged. Bing, the fox terrier, will also jump. Races, bombing tests, aerial combats and many other features will provide many thrills for the spectators. The flying program will commence at 10:30 o'clock in the morning and will continue until [illegible] p. m. There will be several spectacular night flights.

Moving to Dayton.

Lieut. R. E. Thompson of the balloon and airship experimental station at Fort Omaha, Nebraska, arrived at McCook Field, Dayton, Ohio, last week in order to make preparatory plans for the removal of the station from Fort Omaha to Dayton. The remaining personnel of the organization, consisting of Capt. Allen P. McFarland and thirty-four civilians, will follow as soon as plans are completed to effect the removal. The consolidation of the balloon and airship experimental station with the engineering division, air service, will place the engineering of lighter-than-air craft development under the direction of Maj. Bane.

Japs Order Ships.

PARIS, May 27.—A party of officers from the Ecolede Guerre paid a visit on Wednesday to the Farman aviation works at Billancourt, near Paris, where they saw a "Goliath" or giant airplane, fitted up for military purposes. Japan has ordered five of these machines. The visitors also saw a projected military reconnoitering airplane of the near future, made entirely of metal, and, it is claimed, much easier to manufacture in large quantities and to mend than machines of the wood and canvas type.

New Air Line.

Passenger, freight, and express airplane service between Milwaukee and Evanston will be started in the near future, according to announcement made yesterday by the Evanston Airplane club. Hangars are being built now in the flying field on Dempster street west of Evanston. The club consists of Jack Burmaster, Leroy Prinz, and Raymond Spear. They have four planes.

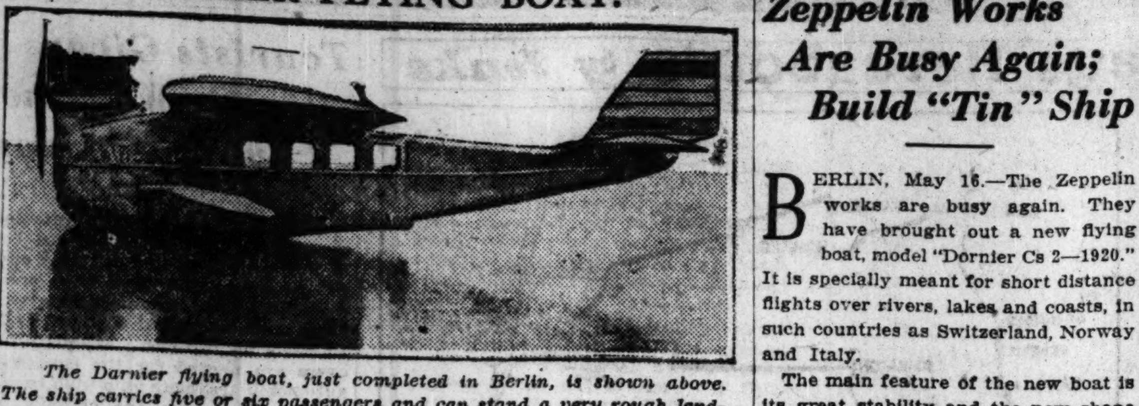
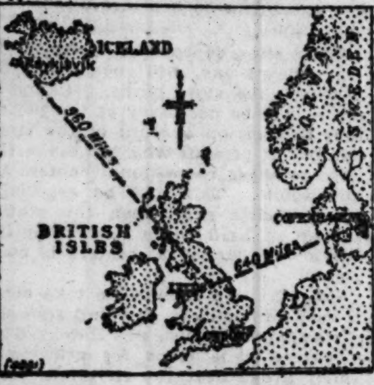
DARNIER FLYING BOAT.



The Darnier flying boat, just completed in Berlin, is shown above. The ship carries five or six passengers and can stand a very rough landing, it is said.

LONG HOP.



LONDON.—[Special.]—Reports now indicate that there is growing air activity in Iceland. A fleet of British machines was purchased last summer by an Icelandic air transport company, and have rendered good service during the recent winter, having been used to improve inland communications which, owing to climatic and other conditions, are still unsatisfactory. The airplanes have been employed, also, in locating shoals of fish for the fishing fleets.

The Icelandic Air Transport company is now stated to be enlarging its fleet, and to have purchased several American Curtiss flying boats. It is proposed to open this summer a regular air service from Reykjavik, in Iceland, to Copenhagen, by way of Leeds, in Yorkshire, a total distance of about 1,600 miles. The progress of a scheme so ambitious from the air navigation point of view will be watched with interest by British experts.

English Plan Night Beacons to Aid Pilots

LONDON, May 27.—The major portion of the airplane development appropriation recently passed by the house of commons will be used to construct a new chain of aerial beacons in Great Britain to enable air voyagers from Paris and other parts of the continent to land safely at night.

Powerful beams of 100,000 candle power each will be thrown by the beacons. Each will automatically light and extinguish at dawn and dusk. Plans for their erection and construction have been undertaken by the department of civil aviation.

Beacons will be built at various points along the coast between Lympne, Kent, and Croydon. Cross channel pilots make landings at Lympne. Present plans contemplate a chain of three main beacon lights extending from London to the channel, a distance of sixty-five miles.

Acetylene gas dissolved and stored in cylinders under pressure will be used. The lights will be automatic and require no supervision for period of six months. They will be visible for thirty miles.

Havana Popular.

Havana is now the Mecca for the air travelers from the United States. The opening of the Palm Beach-Havana line caused Col. Yero Miniet, superintendent of customs, to issue orders for the immediate clearance through the customs of all passengers arriving via seaplanes from Florida points.

16 Airplanes to Chase Criminals in Michigan

LANSING, Mich., May 28.—One of the features of the new department of public safety will be ten air stations in as many different cities of the lower peninsula of the state, from which planes will be furnished the department for use in its work of enforcing the prohibition laws, and apprehending more speedily bandits and other criminals. The planes and service will be furnished the state at cost by a commercial aero service corporation.

According to Maj. Roy C. Vandercook, recently appointed commissioner of public safety, the use of airplanes by his men will make the chances of booze runners and other lawbreakers in Michigan very small. Criminals fleeing on the ground will have almost no chance to escape a pursuing airplane, because of the machine's speed and the greater range of vision because of its altitude. A system of signals for use between an airplane and officers in the ground will be arranged.

Capt. Harold P. Ayres, manager of the Lansing office of the corporation, says that he now has sixteen planes ready for service at any time. Some of the machines are hydroplanes, and all of them are capable of making a single nonstop trip across any part of the lower peninsula.

Stations of the air service are located in the following cities, at each of which there are landing fields and other accommodations: Lansing, Detroit, Jackson, Battle Creek, Muskegon, Flint, Bay City, Grand Rapids, Kalamazoo and Petoskey. A second station in Lansing, near the post of the state police in the southeastern part of the city, is soon to be established.

Cadets, Attention!

A four day convention of the former members of Cadet Squadron No. 55, United States School of Military Aeronautics, Champaign, Ill., will be held in Detroit, Mich., opening on June 16. An appeal has been sent out by Ray C. Burcaw, chairman of the convention committee, asking all men who wore the white hat bands with the "55th" to attend. Plans are being made to give all attending members a ride over Detroit to familiarize them with the "feel of a ship" once more, Burcaw asserts.

Quit Flying.

LONDON, May 27.—Regular international air traffic from Copenhagen will not be resumed this spring, the Danish company only intending to send airplanes farther than Scandinavia when specially ordered, says the Times' correspondent at Copenhagen. The explanation given is that the British company concerned has given up the service for lack of government support, while the Germans maintain that the regulations of the allied military mission prevent their airmen from going abroad.

New Air Line.

An air transportation service has recently been inaugurated between Montpellier and Nice. There are two airplanes flying the route in each direction, and the journey is made in 2 hours 45 minutes, with one descent at Hyeres.

Zeppelin Works Are Busy Again; Build "Tin" Ship

BERLIN, May 16.—The Zeppelin works are busy again. They have brought out a new flying boat, model "Dornier Cs 2—1920." It is specially meant for short distance flights over rivers, lakes and coasts, in such countries as Switzerland, Norway and Italy.

The main feature of the new boat is its great stability and the new shape given to the "swimmers," which cannot break even if the landing on water is a bit rough. The new plane will carry from five to six passengers of average weight. One hundred and fifty kilometers an hour represent its highest speed. It can fly 450 kilometers without refilling the gas tanks.

The most important parts of the wings are of steel, covered with aluminum, which can be taken off. The wings have the unusually large camber that is becoming so popular with the German airplane builders.

Air Hospitals.

Doctors in the French colonies will soon have their own airplanes.

A demonstration was given last week at Villacoublay, when the colonial minister and the undersecretary of state for air watched the evolutions of six "aerochars"—airplanes fitted with all the latest medical, surgical, sanitary, and X-ray apparatus—which are to be sent out to the French colonies.

These airplanes are needed because of the great distances often separating one post from another. Serious cases can be transported by airplanes when the jolting of motor cars over bad roads might be fatal.

THE WELL-DRESSED MAN

By Alfred Stephen Bryan

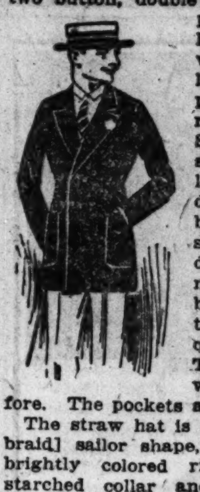
The Correct Jacket for the June Jaunt

NEW YORK.—Following the fashion is sound sense, but, if you please, do not attempt to lead it. For leading the fashion leads one into an excess of originality, and originality is the father of bad taste. The last thing the well dressed man seeks to do is to attract attention to his clothes. He doesn't want to be stared at as one would stare at a two headed calf. He dresses to please himself, and then he forgets about himself. The original dresser is prone to be half fop and complete fool. Not being well favored enough to carry his clothes smartly, he expects his clothes to carry him.

He it is—the original dresser—who brings the fine art of dress into disdain and disrepute which it does not deserve. Clothes are incidental—the cover on the book or the frame about the picture—but the really important thing is what they surround.

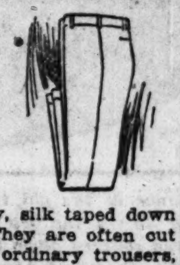
The upstanding way a man bears himself; the purposeful way he puts up his chin and puts out his feet; ease, set-up, and complete detachment from self—these, not originality of dress, are the things worth cultivating. You cannot make a hunter out of a house dog, nor a well poised, personable figure out of one who slumps and shuffles, no matter how extensive or expensive his wardrobe may be.

The practice of wearing the double breasted jacket, blue, brown, green, or mixed, together with white trousers, is well established in all parts of the country for field and knockabout usage. It may be no more comfortable than any other summer turnout, but it has a crisply cool look about it which is most engaging. For sports this jacket has been replaced with lighter weight stuffs like gabardine, but for general hot weather wear this prepossessing different fabric combination still commends itself to the generality of men.

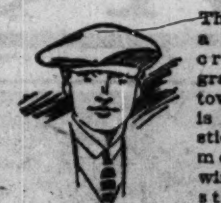


Portrayed is one of these jackets—two button, double breasted, patch pocketed, with a low collar gorge, wide, soft peaked lapels, a breast pocket, and cut rather shortish. Such a jacket should come a bit loose, having freedom between the blades and a full skirt. The shoulders are natural, not narrow. The back vent is not too deep and frequently is omitted. The sleeves are wider than heretofore. The pockets are placed lower.

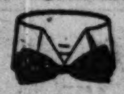
The straw hat is the sennit [rough braid] sailor shape, spanned with a brightly colored ribbon. The low starched collar and the diagonally striped narrow four-in-hand scarf are familiar fashions of the season.



While the tendency of fashion latterly has been toward the dropping of bottom turn-ups on the trousers for town wear, their retention upon country clothes is almost necessary to avoid soiling and trailing at the heel. The trousers pictured pair off with the jacket already described. They are white serge or white cricketing flannel, sometimes plain and sometimes, though rarely, silk taped down the outer seams. They are often cut slightly wider than ordinary trousers, so as to permit the utmost leg freedom. Belt loops, of course, and the leather belt should be white and narrow.



Caps used to be a rather clumsy article of dress, flattening or toughening a man's features. Today they are made with skill and style and to fit. The cap shown has a broad spread of crown, with a graceful fullness toward the peak. It is elastic and will stick fast in the most whipping wind. The cross striped four-in-hand scarf is knitted silk in such bold university and regimental colors as black and royal, navy and brown, purple and white, and many more.



Wing collars, superseded of late years by fold collars, are on the threshold of a revival, at least for morning and town wear. One of these wings is illustrated. It has moderate sized, slightly slanting tabs. The bow knot tie is the form, with a snug center and spreading, fan shaped ends. The silk is hand printed English foulard.

In wearing a belt many men do not like the metal buckle to show in front. They switch it around to the side of the trousers at the hip, thus exposing an unbroken strip of leather when the jacket is left unfastened.

Plaited bosom shirts are by way of coming back for business and town usage.

The Test of Comparison

YOUR purchase of an automobile, if wisely made, will be determined only after a down-right, relentless, thorough comparison of values.

Your first impression will be favorable to those cars which dare invite comparison.

Your investment will be made in that car which stands the acid test—with a wide margin to spare.

You buy other things that way—why not automobiles?

Compare Today's Oakland Six with any car you may be thinking of buying.

Then judge for yourself which car possesses the greatest value for you.

You can prove Oakland value if you will. It is easy to do.

Above all, test Today's Oakland overhead valve engine. Compare it for power, performance, economy.

You will learn that its new light-weight pistons are now made of an aluminum alloy that is very light and tough.

They are self-adjustable to the cylinder walls.

You will learn we are now honing the cylinder bores to the perfect smoothness of glass.

You will find them absolutely round and straight up and down.

You will find we have effected an exceptionally close piston fit, at the same time avoiding the possibility of their sticking or freezing.

In these new pistons we have created a piston efficiency that is not surpassed, if equaled, in any other engine.

Today's Oakland Six sells at $1145 for the open cars and $1815 for the closed models, f. o. b. Pontiac—$250 less than they sold for prior to May 9th.

What car at Oakland's price has a six cylinder engine? There is none.

What car at Oakland's price has as much horsepower—44 H. P. at 2600 R. P. M. or 1 H. P. to every 55 pounds of car weight? There is none.

What car at Oakland's price has as long a wheel base—115 inches? There is none.

What car at Oakland's price produces greater gasoline economy—18 to 25 miles to the gallon? There is none.

What car at Oakland's price is equipped with as large as 32"x4" tires? There is none.

What car at Oakland's price has as deep a frame as 6½ inches? There is none.

What car at Oakland's price has as much room in both front and rear compartments? There is none.

What car at Oakland's price has as wide seats both front and rear? There is none.

What car at any price has as low a center of gravity, insuring the highest percentage of safety on the road? There is none.

These are the essentials that, when compared with price, establish value.

Find if you can any other car selling at or near Oakland's price that can offer you so much.

Illinois Is Left Alone in Policy of Roads Delay

Sister States Set Records in Meeting Highway Demands

BY J. L. JENKINS.

TWO MILLION dollars' worth of improvements can be made on United States highways every working day this year, according to the latest bureau of public roads estimate of available funds.

Every state in the Union with the exception of Illinois has been laying down as many feet of paving and improvements as humanly possible under the exceptionally favorable conditions offered through March, April, and May.

A canvass of the country has failed to discover an instance where a state department with cash funds available has delayed the letting of contracts to this late date when the best part of the road building season is over.

Among the facts, recognized elsewhere, that make 1921 delay on any of the integral parts of the nation's great highway trunk systems both costly and fatal to progress in the sections affected, engineers cite the following:

In 1920 a total of 5,000,000 head of cattle were hauled to market by motor trucks over state highways.

Iowa registered 29,800 motor trucks in 1920, an increase of 110 per cent over the preceding year, and one comparable to the increase in truck transport in Illinois.

A total of 4,900,000,000 persons were carried by motor cars in 1920, four times the weight of traffic on steam railroad lines.

One billion two hundred million tons of freight were carried by motor trucks, or one-half the amount moved by steam lines.

"Big men with private interests at heart built the railroads," remarked a Chicago road builder in discussing last year's traffic totals. "Private interests did not spend years discussing how to save a few dollars per mile of track. Intelligent people today realize that lack of proper highways will cost everybody in the state real cash money this year."

Operating under this business theory and to meet the vast highway need the state highway department of Pennsylvania has announced that 39.44 miles of durable construction has been completed there since early spring. At the earliest possible moment Pennsylvania awarded contracts for 153 miles of pavements at a cost higher per mile than the Illinois bids, which were rejected, called for. To May 12 Pennsylvania built more than twice the highway mileage completed in the same spring period a year ago, in addition to resurfacing 108 miles of macadam roadway and completing a good part of the oiling which will cover every mile of main traveled highway this year.

"There are in the course of completion 619 miles of durable roadway," reads the latest report of the Pennsylvania department. "During 1919 and 1920 666 miles were completed. This consisted in either one course concrete, concrete with a bituminous wearing surface, or concrete with a brick wearing surface.

"Twenty-two engineers from New Jersey have completed a detailed inspection of the Pennsylvania system. They were followed last week by Lieut. Gunnar Hockart of the Royal Swedish navy and member of his country's highway commission. He sought information concerning roads designed to meet modern traffic. The water bound macadam thoroughfares on the main highways of Sweden are proving unequal to the increasing strain imposed upon them, and the government is inspecting modern construction in various countries."

Invading Indiana.

Five hundred automobiles, flying Pageant of Progress pennants, and carrying literature advertising the big exposition to be held on the Municipal pier July 30 to Aug. 14, left Chicago yesterday for the Indianapolis automobile races Memorial day.

FOR THE GADDER—The romance in the old time walking tours through Europe usually faded long before the leg weary adventurer reached the finish line. Nowadays the solitary globe trotter is cared for by a French concern which specializes in the "Gad-About," pictured above. This is E. B. Hartwick of New York seeing the famous French resort, Nice, a la one of the tiny storage battery machines.

Auto Makers Ask Tariff Change to Protect Exports

FOLLOWING its recommendation to congress that tariffs on motor cars and trucks coming into this country should be reduced from 45 to 30 per cent, the foreign trade committee of the national automobile chamber of commerce has submitted a brief to the house ways and means committee. The brief states the principles of the American tariff policy, cites discriminations against us by the British empire and France, and suggests the remedy of reciprocity.

"The national automobile chamber of commerce, representing the passenger and motor truck manufacturers of the United States, holds to the policy that our general tariff should prevent discriminations by foreign nations against American export trade," says J. Walter Drake, chairman of the committee.

"To administer this policy the president of the United States should have power to ascertain what countries discriminate against American trade and to take measures in accordance with this provision to protect United States interests."

Little Journeys Hereabouts by Jenks

THE VALLEY OF GOOD CHEER.

PLEASANT and right satisfying it is to slip into the middle of a "full fresh, fragrant morning" after thoroughly discussing waffles properly browned and bacon done to the proper degree of crispness, with just the right following of good coffee, and to chase the first sunbeams over a dewy road toward the sleeping Fox river valley.

Take Lawrence avenue, if a like spirit moves you, to Milwaukee avenue. Then turn to the right one block and left again into Higgins avenue, and just drive. If it is very early, nothing can bother you, not even Highway Superintendent George Quinlan's polite motorcycle officers, who, by the way, wear distinctive uniforms and never resort to low methods—hiding behind trees or in tall grass—in regulating speed and traffic over concrete Higgins road. The truck farmers will be abroad. They have a pleasant habit of waving good morning from the back of the family tractor as it meanders down the rows of rich loam, and a contented dog usually ranges near them investigating mysterious happenings in the field.

An inviting, banked turn due north of Schaumberg took us to the left away from Higgins road, and we discovered four miles of hidden pavement that rivals anything in the state for good going. The Roselle road drops down through Schaumberg, with its quaint old houses and Dutch cleanliness to Roselle. There it took us half an hour and four tours of Main street to find the postoffice.

"Haven't had anything happen here to speak of all spring," remarked the Optimist as he wrapped up our cigars, "but you never can tell. I see by the paper they're robbin' banks in the smaller towns. Ought to be consider'ble road work done out here, too. We need it."

At Bartlett, where we struck the old Lake street road, the same plaint was in the air.

"Wisht you fellers would write up these roads and make 'em give us some good ones," said the storekeeper. "We're dead tired of waiting all our lives for pavements. Sure, it's just about as rough into Elgin."

It was, with here and there newly worked gravel to tease the overworked cords.

A long climb, and the lovely valley of the Fox unfolded in a splendid sunburst with its jeweled city strung out along both sides of the sparkling stream.

You'll always find some old friend in the valley. We ran across Elmer Mandigo after climbing and coasting over the Elgin hills a half hour, and he turned from the ticking "A. P." instrument, which he has followed into all manners and sorts of far away places, to pass the time o' day.

Gravel fans can revel in the road that drops down to St. Charles on the east side of the river and serves while the Fox River trail is being paved. It is a perfect, old fashioned pike stretching away past beautiful, old country homes. Its unhurried peace reaches into the heart of St. Charles, the town which dates back to the days of the French occupation. We learned, too, that St. Charles was at one time the country estate of Pottawattomie, whose name has made inspiration for the man who paints the big highway signs in the middle west, and also that the view of the valley from its park is unequaled.

The impression is spoiled in attempting to negotiate the horrible highway connecting St. Charles with Geneva. All that can be said of this short stretch is that the trolley which runs in its middle usually gets across without breaking in two over the ruts.

And then comes Geneva, sunny and clean and quiet, nestling in its cradle of tree covered uplands and offering Col. Fabian's famous River Bank park as a delightful feature of the southbound Lincoln highway. Concrete runs south from Geneva to connect with rough and rutted macadam through Batavia and a new detour running into Aurora, where more rough brick paving offers a poor welcome to the Fox river metropolis.

We lingered in Aurora long enough to cross the river five times and thread busy streets before taking the heavily traveled Cannonball trail to a point just below Wheaton. It is well to drive into Wheaton, aristocrat of suburban towns, and take concrete Roosevelt road into Chicago. County forces promise to open the new Desplaines river bridge for traffic soon and allow Maywood to bind up its broken down avenues running south to the highway. All of them are practically impassable now except to intermediate gear.

Gossip of the Auto Trade

IN the great pilgrimage to Indianapolis and this year's 500 mile motor classic, today and tomorrow, Chicago motorists are invited to linger long enough in Lebanon, Ind., to sample a glass of ice cold Jersey milk at the Nu-tro plant of the Indiana Condensed Milk company. All routes from Chicago this year lead through Lebanon and plant officials have arranged to serve milk free to all visitors.

Bergougnan tires, the French production bonded in this country by the National Surety company, have joined the reduced price parade by a cut of from 11½ to 13 per cent in their lists, according to announcement made by officials of the company at Trenton, N. J.

Edward S. Jordan, president of the Jordan Motor Car company, has issued figures to show that the recent reduction made in his car prices has stimulated buying remarkably. He points out that in the automotive industry the manufacturer controls prices and the public gets the benefit of reductions at once.

The Woodlawn Motor Sales and Service company has opened a handsome new salesroom at 6140 Cottage Grove avenue with a big display of Paige cars. The company's old salesroom will be used as a used car department.

An interesting display of electric automobile accessories is part of the National Electric Light association convention. It is open now in the Commonwealth Edison display rooms, 72 West Adams street.

Tourists Given Hearty Welcome in Hoosierdom

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—Automobile tourists traveling about the country with tents and camping outfits packed in their cars have created a demand for accommodations which state and municipal authorities are endeavoring to meet. Adequate stopovers are needed for the caravan of automobile travelers who wish to camp out as they cross the country, and the problem of providing these resting places is receiving special attention by state conservation department officials and in many cities park boards have plans for such places under consideration.

Camp sites, department of conservation officials say, will soon be established at the state parks. Camping places will be necessary at the parks, they predict, on account of the large number of persons who will make the trips to these recreational centers by automobile. This will be especially true, officials say, when the state's system of hard roads connecting the parks with industrial centers is completed.

One of the first cities to take steps toward providing a camping spot for the automobile tourists is Hobart. This city has made plans for utilizing a shady grove near the city as a stopover. Small temporary buildings and tent floors will be erected for the benefit of tourists who wish to spend the night. Stoves, with a supply of wood, will be ready for use in cooking meals and a store with supplies is to be maintained.

Somewhat similar arrangements have been made at Riverside park in Indianapolis. A parking place for machines has been provided and some conveniences for cooking and camping installed.

Heroes' Joy Ride.

Through the courtesy of the Lexington-Chicago company, Chicago's convalescent world-war soldiers, sailors, and marines were entertained at Winnetka, a suburb of Chicago, last week.

It was a big day for the wounded Yanks from start to finish—a day that brought relief from the monotony of hospital life and helped ease the pain and suffering of these boys who gave so much in the war.

The soldiers were taken from the hospitals in 30 Lexington cars to the park in Winnetka. The citizens of the little suburb of Chicago did their best to give the wounded boys a good time and they succeeded.

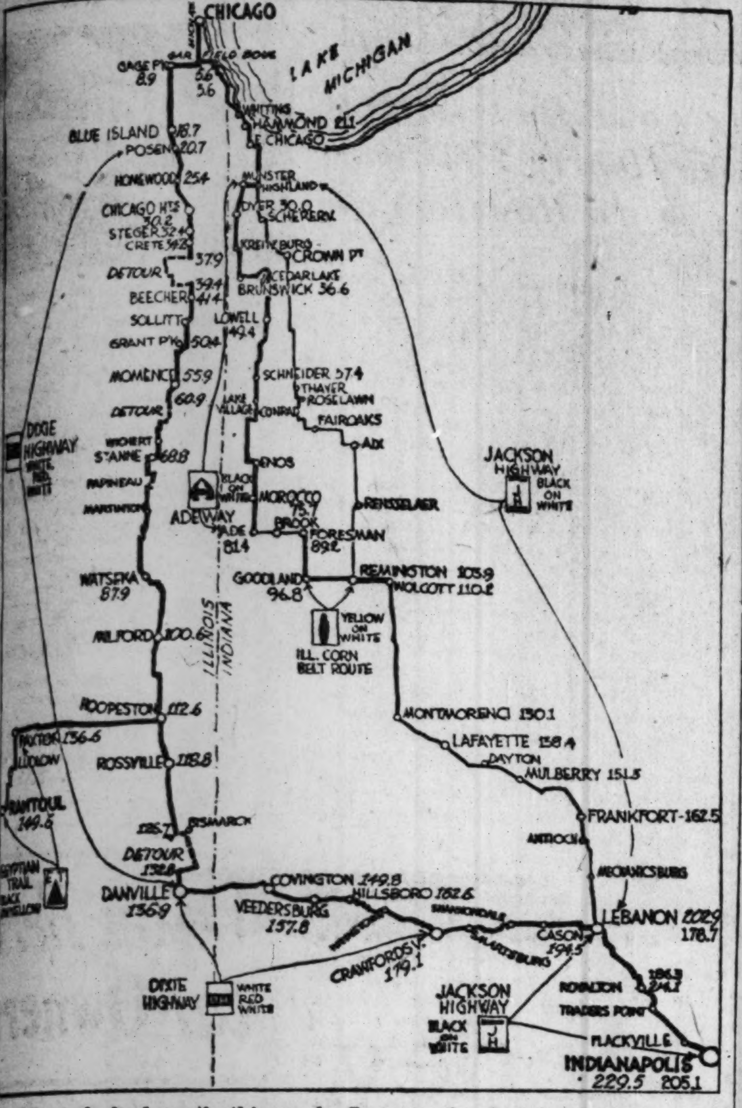
VIII.—TO INDIANAPOLIS AND RANTOUL.



ALL roads lead south this week for the sportive motorist. In addition to the annual 500 mile speed classic at Indianapolis the flying fraternity has arranged to pack the double holiday with an overflow of automobile thrills through the great aerial field day at Chanute field, Rantoul. The twin attractions, exerting a combined drawing power felt throughout the middle west, will fill all highways to the brim today and tomorrow and give the roads their record test of the year.

From Chicago excellent roads lead down to both attractions. The preferred Illinois route lends itself perfectly to the double thriller. It uses the Dixie highway's concrete pavement to Indianapolis via Danville and to Rantoul via Hoopestown and Paxton.

To find the Dixie, go south in Michigan avenue to 55th street (Garfield boulevard). Turn right in Garfield to Western avenue. Turn left in Western and follow Chicago Motor club Route No. 1 markings through Blue Island and Posen to Homewood. There, still following the Motor club markings, pick up the Dixie highway proper through Chicago Heights, Steger and Crete to the first barricade south of Crete. If the barricade is up, turn right to end of stone road in Goodenow, left to left and right jog, south to first four corners and left to the concrete again. Follow the concrete through Grant Park and Momence to the end of concrete, Detour left to end of road and turn right to the concrete again. The next detour begins at Moore's Corners, about nine miles south of Rossville. Detour left and follow excellent detour signs into Danville.

To reach Rantoul turn right at Hoopsown on concrete road and follow Bloomington Way signs to Paxton. There take the Egyptian trail into Rantoul and into the flying field.

From Danville to Indianapolis the route here outlined through Covington, Veederburg, Crawfordsville and Lebanon is easily folowed into Indianapolis.

The shorter routes through Indiana to Indianapolis are also outined. They follow both the Adeway and Jackson highway at the option of the driver. Both will be found in excellent condition, gravel and stone surfaces having been worked through each Indiana county this spring.

Trucks Win.

Truck owners in Chicago have been successful in their legal battle against the fender ordinance drafted by the Chicago authorities. Under the ordinance every motor truck was required to be fitted with a fender, costing $200 or more, for protection of pedestrians. Contestants showed that the fenders designated—or any fender—were impracticable for the purpose intended.

FARM AND GARDEN

Kill All Barberry Bushes in Grain Belt, Says U. S.

By Frank Ridgway.

EVERY common barberry bush in the grain growing district of the United States is doomed. Whole armies of both federal and state plant pathologists are raking and combing lawns, fence rows, and wood lots in thirteen states of the grain belt in an effort to kill the barberry.

Don't shoot if you see a stranger any time this summer lurking around your shrubbery border with a spade, grubbing hoe, and a handful of flaming red tags stamped "Dangerous Shrubs." He's a friendly enemy—he's working hard to eradicate the barberry that harbors the black stem rust which damages grain crops to the extent of millions of dollars every year. He may be digging up one of your favorite shrubs, but in turn he is helping to heap America's bread basket a little higher each harvest.

SPRING STAGE OF RUST—Common barberry is friend to one of grain's worst enemies, black stem rust. The cluster cup or spring stage of rust shown here is commonly seen now on barberries that decorate lawn borders in Chicago, and a campaign is on to eradicate every single bush in the grain belt of the United States.

Making State Survey.

Chicago and its suburbs will be included in the lawn-to-lawn survey to be made this summer by government men. In Illinois 650 towns have already been surveyed, and barberry bushes are found growing throughout the state. A farm-to-farm survey has been made in Stephenson, Winnebago, Boone, McHenry, and part of Lake counties. Cook, Du Page, Kane, and Jo Daviess counties will be included in the survey that is to be made this summer in the cities and towns as well as in the country.

There will be thousands of vacant spaces to be filled in the shrubbery borders of Chicago lawns this fall if all of the barberry bushes are removed. Government men believe that property owners will coöperate more fully with them in their eradication campaign when they once realize and appreciate the actual damage that is being done to the grain and grass crops in this country by the destructive black stem rust, the pest that is harbored by some of the decorative barberry bushes commonly growing on lawns.

Found on City Lawns.

The actual campaign has not yet started here, but a glimpse of the number of common and purple leaf barberry bushes that are still to be found on lawns in Chicago and its suburbs, was revealed in a preliminary survey made May 19 and 20 by Dr. E. R. Schulz, assistant plant pathologist of the United States department of agriculture. He found common barberry bushes—the kinds that are infested with black stem rust—on Sheridan road, Kenmore avenue, and Kenesaw terrace. Five healthy bushes were found on Junior terrace, and another in the southwest corner of Humboldt park.

A hedge with twenty-five bushes was found on 13th street, in Wilmette. On down the street Dr. Schulz found another hedge with twenty bushes and a fifteen foot bush on Greenleaf avenue. A purple variety was found on the same avenue. In Kenilworth he found from one to fifteen bushes of both the common and purple barberries along Richmond road and Woodstock and Oxford avenues.

Nor did Highland Park escape, for Dr. Schulz in a casual survey found both purple and common barberries on St. Johns avenue. And in Lake Forest he found enough barberry bushes to aid in spreading rust over hundreds of acres of wheat in a short time; one carefuly kept hedge had fifty barberry bushes.

There are many other lawnkeepers at Lake Forest helping to scatter rust into the grain fields because they allow barberry bushes to grow on their lawns. At a glance from one to fifteen bushes were seen growing on eight different lawns at Waukegan and also in Edison Park.

Find Little Opposition.

The government men say they have little opposition in either the city or country after the people once realize how important the work is. "Occasionaly we find people in the towns, and cities particularly, who feel that they do not need to worry about what happens to the farmers' crops, while others are willing to destroy the bushes immediately when they realize the serious damage that is done by the black stem rust," said Dr. Schulz, who will conduct the Cook county survey, which includes Chicago.

City people sometimes object to destroying their bushes because they believe they are too far from the farming district for the rust to be carried from their lawns into the grain fields. Experts explain that birds not only carry the rust spores and spread this fungous disease in wheat and other grain fields several miles away, but they also carry the berries to suburbs and the country, and thus infect new territory.

Federal Men at Work.

The states are coöperating with the federal government in the eradication campaigns that are now being carried on in Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, North and South Dakota, Ohio, Wisconsin, and Wyoming. The government has kept a force of men at work in these states since 1918.

L. R. Tehon, department of entomology, University of Illinois, is in charge of the work in this state. W. S. Collins and Dr. Schulz will begin their work in Cook county as soon as they have completed the barberry eradica- need the coöperation of every one in Cook county.

Illinois Issues Warning.

The importance of this work is man- tion survey in Lake county. They will ifested in the crop report which shows that black stem rust caused a loss of nearly $200,000,000 in 1916.

The department of agriculture at Springfield has issued a notice to the public declaring that the common European barberry and all its horticultural varieties, including the purple leaf barberry, are "a nuisance and must be eradicated from the state for the protection of wheat and other small grains and grasses." This does not include the Japanese barberry, which is considered harmless.

The notice is as follows:

"DANGEROUS SHRUB!"

"This is the common barberry which harbors black stem rust of wheat, oats, rye, and barley. The state department of agriculture, coöperating with the Illinois state experiment station and United States department of agriculture, requests its removal and destruction, since its presence endangers the above mentioned crops."

Beware the Common Barberry.

Every one who grows shrubs should familiarize himself with the characteristics of the common barberry in order to be able to distinguish it from the Japanese barberry. Common barberry bushes grow to a height of ten or twelve feet, and the leaves are green or purple with saw toothed edges. The little spines or thorns that come out from the branches usually grow in clusters of three or more. The flowers are yellow, and the red colored berries form in clusters like currants.

The Japanese barberry bushes are only about three feet tall, bearing small green leaves with smooth edges. Instead of having three or more spines near the base of the leaves, they have one and sometimes two. The flowers are light yellow in color, and the berries from with one, two, and occasionally three in a place, like gooseberries.

I Could Write a Book on Economy

Sure I could! I could use a pad of paper an inch thick and wear out a gross of good lead pencils before I got it all said. I could tell you about some fellows with ideas about saving round iron dollars that would make the old eagle fold up his wings and laugh.

What would you think—say—of a chap who bought a tin automobile and then spent enough on repairs to buy a limousine and hire a chauffeur to run it? Maybe you'd say there "ain't no sich animule," but, believe me, there is—and he's got a brother—the fellow who buys a battery with his eyes shut and don't wake up until he's hit in the nose with a big fat bill for re-insulation!

You may not believe it, but once in a while we get hold of an owner who says straight off that he don't care a continental about this economy thing and that he wants his battery fixed. Do we fix it? You bet we do, and send him away with a first-class job as reasonable (maybe more so) as he could get anywhere.

But sometimes, just to post him, we put in a word about the builders of 173 makes of cars and trucks who pay more to have Willard Threaded Rubber Insulation!

Why Waste Any More Money on Ordinary Insulation?

When it comes time for your old battery to die, why not just let it go and get a brand new Willard Threaded Rubber Battery?

Of course, it can be fixed—we could repair it if there wasn't anything left but the two handles. But the time always comes when it doesn't pay to bother with repairs.

In the ordinary battery the insulation is usually the first thing to wear out. Why? Because it is wood, and wood is softened by long soaking in battery solution and is likely any time to warp, split, puncture or rub through so that the troublesome short circuit gets in its work and starts the battery toward an early death.

Any good battery man can put new pieces of wood between the plates, but the best of them can't tell you how long your battery will last after the operation. And nobody can repair the damage already done to the plates.

The only way you can get Threaded Rubber Insulation is to buy it in the battery, and it's only in one kind: the Willard Threaded Rubber Battery.

If you believe in cutting out waste in the operation of your car—if you want to get down to a rock-bottom cost basis—if you want to put an end to unnecessary worries—begin by buying a Willard Threaded Rubber Battery just as the Willard Service Man says in his column.

Ask for it by its full name, and be sure you see the red Thread-Rubber Trade Mark on one side of the battery case.

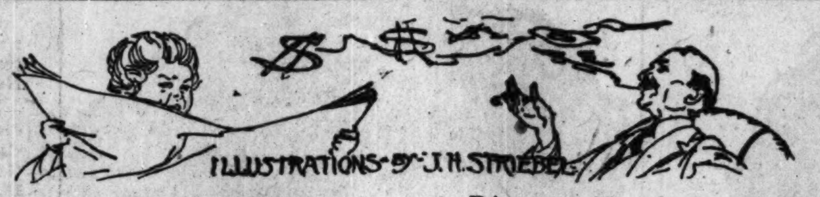
THE POTTERS



by J. P. McEvoy

Into Each Life Some Oil Must Fall.

PROLOGUE.

CHO. (recites): The business lunch as we know it today is a modern institution . . . In far-off times and far-off places business may have been transacted at business lunches, but now all that is transacted is lunch . . . and not very much of that. When Joe Spearhead invited you to lunch in those days you went to his cave wondering if he intended to lunch with you or off you. . . . Joe Spearhead is dead, but his spirit goes marching on. . . the cost of the business lunch, in other words, does not always appear on the check.

So as we gaze about us and observe Pa Potter committing lunch with a prosperous looking individual we shuck our carapace of poise and arise in our large white cravat and say, "What's that?" . . .

Scene: A Restaurant.

Pa Potter is listening to the honeyed words of Mr. Eagle, who could sell a red woolen union suit to the devil, but who is now engaged in distributing, "only to his friends," a few choice oil leases. Oily to bed and oily to rise, is his motto.

MR. EAGLE (to waiter):
Give us the line of march, I say.
(To Pa) Whaddye think ye'd like today? . . .
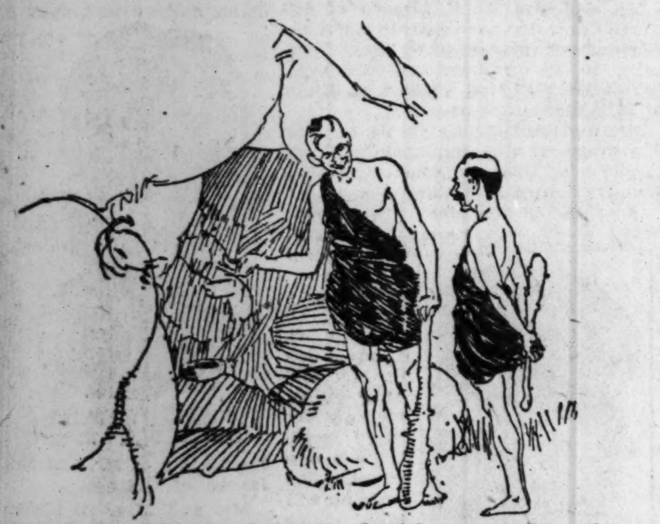
The same old dishes . . . the same old way.
Why don't they get up some new ones . . . eh?

CHO.: Pa has corns on his hip from carrying trays and thinks Carte de Jour is the name of the place, which qualifies him to criticize a real restaurant.

PA: Ain't it the truth? the same old chow . . .
I've got this memorized by now.
Let's see, there's a Vegetarian Dish,
Or whaddye think of that Planked Whitefish?
EAGLE: That "Fillit Mig-nun" isn't bad, y'know—
Say, I heard a good one at Frank Tinney's show . . .



"Wondering if he intended to lunch with you or off you."

Frank says, "J'ever hear of Jewish coffee?" and
The other guy says, "No, j'you?" and Frank says:
"I did, this morning the waiter comes to me and says,
'Say, j'wish coffee this morning?'"

PA: Ha! ha! . . . ha! ha! That's a nifty crack.
Say, when does that guy of ours come back?
He musta gone away and died . . .
D'ye want your au gratin potatoes fried?

EAGLE: Whatever you order, old top, is right;
That Corned Beef and Cabbage is nice and light,
Or Ham Hocks and Spinach . . . that's delicate stuff,
Or Pork Shanks and Sauer Kraut might be enough.

PA: That's nice and light, all right, all right;
I'd be falling away to a ton tonight . . .
Say, whaddye think of this story here
About Jack Dempsey and Carpentear?
It says it's a cinch the Frog will win.
That guy must be full of domestic gin . . .
Dempsey will knock him for three ooh-la-la's and a marseilaise.

EAGLE: You tell 'em, Lafayette, we're here yet.

PA: Well, Dempsey ain't solid with me, you bet;
That shipyard record of his is wet;
But just the same I've got a hunch
He'll flatten this baby with one punch . . .

CHO.: You will readily recognize from the above that this is a genuine business lunch . . . but now we will have the food brought in . . . so . . . and we will pass over Pa's profound solutions of all the problems of the world, any of which would be a day's work for an editorial writer or the work of several months for Lloyd George, who is rather slow about such matters, much to Pa's disgust. . . . Pa saw, if he were running things . . . "say, they'd be done different, that's all" . . . they probably would be different, at that . . . but now lunch is drawing to its close and Mr. Eagle is winding up . . . so this looks like business at last.

EAGLE: I was talking to Rankin the other day,
And he says you was visiting out his way,
And he told you about the leases he had,
And he said you wanted some awf'lly bad . . .
Of course there ain't none of 'em lyin' 'round . . .
The oil is just bubbling out of the ground . . .

PA: I was a bit interested . . . whaddye YOU say?
Are they sure to strike oil in that place any day?

EAGLE: Are they sure to strike oil?
Why, my boy, it's a pipe.
According to Hoyle
The development's ripe;
It just oozes right out
When you drive in a stake.
Do you 'magine, ole scout,
That I'd fool with a fake?

PA: No, of course, but you know
They occasionally blow,
And I couldn't afford
To lose very much dough.

(Carelessly)
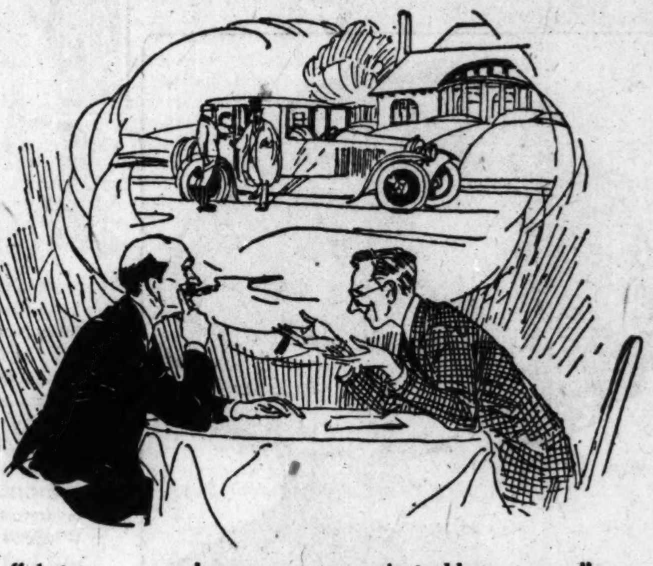
I wouldn't go broke
On five hundred or so,
But I would like to know
That the thing is a go.

EAGLE: I'm not sure there's any left;
I'm afraid it's all been took.

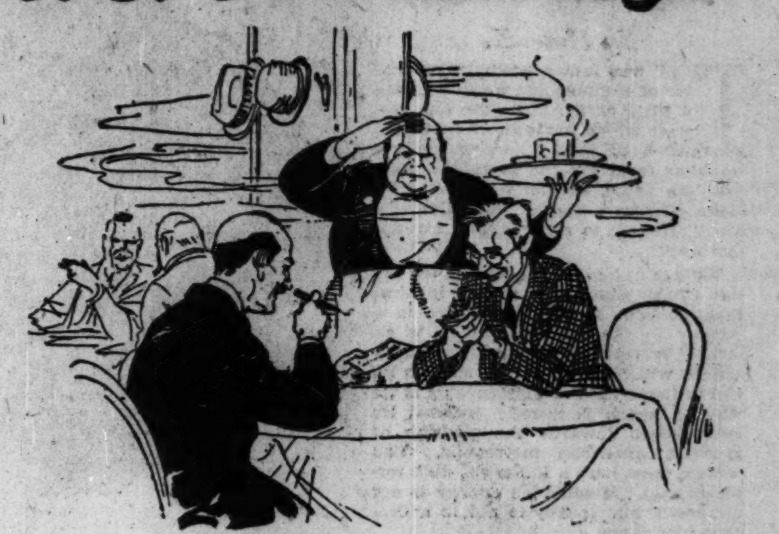
Cho.: (Business here of painful thinking
As he rummages his book.)

EAGLE: Let me see, now; is there any
I could get by hook or crook? . . .
My, I'd like to help you, Potter;
It would please Al Rankin, too,
Not to mention all the money
That will finally come to you.
Let me see . . . five hundred dollars
Ought to net you fifteen thou',
But the leases all are taken . . .
Darn the luck, that's rotten, now!

PA: I bet if they struck oil down there
I'd make a million bucks or two.
Aw—dig up some leases, please.
Think hard a minute . . . find a few.



"Autos . . . houses . . . coin to blow . . ."



"Can you hold this check till tomorrow, eh?"

EAGLE (thinking hard):
I think I know . . . now, let me see . . .
No, there's none there . . . I have it . . . whee!
I've thought of some, if we ain't too late.
(Rummages in his pockets.)
Yes, here they are . . . say, ain't that great?
And just five hundred bucks' worth, too . . .
All ready here to slip to you . . .
The choicest land in Tennessee,
Just dropping oil so fast and free
You'll soon be rolling in the dough—
Autos . . . houses . . . coin to blow . . .
Pearls and diamonds for the wiff,
And trips abroad . . . you lucky stiff.

PA (in a daze):
Are these the leases? Give me the bunch;
I'll give you the money right after lunch.

EAGLE (smoothly):
Take the blank check here
And fill in your bank.
When your fortune's made
You'll have me to thank.

PA (dutifully filling in):
Can you hold this check till tomorrow, eh?
Thanks . . . please do . . . well, I'm on my way.
I may be wealthy a year from today;

MISS OLIVE PETERSON

Three of the early June weddings will be those of Miss Lucia Farwell Hicks, Miss Olive Peterson, and Miss Estellene Mary Forbrich. Miss Hicks, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hamlin Hicks of Hinsdale, will become the bride of William Bradford Freer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lemuel Hinton Freer of Hinsdale, next Saturday evening at 8:30 o'clock at the residence of her parents, 179 Oak street, Hinsdale. She will be attended by her cousin, Miss Marjorie Farwell, and little Jane Dias and Mary Grulee, nieces of the bridegroom, will stretch the ribbons. Jay Northam Whipple will be best man for Mr. Freer. The service will be read in the presence of the relatives, but the reception following the ceremony will be a large one.

Invitations have been issued by Mr. and Mrs. Harold T. Peterson of 1459 Farragut avenue for the wedding of their sister, Miss Olive Peterson, to Edward Huggett Beardsley of Elkhart, Ind., formerly of Chicago, which will take place next Saturday at the Sovereign hotel.

Miss Estellene Mary Forbrich, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Forbrich of 1308 Lunt avenue, will be married to Milton Joseph Holloway on Thursday, June 9, at 8 o'clock at the First Congregational church of Rogers Park. Mr. and Mrs. Holloway will be at home after July 1 at 1154 Morse avenue.

Sunshine and Lake Breezes Make May Days Hot and Cold

By Mme. X.

THAT was just a preliminary canter of summer last week. It came a little earlier than the one last year which made the Republican convention of 1920 a memorable get together feast for the president makers. As usual, old Sol was routed by Lake Michigan breezes, and Chicagoans were able to resume their strenuous way.

We are apt to forget how much we owe to the lake in the way of inspiration, nervous force, zip. There is a quality in the air here which is as largely responsible for the tremendous strides which this city has made in its eighty-four years of existence as is its site, to which is usually credited its swift climb towards the position of greatest American metropolis. You seldom meet here a lethargic, dull, torpid mortal. Misdirected energy is not unknown, but apathy is not in a Chicago dictionary.

The war left us as a sort of legacy a new use of many words. The expression "drive" is one of the most forceful and reminiscent of these war made words. Do you remember the terrible significance of its first employment, when we watched day by day for news of the Hindenburg drive, the French drive, the Italian drive, the English drive?

Now the term is almost entirely applied to campaigns for funds for some philanthropic or uplift movement. It is as if we sent around some old, war worn veteran with a cup soliciting alms.

Assaults On Our Finances.

Looking back, I can hardly remember a moment in the last few years when we have not been in the surge of some such drive. Sometimes the organizers of these assaults on the glorious inviolability of our private and personal finances try to disguise them under such terms as "presentation." But the fact and the act remain the same.

It is the unselfish, untiring, devoted energy of the few in the interests of the many, in the interests of the community itself, which accomplishes the financing of such enterprises as the Red Cross, the Y. W. C. A., the Y. M. C. A., the Boy Scouts, the Salvation Army, and the various other great undertakings which are the hope of our civilization. These few take the exhausting, ungrateful, nerve racking task of soliciting money from the great and heedless majority of a self-absorbed world.

Instead of being grateful to them for taking the hardest part of the job off our hands, the tendency of the average citizen is to complain when so approached. Yet eliminate from our social system these various enterprises, and what would be the residue? A rampant materialism which would suck the soul out of us all and breed anarchy and destruction.

So, the next time you are approached by one of these champions of reform and philanthropy, say, "Thank you for giving me the opportunity."

Help Civic Music Association.

Among the drives of the moment is that for funds to support the Civic Music association. This is one of our institutions which gives us the right of claiming to be the musical center of the country. Under the aegis of this association is being developed a unique experiment, the Civic orchestra. It is the only one of its kind in existence.

Heretofore those who perform in orchestras have received their training only as individuals. An orchestra of students has never been tried until Mr. Stock established this one. So great an advantage is it for a musician desiring to be a member of an orchestra to be from the beginning instructed in such an organization that already members of this local orchestral school have found positions in the symphony orchestras of Pittsburgh, Cleveland, and Detroit, as well as in our own Chicago Symphony association.

Besides training performers for other musical bodies the civic orchestra gives concerts here in public schools, parks, and on the municipal pier. Also the association aims to develop the love and knowledge of music in many walks of life by organizing choruses among the school children of the community. Sixteen of these, including over 1,000 youngsters, now flourish here. Did you ever go to one of the concerts given by these choruses? It is a most inspiring musical festival.

Much of the credit for the present advanced state of this civic music is due to Frederick Stock, who with Mr. DeLamarter and Mr. Dasch (all three of our symphony orchestra) have given much time and strength to this musical development. Therefore, help provide the sinews of war for our Civic Music association when you are approached on the subject, and be glad that you belong to so enlightened a community.

Opera Not Yet Assured.

Of course, while on matters musical, the drive of those interested in preserving the Chicago Grand opera to us is the most important thing on the carpet. In this drive the women's committee, under Mrs. Jacob Baur, is doing the greater part of the work.

It was the hope of those backing the enterprise that the Association of Commerce would take such an active interest in the undertaking that in itself this support would make the opera a sure thing here. Unfortunately this is not as yet manifesting the strength expected of it. Unless the necessary guarantee is secured soon the lease of the Auditorium for year after next, which must be signed early in June, will be impossible, and the end of our opera is in sight, a catastrophe of a first class order and one which would put on Chicago such a humiliation as the city has never had in its up to now quite honorable and creditable history.

Don't leave it all to the women!

This women's committee is doing heroic work, and deserves the greatest credit for the extremely businesslike way in which it has approached a difficult problem. Its committees and subcommittees are seeking in every way to arouse not only Chicago, but all the adjacent territory which looks to this city for its artistic impulse and inspiration.

Mmes. Baur, Coleman, Meeker, McGann, Scriven, Ely, Winterbotham, Carpenter, Hibbard, Borden, Odell, Stout, Fifield, Fairbank, et al. cannot carry all the burden of the drive, though they are devoting a great many of their waking hours to it.

Absorbed in Opera Campaign.

Mrs. Baur moved out of her former home at 48 Cedar street to what was formerly the F. C. Letts apartment at 1100 Lake Shore drive last Wednesday, without even knowing that she had moved, I fancy, so absorbed is she in making her part of the opera campaign a success. She has given up a projected trip to Europe to devote her thoughts and energies to this matter. Such concentration of purpose should produce results.

The Chinese relief work is making progress. Mrs. William J. Calhoun and her committee are planning an entertainment of some Chinese character to assist in the raising of funds to help to help feed the Chinese, many of whom are not waiting for our aid, but are just up and dying in spite of our good intentions and sympathy.

No, my friend, this is not the end of the local and contemporary drives. Mrs. George Bass is starting a campaign for contributions to a $500,000 fund to build a new home for the Illinois General Hospital and Cancer Research foundation at Rhodes avenue and 32d street.

It is said a Chicago surgeon may not take a patient to a hospital for an operation unless he happens to be on the medical staff of that hospital. The Illinois General hospital is the one exception to this rule, according to its supporters.

Cancer Research Work.

It has sixty-six beds, and plans for 300 in the projected new home, which will extend through to Vernon avenue and be nine stories high. While it has no charity beds, it nevertheless never turns away a patient if there is a place unoccupied for him or her. Its research work in the direction of cancer is extensive and valuable. It is incorporated as an enterprise not for profit, and any surplus is devoted to this special work.

Among the women interested in enabling it to enlarge its sphere are, besides Mrs. Bass, who is both president of the board of trustees and chairman of the women's division drive, Mrs. Willis G. Wood, Mrs. James H. Channon, Mrs. John G. Campbell, and Mrs. Clifford Chickering. Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank and Mrs. Jacob Baur head the list of the advisory council.

The drive runs from June 1 to June 11. It opens with a big evening meeting at the Congress hotel in the Elizabethan room, when Henry Porter Chandler will speak. An interesting feature of the evening will be a performance by Miss Lynn Fontanne of a little dramatic piece which Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank has written. Dancing also will be a part of the evening's program. It sounds like a spirited beginning to the drive.

Dancing Until Dawn.

The principal social event of last week was the ball given by Mr. and Mrs. Wallace C. Winter on Tuesday evening at the Blackstone hotel in honor of their son and his bride, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Robbins Winter. The latter was Miss Rose of Knoxville, Tenn.

Although it was the most tropical evening of a tropical week, the Winters' friends turned out en masse and danced until the dawn was just touching the zenith. The crystal ballroom has a refrigerating plant attachment, which made the guests feel that they had stepped from Florida into, say, Maine, and added not a little to the enthusiasm of the dancers.

Many of Mrs. Wallace Winter's relatives came from St. Paul for the ball, among them her mother, Mrs. Robbins.

Mrs. Lathrop's sojourn in Chicago is the occasion for much informal entertaining. Friday Mrs. John A. Spoor gave a luncheon for her at the Saddle and Cycle club, while yesterday Mrs. Arthur Meeker also was hostess at a luncheon in her honor at the same attractive spot.

The Saddle and Cycle is looking its prettiest and gayest at this moment. Its terraces sloping to the lake, its formal gardens, its capacious swimming pool (big and beautiful enough for the most exacting of the Roman emperors), its popular tennis courts are the rendezvous for the world that amuses itself. Its Saturday dinner dances and Sunday luncheons bring out strong contingents of Chicago's most fashionable folk.

Among its regular habitués are Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker (Mr. Meeker is its present president), Mr. and Mrs. Bertram Winston, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Elting, Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. McGann, Mr. and Mrs. William Odell, Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Strobel, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hamill.

Passengers on the Olympic.

Mrs. Arnold C. Klebs, who has been the guest of her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. King, left here Thursday for Bryn Mawr to be present at the graduation of her daughter, Miss Eleanor Newell. She sails for France June 4 on the Olympic with her two daughters.

On the same ship Capt. and Mrs. Marshall Field and their two children and Capt. Field's sister, Miss Gwendolyn Field, also depart for a summer in England. The Fields have taken two cottages in the south of England, near Sandwich, for the season. The cottages are at the meeting point of three of the best golf courses in Great Britain, so if they are so minded the Fields can have a cheerful out of door summer, with plenty of that gentle sport as a daily preoccupation. They are returning to Chicago next October.

Nearer at home are the summer plans of those Chicagoites who are remaining in this neighborhood. Among them are the "Sam" Chases, who recently bought a cottage in Lake Forest for a warm weather abode. When they have put on a new roof, rebuilt the side walls, added some rooms, including a couple of bathrooms, thrown out some bay windows and porches, and completed a fine new cellar, the house will be ready for occupancy. We only hope that they will by that time have an up-to-date snow plow, for we sadly fear that they may need it.

On the Fence.

We speak thus despondently, for one of the strongest inducements which brought the X family to Lake Forest was the hope of spending some of our idle and gregarious hours with the Chases, than whom there is no better company. At present it looks as if our only chance for association with them would be to go round in odd hours and sit on their fence and watch with them the majestic processes of destruction and reconstruction. An exciting summer for the Chase family!

Others also dependent on the speed and skill of the average carpenter, mason, plumber, and bricklayer are the Robert G. McGanns, who are awaiting the completion of the palatial garage on their Lake Forest property before moving out for the summer. This is an imposing brick structure, which will provide a summer home for them until such time as the main house shall be completed. Until this temporary abode is ready, they are occupying their mansion on East Pearson street, facing the water works tower.

A Sign of the Times.

A sign of the tight financial times is the number of furnished houses still on the market on the north shore. By this moment in other more prosperous seasons there would be hardly a roof to be had for those desirous of forsaking city noise and smoke for the quiet greenness of the leafy suburbs. But this year it is quite otherwise, and many a suburbanite who looks upon the warm months as a harvest time, must occupy the once profitable home himself.

Apropos of nothing at all, how much longer are we going to endure the pavements in the principal streets of the much crowded loop? In all the world is there a worse bit of asphalt than that on State street, between Washington and Madison streets? Where does one bump the head against the top of the taxi harder or oftener than in traversing Wabash avenue from Randolph street south? It is a comfort to know that we beat the world's record in this direction as well as in so many others.

I'd hate to be outdone by Peking, for instance, which is said to have fierce pavements. It seems as if a little dough could be dumped on those deep holes between midnight and sunrise any night and save much nervous wear and tear, as well as preserve motor springs to a longer usefulness. To bump over some of those holes in the motor busses is to have a lesson in one's own anatomy, especially that of the spinal column. Its articulations become even more than usually articulate, though the owner of said spine often becomes inarticulate from overemotion.

NEWS OF THE CHICAGO WOMEN'S CLUBS

MRS. WILLIAM A. SAUER PHOTO GORDON

MISS MARY WOOD CHASE

One of the most successful years in the history of the Edgewater Catholic Woman's club has just come to a close. Since the club's organization in 1912 it has steadily increased its membership and extended its field of work. Mrs. William A. Sauer is completing with this season the first of her two years as president of the society.

One of the most important organizations based upon the love of their members for music is that of the Lake View Musical club. The programs of the club during the last year have been varied and of great interest. The work of the coming year is planned with the intention of even broadening the scope that was compassed in the programs of the months just passed. Miss Mary Wood Chase is the newly elected president of the club.

Catholic Woman's Club of Edgewater Closes Ninth Year

WITH a membership of over 700 and a record of accomplishments which testifies to its value in the community, the Edgewater Catholic Woman's club has closed its ninth year and is ready to enter in the fall upon its tenth season of creditable activities.

Since its organization in 1912 its membership has steadily increased and its usefulness has become more and more widespread. New departments have been created and old ones augmented according to the needs of the times.

One of the foremost organizations in war work, the Edgewater Catholic Woman's club did not stop its humanitarian work with the war, and is still bringing cheer to army and marine hospitals and providing delicacies for the men upon whom war's imprint remains.

During the year just closed the department of education of the club conducted a series of classes in citizenship for the benefit of its members, under the direction of Mrs. F. MacNish, state chairman of civics of the Federation of Woman's Clubs. Monthly study classes on short story writing addressed by the Rev. E. A. Pernin were another educational feature.

The home economics department offered classes in cooking and dressmaking with competent teachers. These were well attended and interesting, and will be resumed in the fall. A vast amount of good work has been accomplished by the philanthropy department. Most conspicuous, perhaps, because of its manifestation of universal sisterhood, has been the furnishing to girl wards of the Juvenile court of suitcases containing toilet articles, night gowns, and aprons.

Miss Mary Bartelme has written the club expressing appreciation of this worth while and utilitarian service, and letters from many of the recipients of the suitcases have come to the club. Donations to the Associated Catholic Charities, the European relief fund, the Little Sisters of the Poor, De Paul nursery, the soldiers' fund, and the House of the Good Shepherd were among the philanthropies of the year. Provision also was made for daily distribution of milk to needy families, and in many cases fuel and clothing as well.

The program committee discharged its duties with credit. Speakers of prominence and well known artists have been secured for meetings throughout the year, and the institution of the social hour following the meetings for discussion by the members of various phases of the club's work and general topics has proven a success.

The Bulletin, the monthly publication of the club, is edited by Mrs. John F. Craddock. It supplies the members with reports on activities of the club and with items of interest regarding the work of clubs having similar objects.

Miss Ethel Casey is president of the auxiliary of the Edgewater Catholic Woman's club, the membership of which is composed of the daughters of members and their friends. The auxiliary has given a number of entertainments during the year, the proceeds of which have contributed to the support of St. Catherine's Home for Dependent Girls at Addison and Rokeby streets. This home is a protégé also of the parent club.

Those who will serve as officers of the Edgewater Catholic Woman's club during the coming year are: Mrs. William A. Sauer, president; Mrs. James Casey and Mrs. Paul O. Young, vice presidents; Mrs. John F. Craddock, recording secretary; Mrs. George Wright, corresponding secretary; Mrs. John P. Dillon, financial secretary; Mrs. Anthony Kreuser, treasurer.

Americanization Classes One of North End Club's Best Features

THE key note of the North End club is community service. The amount of work which the club members have accomplished successfully during the last year or so is remarkable. Classes in Americanization have been among the most significant undertaken.

The following detailed account of the society's activities is well worth a place in this column as proving the possibilities of more than one kind of endeavor for a comparatively conservative club.

A musical scholarship was created and a talented Italian girl, Miss Marie Fannell, is supported and being instructed in Italy, with the promise of an operatic career in a few years.

During the five years of its existence the North End Club Bulletin has not only proved its usefulness in the publication of announcements and reports but, besides being self-supporting, has contributed much to the club's charities and to the building fund.

The club programs for the year were highly interesting and educational, consisting of lectures and exhibits pertaining to Americanization, literature, politics, music, drama, fashions, world conditions, and art.

The philanthropy committee accomplished an active work in distributing food and clothing through the United Charities and school children's aid, visiting and caring for crippled soldiers, giving scholarships to the Vocational Supervision league, refurnishing rooms in two charitable homes, money and clothing donated to European, Chinese, Russian relief work, infant welfare and Red Cross memberships and seals sold.

The civics class opened its doors to every woman in the comunity, its aim being to show every woman within its "sphere of influence" the connection between the precinct caucus in her own neighborhood and the great national conventions at which presidential candidates are chosen.

The club is proud of an active permanent building committee whose efforts made it possible for the club to sponsor a concert by Mary Garden and Charles Hackett; this committee working constantly toward a new club home.

The drama study and players class presented two plays before the club and gave programs before the class embracing dramatic readings, current plays, and lectures by dramatists.

The always popular home economics class achieved a successful year by giving lectures on china, textiles, wearing and household utilities, demonstrations of cooking and recipes, and two club luncheons.

The organization is actively interested along art lines, is affiliated with the Municipal Art league, Public School Art society, and the Outdoor Art league. It has a valuable collection of paintings loaned to the Nicholas Senn High school.

The annual view day at the Art institute for the exhibition of paintings by Chicago artists was held in February preceded by a luncheon given by the art and literature class with the artists as guests of honor. That class presented during the year a lesson in landscape painting, an exhibit and talk on Japanese art, and the art and technique of making stained glass windows.

The junior membership consists of an organization of younger members whose work and coördination assist the philanthropy department and provide entertainment for its meetings.

A legislative class brought up for discussion various bills pending in the legislature, and received enlightening talks by well known speakers.

ART AND ARCHITECTURE

International Poster Exhibit at Institute

By Eleanor Jewett.

THE poster as a medium of artistic expression came into its own during the course of the great war. It was an international medium and farreaching in its consequences. Under the spur of the picturesque legend, men rallied to the flag of their country, fought for their flag—died for their flag. Women worked, incited to keener effort by the posters calling upon them for help; children did their bit.

There was no end to the activities that the poster heralded. There was no end to the charities for which the poster commanded even the leanest purse and the coldest heart. From the war's beginning to the war's end the poster kept step wit hthe fluctuating prosperities of the various countries, America, England, France, Germany, Poland, Italy—all voiced their needs, their failures, and their triumphs through this medium.

The Art institute has an immense collection of war posters. A part of this collection is now on exhibition in the galleries of the east wing, where, heat permitting, an entertaining half hour may be passed in prowling about from the pre-war posters of Germany (one of 1911 invites us to a Berlin festival), to the post-war posters of Great Britain, in which we are urged to hie us with all speed to various attractive spots in the confines of that gracioue isle.

The French posters are such as the war has well acquainted us with. Master of posters, Poulbot, in this exhibit, too, still holds his place as chief of artists in setting a child's soul naked before the glass of adult sympathy. His children live, as do few children in the realms of art. Limited though his medium of expression is, yet with him every line counts and by a stroke here and a stroke there, a bit of color beyond, and an expanse of gray distance, he gives us, simply but strikingly, some of the most arresting bits of French war days that it has fallen to the lot of any artist to present.

More decorative, more commercially decorative is, perhaps, the better term, are a number of the German posters. Others, those of Poland, for example, or those of Czecho-Slovak origin, are more haunting in the horrors they display. Our own are of interest, and rank well with the pictured messages from across the seas.

The British posters, outside of the war theme, have qualities of decorative importance which are worth study. But, master of them all, the French poster is the poster, and to the Frenchmen who have developed this art into an art credit should be given. Among those to whom credit is due Poulbot, possibly the first in rank of poster artists, should be specifically recognized.

We scarcely touch the skirts of our own shores in any of the present exhibitions at the Art institute. Frederic Clay Bartlett is an American, it is true, but the theme of his group of paintings is China, and again China, and again China. From the harbor of Hongkong to the Temple of Prayer in Peking; from the Willow Tea house of Shanghai to the flower pagoda of Soochow; from the Shameen Bridge of Canton to the chanting dramatic of the theater of Peking, there is the atmosphere of the Orient in each painting, the breath of the poppy blowing through each canvas, the sleepy soul of China, blinking the eyes of its ancient gods, watching at the portals of each picture.

There is little more to add to the several times repeated paeans of praise that have before this swelled into a chorus of appreciation before Mr. Bartlett's work. In his painting is found a sure, firm touch. He uses color lavishly, but carefully. There, apparently, is little of the unpremeditated allowed to lodge above his signature. He sees his picture before it. He has, evidently, a nonintrospective soul.

The sunshine, the dust, the smell of the orient, the mystery of China, the color of China, the age of China—from these he has taken their soul, and, remaining master of his own, has reproduced theirs the more faithfully within the confines of his canvas. He gives to those who look at his paintings a sensation of sincere pleasure and a stimulating urge to try the wander-path for themselves.

The third exhibition on view in the east wing of the institute is that of contemporary Polish art. The paintings were brought to America by Dr. Stanislaus Gruinski of Posen, Poland. They are remarkable from several standpoints, but one feature that it is impossible to overlook is that of the disturbingly absent element of peculiar presentation. There is no ism in the entire group of canvases. Possibly Poland has no independent artists? Possibly Poland does not harken to the voice of the liberator? More likely, Poland is too near Russia to permit lawlessness even in painting to override common sense and the just wisdom of the beautiful.

However that may be, the lack of two-headed calves, the bearded woman, the thin boy, five-legged chickens, and other familiar side shows represented occasionally in other than circus circles, is welcome. There is enough left to make it possible for practically every taste to be satisfied in the various reaches of this show. From the fiery strength of Pautsch to the serenity of Bartel, scarcely a rung in the ladder of artistic achievement is missing.

Undoubtedly the most virile canvas presented is that by Pautsch, "The Death of Ladislaus, King of Poland and Hungary, at Varna." There is excellent action in this; frantic, hurried, hectic, rampant action; action that jerks and beats, pulsing with life, mad with battle, fearful with death. The horses' heads are particularly arresting. Against the crowded background of the scene of conflict, the white face of the Polish monarch stands out; Death rides close by his side, stretching out for him; a companion grasps at the king's arm, striving, in vain, to wrench him from his mortal path. It is a powerful presentation, accented by the human terror and force in the convulsive movements of the battle spurred horses.

The group of small pictures by Pautsch depicting war scenes in Poland are amusing for all of the horror that should lie back of them, because of his method of giving the various notes voice.

His "Winter Fable" and "Legend of the Dragon" are different in conception. They are rather beautiful stories told in paint instead of verse, of, in the first instance, the reign of winter while summer sleeps below his chains of snow and ice, and, in the second instance, of the dramatic meeting of the hero with the dragon where, much as with St. George of England, the hero fights the dragon to the death.

There are other paintings by Pautsch which should be looked at. Among them are "The Return," "The Blind Man," "Beggars," and "The Fisherman."

The quaintest group of pictures in the exhibit is that by Nina Alexandrowicz, lent by Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, Which is more attractive, "Pamela and her various situations, "The Bride's Mother," "The Dream Hour," or the charming sketches of geese, rabbits, the Siamese cat, or an eagle, I am sure I don't know. Each is adorable—and Pamela traveling, loving nature, or receiving a love letter, is in turn the most adorable of them all.

The group of pictures by Piramowicz is almost, not quite, as charming. "The Bridegroom," "The Polish Bride," "The Peasant Child," and "The Peasant of Cracow,"—take your choice. You will probably enjoy them. They are all worth enjoying.

Less Polish and more early American, place it at about the Colonial period, than any other picture in the exhibit is 'The Masquerade" by Bartel, of which the center group has been cleverly lifted and set by itself on a different canvas entitled "The Flirt. "The Masquerade" is an attractive piece of painting. It is an immensely large panel, and exceedingly restful in its context.

There is with this, as with Mr. Bartlett's work, no introspection present. The painter undoubtedly is giving us the garden scene as he saw it, and that it is beautiful is due more to nature than to him. He has not touched up so much as a leaf. Thanks be, occasionally, for the straightforward romancer in paint.

There are a number of other artists who could be dwelt upon at length, but space forbids. Among them are Ajdukiewicz, Dobrowolski, S. Fabijanski, F. Gendzierski, J. Graczynski, J. Holzmuller, J. Pochwalski, S. Sonnewend, L. Wyczolkowski, W. Kossak, and F. Posowski.

These exhibitions will remain on view until June 12.

"Recently a new organization has been formed of Chicago women who are interested in helping Chicago artists put their work before the public. The organization is called Chicago Friends of Art. The first exhibition held under its auspices will begin Wednesday and close June 4, at the Edgewater Beach hotel. The pictures to be exhibited will be selected by Edgar Cameron and John Norton.

The summer school of landscape architecture will open June 6 and close July 15. Among the subjects to be treated are "Landscape Design of Home Grounds and Gardens," "Plants for Home Grounds and Gardens," and the "History and Theory of Landscape Architecture."

This course promises to be one of the most interesting and instructive that has been given in Chicago for a long time along just these lines. Correspondence concerning the course should be addressed to Ralph R. Root, 8 East Huron street, Chicago.

The two prizes which were offered in the recent International Water Color exhibition, held at the Art institute, have been awarded. The Bernhard A. Eckhart price of $250 went to "Prisoners of War" by W. P. Welsh; the "Shore Line" by Edward Giles, was given the C. A. Kremer prize of $1[illegible].

Slams of Life

MEDITATION ON STRAW HATS.

Around the town I sadly go
To find a dizzy straw chapeau,
A straw of snap, a straw of dash,
A zippy straw of pep and pash;
But never do I find a straw
That doesn't look a trifle blah
When once its opalescent sheen
Is settled on this craggy bean.

My winter hat, you're old and gray,
A victim of senile decay;
But still I cannot bear to shed
Your humble wreckage from my head;
All winter long my occiput
Was sheltered by your homely hut,
And nary a straw I've ever seen
Feels half so good upon this bean.

And yet I s'pose the time is near
When I must toss you on your ear
And buy an argent nimbus rare
To halo this unworthy hair;
But vainly through the town I go
To find a dizzy straw chapeau—
Above my face they all look blah . . .
Is it the face? . . . Is it the straw?

ASTRONOMY

THE EARTH IS ROUND.

OCCASIONALLY, even today, some one arises to claim that the world is flat, and that it does not turn over. Some also say that it is a great concave shell, with us on the inside. A few assert that it is spherical, truly enough, but hollow, and that beings extremely different from ourselves must dwell on the inside.

All these theories are 400 years or more behind the times. Thinkers in the days of Columbus realized that the earth was round, and since his day proof on proof his piled up, until today no educated person can doubt the shape of our abode.

Some of the things which go to show that the earth is round are exceedingly interesting. You have heard, no doubt, of whispering galleries, such as the rotunda in the capitol at Washington, where whispered words will echo around and around. Perhaps you have even had the opportunity to stand in such a place and hear your words come shrilly back to you, once, twice, or three times, until they died away in a murmur of confusion.

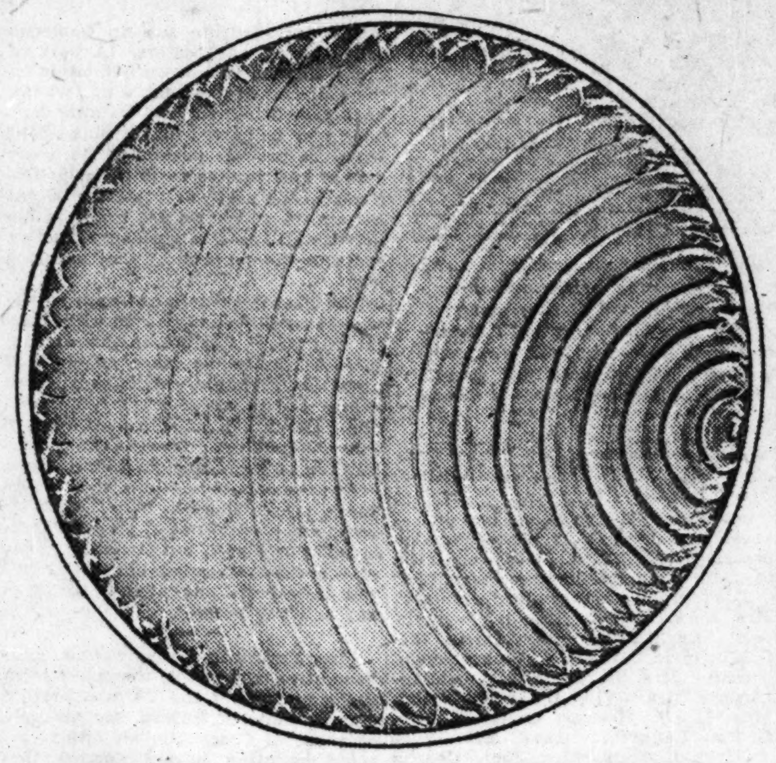
Out in the middle of the room you heard no such phenomena. You heard the echoes only when you stood against the wall. Indeed, if you happened to have had a companion, you will remember that when both of you stood a little distance from the wall your whispers would not carry across the room, but you heard each other plainly when you both stood against the wall.

The earth acts like a whispering gallery, save instead of sound waves we have earthquake waves. Often the earthquakes are recorded on the instruments set for them which seemingly have not come through the earth, on the chord, but around it on the arc, in the rocks beneath the ground. They are feeble, and observers were long puzzled to account for how thew went so far from the place they were created.



MODEL OF A WHISPERING GALLERY IN A PAN OF WATER WAVES ACT THIS WAY ONLY IN ROUND OBJECTS
BY S. F. MAXWELL

Big earthquake shocks would come right through the earth, from side to side, just like your voice would carry across the gallery were you to shout, but these were little ones, small whisperings of the slipping of some far off mountains.

The mechanics of the whispering gallery explains both perfectly. Both earthquakes and sound are made of waves, the one in rock, the other in air. In open spaces both travel in all directions at once in ever widening rings, like splashes in the water. When traveling thus, their intensity always diminishes rapidly, until at no great distance their force is spent.

Horns are constructed to keep the waves of sound from spreading in this way, and so losing their strength before they reach the hearers. But when there is a sharp disturbance at the edge of some round body, the rotunda for the sound, the earth for the earthquake waves, or a round tub of water for you, if you should care to try the experiment yourself, less than half the waves penetrate straight in toward the center and are lost, and the rest are reflected again and again along the wall, until they make a complete circuit around. Thus it is that neither the voice nor the earthquake will carry straight across, but will easily be felt along the outer wall.

Inasmuch as earthquake waves act this way in all directions, they prove beyond a doubt that the earth is round. They also prove that we live on the surface of the globe, and that the earth is solid to the core, and has an average density equal to that of steel.

The Link

By Guy Lee.

(Lines inspired by the tablet marking the site of the first house in Chicago.)

Across the boulevard from where
  The Wrigley splits the clouds
A little tablet tells a tale
  Unheeded by the crowds.
In its abbreviated space
  An epic story's told;
Romance is written on that link
  Between the new and old.

It joins the present splendor with
  The swamp and wilderness;
The moccasin and hide are merged
  With pump and silken dress.
The liner and canoe are one;
  The prairie and the wold
Salute the city in that link
  Between the new and old.

Courageous men and women brave,
  Whom peril could not part,
Defied impossibilities
  To make their modest start.
Their sacrifice and toil bequeathed
  A heritage of gold
To us. . . . It's published on that link
  Between the new and old.

Daniels and Walters:

"Who are you?"

"I'm the end of a bartender's dream."

"You tickle me."

"Lady, I don't do nothing for nobody that don't do nothing for me."

"Are you a comedian?"

"A what?"

"A comedian."

"No, I'm a Presbyterian."

"I know a lady who had five children and four apples. She wanted to divide them equally; how did she do it?"

"That's an old one, every one knows that. She made apple sauce."

"O, no, she didn't. She just killed one of the children."

"One day a lady took her little boy downtown, and she said to him, 'Hang onto my skirts, and you won't get lost.' The little boy started to cry and, when his mother asked him why, he said he was crying because he couldn't reach that far."

De Haven and Nice:

"We are just running over our act."

"That act should have been run over years ago. What are your names?"

"Mulligan and Mulligan."

"Where are you staying?"

"At the Sherman house."

"Mulligan and Mulligan at the Sherman house. Take my advice and change it to Levy and Levy if you don't want to start a riot."

"Where are you from?"

"Mulligan and Mulligan from the golden west; lots of west, but not much gold."

"If this act isn't cheating the public, I'm an honest politician. Why, these guys have enough nerve to ask Henry Ford for enough money to rebuild Palestine."

Weak Arches?

When you step in your stockinged feet does the whole inner side of your foot touch the floor? We hope not, for that would indicate a fallen or weak arch. Between the ball of the foot and the heel, the arch should curve up, on the inner side of the foot and not touch the floor.

To strengthen the arch muscles and keep the foot healthy and comfortable, wear the Cantilever Shoe. For the shank is flexible, it bends WITH the foot. It encourages the muscles to exercise. Cantilevers correct and prevent flat foot by strengthening the muscles that surround the bones of the arch.

The natural inner sole line provides room for the toes in Cantilever Shoes. This and the set of the heel encourage correct posture. The under-arch sole hugs the foot when the shoe is laced, and supports the instep restfully and healthfully.

Trim oxfords in several leathers and white linen; also high shoes. Widths from AAAAA to EE.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Episcopalians to Celebrate Mission Society Centennial

By Rev. Gardner MacWhorter.

ANNOUNCEMENT of a nation wide celebration of the 100th anniversary of the founding of the Domestic and Foreign Missionary society of the Episcopal church, to culminate in a thanksgiving service Nov. 6, was made recently at the Church Missions House in New York in connection with partial plans for the observance of this notable centennial.

The history of this society is coterminous with the history of the government of the United States. Its roots reach back to 1785, two years before the adoption of the constitution of the United States, when the constitution of the independent American church was framed, in large measure by the same men who later drafted the national constitution.

The convention which brought into existence the missionary society was presided over by the Rt. Rev. William White, bishop of Pennsylvania, who had served as chaplain of the old Continental congress and numbered George Washington among his parishioners in Christ church, Philadelphia. Francis Scott Key, author of "The Star Spangled Banner," assisted in drafting the constitution of the society.

Organized in 1821, the Domestic and Foreign Missionary society found its world embracing mission in 1835 in the epoch marking declaration that the church itself is the real missionary body, of which every member of the communion is an integral part. This transformed the society from a voluntary organization into one of the chief agencies of the Episcopal church. Since that time it has kept even pace with the advancing progress of the United States.

Its missionaries, with the solid support of the church behind them, have followed the receding frontier of the nation with their spiritual and civilizing influences, and when the limit of continental expansion was reached, and destiny carried the flag of the nation overseas, the society has always been abreast of the advance guard of American progres and enlightenment.

The plans for the anniversary which the presiding bishop and council have approved are largely historical and educational, and include the presentation of a pageant illustrating the society's hundred years of progress, the publication of a history of the organization, commemorative meetings with addresses by leading members of the clergy and laity, church school activities and a week of intensive study of missions and missionary work, which will culminate on Nov. 6 in a thanksgiving service in every parish and mission of the church simultaneously—in continental United States, Alaska, Cuba, Porto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Mexico, Brazil, Hawaii, China, Japan, the Philippines, and Africa; with centennial sermons and offerings with which to inaugurate the second century of the society's history.

The Rev. Henry Kowert is the pastor of the First St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran church at 1301 North La Salle street, which celebrates its seventy-fifth anniversary with services at 10:30 o'clock this morning and at 8 o'clock this evening, at both of which Pastor Kowert will speak. At the evening service the Lutheran hospital chorus of 300 voices will sing.

Pastor Kowert celebrated two anniversaries of his own the last week—his ordination and his marriage—which both took place ten years ago. His first charge in the Lutheran ministry was in California, where he served for three years, then after a year and a half at Chicago Heights, his voice failing him, he was obliged to enter the real estate business for two years, and after regaining his health he became pastor of First St. Paul's in September, 1917.

The Rev. Mr. Kowert is a graduate of the Concordia seminary in St. Louis, was secretary of the Missouri Lutheran synod last year, and is now secretary of the Lutheran diamond jubilee committee. He was born in New Zealand, the son of the Rev. William Kowert, a missionary to that country thirty-five years ago, and he has a brother, the Rev. William Kowert Jr., who is the Lutheran pastor in Elgin. In 1911 Pastor Kowert married Minnie Giessing, and the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Kowert are the parents of a son and a daughter.

The union ministers' meeting, under the auspices of the Chicago Church federation, will be held tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock in the Association auditorium, 19 South La Salle street, when a moving picture film, "The Stream of Life," will be shown, through the courtesy of the New Era Films. This film was recently shown in the Fourth Presbyterian church, and is highly indorsed by President Charles M. Stuart of Garret Biblical institute and by many leading ministers and church papers throughout the country. Ministers are asked to invite at least one leading layman from their churches, with a view to having the film shown in their own churches.

In the Sag cemetery, on Archer avenue and 107th street, there will be, on Decoration day at 10:30, a memorial high mass for the soldiers buried in the cemetery. It will be followed by a sermon, procession through the cemetery, blessing of the graves, and benediction in St. James' church. Father William Murphy, D. D., a former chaplain at Great Lakes Naval station, will conduct the services. Chicago and Alton train leaving the Union station at 8:30, central time, and Halsted street station at 8:40 will stop at Lambert [Sag Bridge].

The president, Dr. John H. Chew, and the board of trustees of the Chicago Policlinic School for Nurses announce the graduation exercises of the class of 1921, to be held on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock in the parish hall of St. Chrysostom's church, 1424 North Dearborn parkway, of which Dr. Chew has been the senior warden for the last twenty-five years. A class of fifteen nurses from Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, and Wisconsin will receive diplomas and pins at this commencement, and a social hour, with dancing and refreshments, will be held following the graduation exercises.

The woman's session of the Chicago Baptist Mission union will meet on Friday afternoon at the Woodlawn Baptist church, University avenue and 62d street, with Mrs. R. P. Fales presiding. A mothers and daughters' banquet will be served Friday evening, when the speakers will be Mrs. H. E. Goodman, for the mothers, and Miss Louise Rowlands, for the daughters.

"Where Are the Dead?" is the subject of a public address to be delivered this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Aryan Grotto Temple, Wabash avenue and 8th street, by Prof. Paul S. L. Johnson, who claims that many who have given up their loved ones for the sake of liberty have not received much comfort as to the future of those who have fallen. He will lecture under the auspices of the laymen's home missionary movement, the address being for Protestants and Catholics alike.

Today the entire offering at the morning service of St. Paul's Episcopal church, 50th street and Dorchester avenue, will be given to the Hyde Park post of the American Legion, to be used in their service work among the disabled and needy veterans of the great war.

The annual memorial service for Salvation Army officers who have died in the central territory during the past year is to be held at the Third Presbyterian church, Ogden and Ashland avenues, at 3 o'clock this afternoon. Commissioner William Peart, head of the Army in the seventeen middle west states, is to conduct the services, and he is to be supported by the territorial staff and brass band.

Miss Sadie Robbins of Chicago, a member of the Second Baptist church, will be one of the twenty-eight young women who will sail as missionaries to foreign lands during the summer and fall under the auspices of the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission society, Miss Nellie G. Prescott, foreign secretary, announced last week. Miss Robbins will be stationed in South China as a medical missionary. She is a graduate of the South Illinois Normal university and of the Illinois Training School for Nurses. She also spent some time in the Baptist Missionary Traing school and in Shurtleff college.

The annual commencement exercises of Garrett Biblical institute will be held June 5 to 8 inclusive. Bishop Edwin H. Hughes will preach the baccalaureate sermon; Dr. William Forney Hovis of Kansas City, Mo., will deliver the alumni oration; and the commencement address will be made by Bishop Edwin H. Hughes. The graduating class is larger this year than it has been for several years.

Today will be observed by the Knights of Pythias as "Go to Church Sunday." Members will meet at Wilson avenue and Broadway at 10 o'clock this morning and will march to the Pantheon theater, 4650 Sheridan road, the church of the grand chancellor, where services will be held. A police escort is provided for and there will be a group of flag bearers at the head of the procession to demonstrate that this is a true American fraternity and a regiment of the uniform rank will parade.

A patriotic musical program will be given at the Ravenswood Congregational church this evening. Orchestral, vocal, violin, and piano selections will be rendered by pupils from the Chicago Fine Arts Conservatory of Music. William P. Simmons, commander of the Ravenswood post of the American Legion, will talk on "Objects of the Legion."

The Friday morning meeting of the northwest district of the Woman's Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions will be held Friday morning at 11 o'clock in the assembly room on the eighteenth floor of the Stevens building, 17 North State street. This will be a medical missionary meeting in charge of Mrs. D. W. Graham, one of the representatives on the Presbyterian hospital board. A group of missionary scholarship nurses preparing for foreign service in the Presbyterian Hospital Training School for Nurses will speak.

The annual meeting of the Bible Institute Colportage Association of Chicago, founded by Evangelist D. L. Moody in 1894, was held last week. The officers chosen for the ensuing year were William H. Holden, president; Henry P. Crowell, vice president; William Norton, secretary; A. F. Gaylord, treasurer. The secretary's report on the work of the last year showed that, among other missionary book fund activities, 43,846 copies of gospel literature were distributed in the prisons and jails of the United States and Canada, 22,938 copies among the spiritually destitute in the mountain districts of the south, and 20,961 copies of Spanish books were placed through missionaries in the Latin Americas; nearly one-half million gospels and corrective tracts were printed, and the issue of the Gospel of St. John totaled 208,250 copies. Of Mr. Moody's books along there has been a total of 2,560,548 copies published on the association's order.

Away from the City
—but near it

THERE is no more ideal choice for your summer home than the delightful Chicago Beach Hotel. On the shore of Lake Michigan and adjacent to a beautiful park, it is isolated from the noise and rush of the city and yet is only 12 minutes ride from the principal stores and best theaters.

Here you can have every convenience and luxury that you look for in the most luxurious hotel—tasty furnishing, tempting meals in perfectly appointed dining rooms and cafes and prompt and courteous service. Then from verandas and windows you enjoy wonderful views of the lake in all its moods. You get the refreshing breezes which temper the heat of Summer days—you take your plunge at an exclusive bathing beach and have ready access to every form of outdoor recreation—tennis, boating, motoring, horseback riding, golf—and, indoors, there are cards, dancing and music.

Best of all, you will like the friendliness and the lack of formality you will find here. The spirit of the place gives you the feeling of comfort which you have always associated with home. You can have an active life or a quiet one, just as you choose. The two modern buildings, containing 1,000 rooms, give you the choice of single rooms or suites at a wide range of moderate rates.

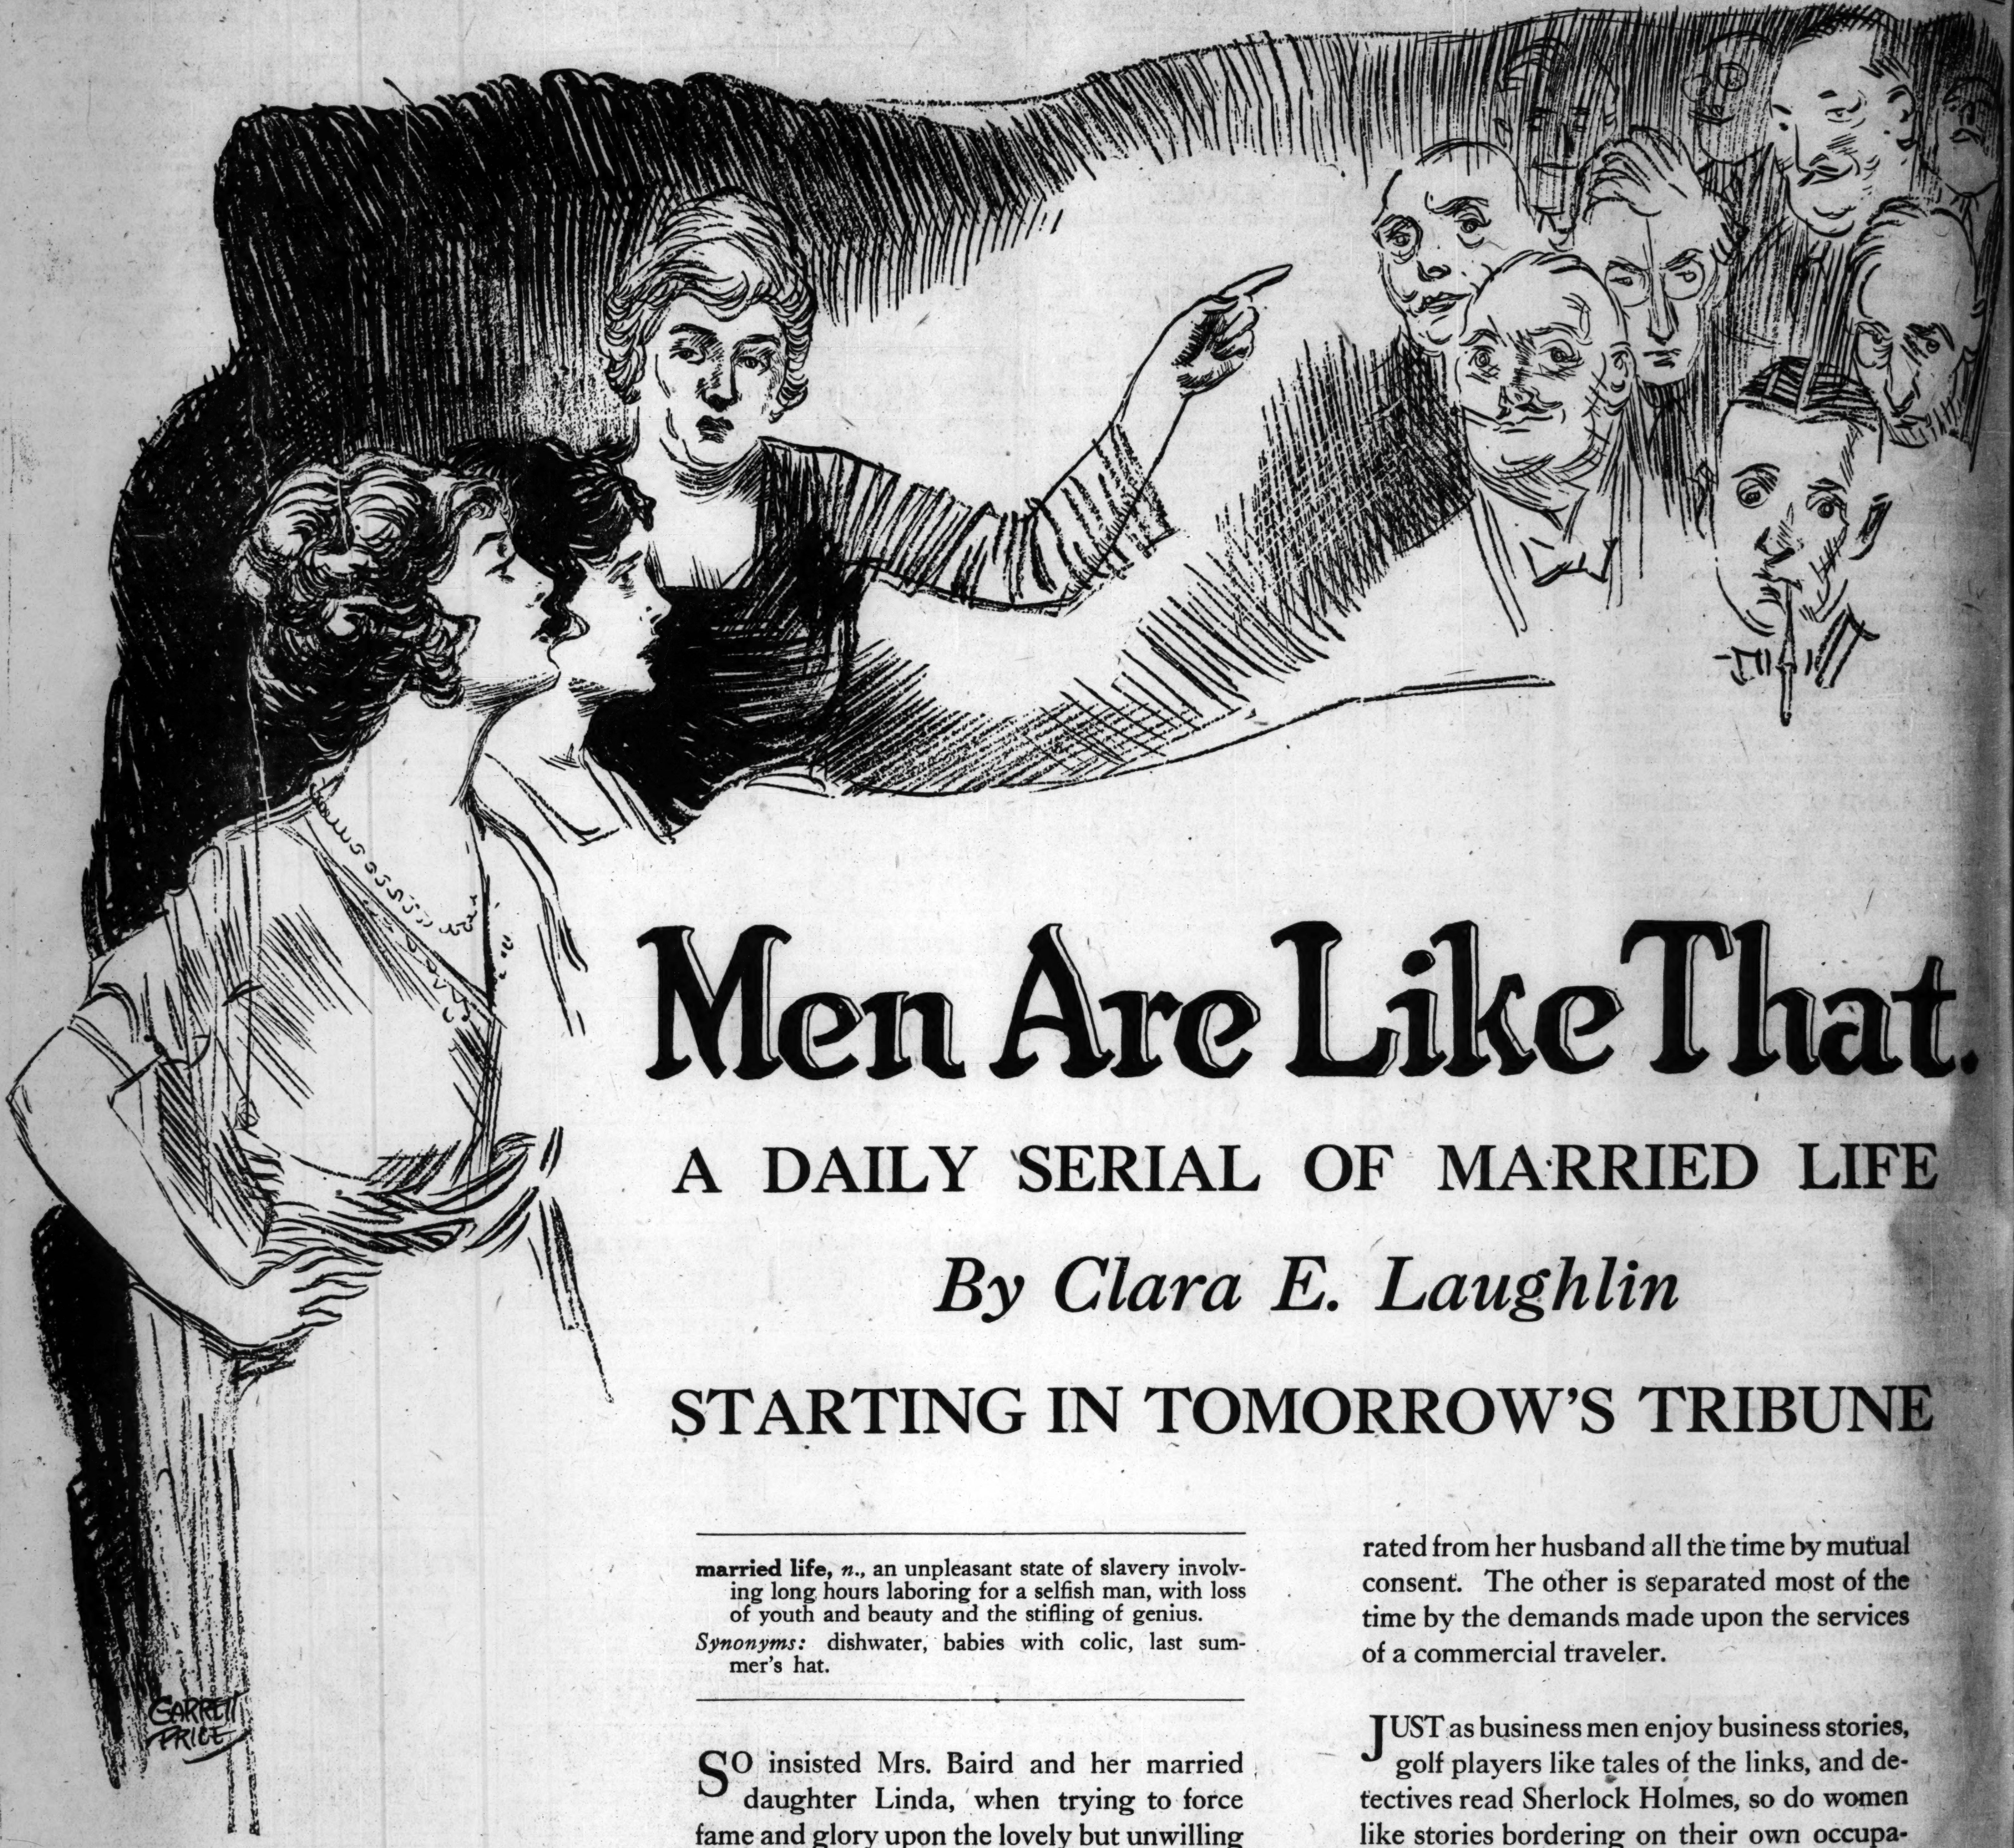
CHICAGO WOMEN THINK
They keep posted. They make their husbands leave THE TRIBUNE at home every morning so they can keep posted. And their husbands get other TRIBUNES at the corner stand.



Men Are Like That.

A DAILY SERIAL OF MARRIED LIFE

By Clara E. Laughlin

STARTING IN TOMORROW'S TRIBUNE

married life, n., an unpleasant state of slavery involving long hours laboring for a selfish man, with loss of youth and beauty and the stifling of genius.
Synonyms: dishwater, babies with colic, last summer's hat.

SO insisted Mrs. Baird and her married daughter Linda, when trying to force fame and glory upon the lovely but unwilling head of Sally Baird. But Sally prefers to keep her illusions, her rainbows and her castles in the air.

IF the Prince of Wales hadn't told Sally (in the first chapter) what a wonderful hit she'd make in his country, Mrs. Baird and Linda might have allowed her to pursue her solitary way into matrimony with the wholesome Jim Hale. Incidentally, women, and men, too, will be interested in knowing what the married contingent in Sally's family think of the holy estate of wedlock. One is separated from her husband all the time by mutual consent. The other is separated most of the time by the demands made upon the services of a commercial traveler.

JUST as business men enjoy business stories, golf players like tales of the links, and detectives read Sherlock Holmes, so do women like stories bordering on their own occupations and problems. This story revolves about the question of whether women should lose their individuality and give up their aspirations when they marry.

MEN ARE LIKE THAT is a daily serial, the first of its kind The Tribune has published. Starting tomorrow it will appear every day in installments. You'll like this interesting story in which two people, taught to consider marriage as akin to a tug of war, learn to pull together. It is Blue Ribbon fiction and only the best is given that label.

First Installment in Tomorrow's Tribune

Read What the Author Says About This Serial:

Miss Clara E. Laughlin has written a married life serial of a new kind because she believes there is a need for a saner and more helpful treatment in fiction of marital experiences. In a letter to The Tribune she speaks about the situation as follows:

"The blight that is continually being cast upon married life by the bitterness and fearfulness of those who have failed in it! I have watched this and listened to it for years with increasing sense of its unfairness and its home wrecking power. I think women—older women—are responsible for a great deal of discouragement of younger women from marriage and in marriage.

"I have been deep in the confidences of a great many girl friends and have a world of material to draw from without using any actual instances.

"I don't believe women are victimized and martyrized as much as they like to claim they are. I believe there's a lot of injustice done by women to men, as well as t'other way around. There are deep-rooted differences between the sexes, but they're meant to be complementary, not antagonistic. Where this perpetual antagonism persists, there's something wrong—and it's probably the point of view; one or both expect marriage to be like a tug of war. This is a story of how two people learn to pull together."

Great Land Opening!!

THE OPPORTUNITY OF A LIFETIME. HOMESEEKERS are offered 20,000 acres of RICH CLAY LOAM LAND for the first time on June 7, 1921. These farm lands are in the heart of the Cloverland of America, known as our Chatham-Trenary district in Michigan's upper peninsula. There is no better land in all this celebrated district. State authorities heartily indorse these lands, which have been held off the market for many years by the big lumber companies. They are now being opened up for the first time.

BIG EXCURSION!

We want you to see the lands, so we have arranged for a special low rate excursion to leave Chicago on June 7 with special Pullman cars for our exclusive use. Automobiles and guides will be furnished FREE. Round trip fare from Chicago credited as part of down payment.

REMARKABLE OFFER! 40 ACRES OF RICH CLAY LOAM LAND ONLY $800, ON YOUR OWN TERMS.

The first 250 purchasers of 40 acres or more will be given a big discount. Most of these lands are priced at $30 per acre. One-third off means an opening price of $20 per acre, or A SAVING OF $400 ON EACH 40 ACRES TO YOU AND THE OTHER 249 PURCHASERS. This price will be absolutely withdrawn after June 7, and you will never again have the opportunity to secure any of this land at this opening price.

COME AND SEE FOR YOURSELF.

Hundreds of people are making arrangements to go on this excursion. Requests for reservations are pouring in on us daily. If you are in earnest and want success, send at once for complete information about these lands and this big excursion. Don't wait. Only a few days left for you to make arrangements to come with us. PAIGE REBUILT

When Bird-Sykes say "rebuilt Paige," they do not mean merely "shined up," "tightened up," and "tuned up." Rebuilt in the Bird-Sykes shop means taking apart motor, transmission and rear axle—measuring or testing parts to determine wear—replacing worn parts with new—rebuilding—adjusting—tuning up—repainting body—refinishing top and upholstery. That is why a Bird-Sykes rebuilt Paige satisfies the eye as a new car and its performance is the same as new.

Guaranteed by Bird-Sykes.

Every Rebuilt Paige is guaranteed by Bird-Sykes to be as represented and in perfect mechanical condition, and if anything turns out unsatisfactory within a reasonable time Bird-Sykes make it good without cost to the purchaser.

Easy Terms—No Brokerage Charge.

We do not ask our customers to pay the exorbitant rates charged by so-called automobile bankers in order to buy of us on deferred payments. You can buy a Bird-Sykes Rebuilt Paige on easy terms, paying only ordinary bank interest rates on deferred payments.

PAIGE LIGHT SIX, model 6-38, 5 passenger. Rebuilt and refinished dustproof gray, with red wheels. All good tires, 32x4, and extra, bumper and full factory equipment of tools. Upholstery excellent. A light, economical car at the bargain price of $875.

PAIGE 6-55, 7 passenger Sedan, 1920. One of those models you have admired, with the slanting wind shield. This beautiful sedan has been so carefully used that it did not need repainting, just a coat of color varnish. Handsome velour upholstery, looks clean as new, and you will be proud of this car in any company. This car sold for $3,650 without extras and has traveled only a few thousand miles, yet today in perfect condition and mechanically rebuilt, you can secure it for only $2,750.

PAIGE SPORT, model 6-55. Just rebuilt and refinished a deep sea green. Equipped with cord tires, bumper, etc. Top and upholstery excellent. We do not often have the opportunity to offer this model at such a low price. You should see this if you want a real car. Only $1,650.

PAIGE 6-42 COUPE, light 4 passenger. This is a demonstrator and is in the best condition imaginable. Has 5 practically new cord tires. Is painted standard blue. This model has been especially attractive to the ladies because of its easy handling and riding. A snap at $2,050.

A BETTER BUY

Our rebuilt automobiles are better bargains—dollar for dollar—than new cars.

By buying rebuilt automomiles from us you save:

1. Manufacturer's profit.
2. Transportat'n charges
3. Dealer's profit.
4. Government war tax.

Every rebuilt car in our stock has been traded in for a new

ELCAR

First we put the car in first class shape mechanically and brighten it up with fresh paint. This insures you a car practically as good as new.

We make reasonable allowances only in trades, and our carefulness reacts in favor of the buyer. We charge just exactly what the car stands us—all our profit comes from the sale of new Elcars.

By the way, the new 1921 Elcar at $1,700, factory, equipped with cord tires and real leather upholstery, is a wonderful bargain.

Open Sundays, Memorial Day, and evenings.

CADILLAC'S 4 BARGAINS

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 57, VICTORIA COUPE. This is a roomy 4 passenger coupe, and probably the most popular model ever built by this company. It is equipped with an almost new set of cord tires and one extra. Painted a dark Cadillac blue. Upholstering and paint in good shape. Mechanical condition will bear most rigid examination and demonstration. Equipped with a spare bumper, clock, and seat covers. Considering the general condition of this car and its equipment and the care and attention it has had by the original owner, this is by far the best bargain we have ever offered. Price, $2,350.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 55, TOURING CAR. This is an exceptional car as you will agree with us when you look at the paint, upholstering, and top, because they show but very little wear. It has not been driven a great number of miles and the original owner has availed himself of our service, which has preserved this automobile. We have done what mechanical work we have found necessary. Has an excellent set of cord tires, one extra, bumper, clock, etc. This we believe is your best opportunity to buy a high grade Cadillac at the ridiculously low price of $1,500.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 55, CONVERTIBLE SEDAN. This is a roomy modern Cadillac car, in most excellent mechanical condition. Paint and upholstering exceptionally fine. Has an excellent set of cord tires, 2 extras, bumper, etc. We are very fortunate in being able to trade this car at this time. The former owner has given it remarkably fine care, and it has had very low mileage. We believe this to be the best bargain in a sedan we have ever offered. Price, $1,500.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 51, BERLIN LIMOUSINE. This is by far the best Berlin Limousine of this type that we have ever offered. It is exceptional due to the fact that it has never been out of the original owner's hands and he has availed himself of our service and kept the car in remarkable condition. It is equipped with an excellent set of cord tires, one extra, and bumper. Paint and upholstering in good condition. Mechanical condition exceptionally fine. Do not miss this opportunity if you want a real bargain in a high grade limousine. Special for this sale. $1,000.

STUDEBAKER COUPE, 1920. This roomy coupe of this particular make is probably the best bargain offered in today's paper. It has run but very little. Has an excellent set of cord tires and one extra. Paint, which is dark blue, looks like new. Mechanical condition is exceptionally fine. If you want a real bargain in a coupe don't fail to see this. Price $1,400.

Packard 2-25 Phaeton TWIN SIX, $2,750

It is far wiser to buy a high grade, perfect used car, such as this Packard we are offering, than a cheap new one. There are years of wonderful service to be had from this beautiful machine, and with it a real pride of ownership. Mechanically the car has been rebuilt—by that we mean every worn part has been replaced with a new one and the entire mechanism made to function as smoothly and quietly as when new. The exterior has been repainted maroon and black. Renickled. A set of beautiful new tan cravenette cloth seat covers have been carefully fitted on over the perfect leather upholstery. There are 4 brand new tires on the wheels and 2 extra wire wheels, tires, tubes, and covers. The entire car looks as fresh and new as the day it left the factory and is truly beautiful. A twin six Packard sells for $6,700 as this car is equipped, and at our "priced to move quickly" low figure of $2,750 we expect a hundred calls, so we suggest quick action if you want a real automobile at the price of a mediocre one. Standard new car guarantee. Terms. Open Sunday and Evenings.

EUROPEAN TRADE PROBLEMS—
Owing to the large orders from American firms for a variety of European merchandise [principally German] and also because of numerous orders from abroad for American goods, I am departing the latter part of June on an extensive trip, covering Belgium, Denmark, Germany, Austria, France, Czecho-Slovakia, Jugo-Slavia, Hungary, Poland, and part of Italy.

I shall be in personal touch with leading manufacturers, authorities, importers, and exporters of countries and places indicated, and thus offer my services to a limited number of reputable manufacturers and merchants in fostering trade, establishing agency connections, settling present disputes and difficulties, and attend to the purchasing and diposing of merchandise.

My long residence abroad and familiarity with European languages and commercial customs assures competent personal handling of any commission undertaken. J. W. KARNER JR., Main Office, 79 Wall-st., New York.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

UPPER MICHIGAN ALL SET FOR TWO BIG PROJECTS

Waiting for Curtain on Labor Sketch.

BY AL CHASE.

What should prove to be two of the most important improvements for upper Michigan avenue have reached the point where all that delays their taking the stage is that no one seems to be able to ring down the curtain on our annual building trades sketch which keeps dragging along with no loud cheers from the audience.

But just as soon as that unpleasantness is out of the way work will start on two exceptionally attractive buildings—one the new four story home of the Lake Shore Trust and Savings bank, at the northeast corner of Michigan and Ohio, and the other the four story Michigan-Erie building at the southwest corner of Boul. Mich and Erie, just two blocks north of the new bank.

Following out the idea back of the development of upper Michigan avenue into the upper 5th avenue of Chicago, which is to keep the architectural lines as uniform and harmonious as possible and thus avoid a jagged building line if practical, the plans for both buildings have been submitted to the North Central association for its approval.

1921 Will Reward Architects.

At the same time both buildings automatically will be entered in the contest for the honors to be awarded to the architectural firm designing the finest building for upper Michigan avenue during 1921 and to the owners who erect the most attractive structure. This plan has been in effect in upper 5th avenue for several years, with the result that both owners and architects strive for the gold medals and other honors—and the street benefits with finer buildings.

Marshall & Fox have designed the four story building for the Lake Shore Trust and Savings bank to be erected instead of the thirteen story building originally planned and pictured in this department in November, 1919. Its cost, including bank fittings and fixtures, will be $364,000. If our battling builders and unions shake hands soon the new bank should be completed about November.

Four Boulevard Shops.

It will front 100 feet on the boulevard, with a thirty foot bank entrance in the center and two 16x60 shops on each side. The Ohio street frontage will be 117 feet. A big chain cigar store company is negotiating for the corner store. An insurance company is negotiating for two upper floors. Definite arrangements for dividing the three upper floors have not been made, but space will be rented both for offices and shops. Winston & Co. will be the agents of the building.

The bank will be T shaped, with the lower end of the T the entrance on the boulevard and the upper part across the back of the building. The banking floors will be two stories high—thirty-one feet. In the basement will be safe deposit vaults both for securities and for packages and trunks.

Seek Gold Coast Gold.

A special appeal to the Gold Coast and near north side feminine population will be made with an unusually luxurious ladies' rest room, with a special private teller's window, to be in charge of a woman teller, so depositors need not go into the main banking room to deposit or withdraw their funds.

The building will be of gray terra cotta, with Bedford stone columns, and of steel construction. The site is owned by the North Town Building corporation and is leased to the Lake Shore Safe Deposit company.

To Cost $200,000.

Architect Robert S. De Golyer designed the Michigan-Erie building, which will front 109 feet on Michigan and seventy-five feet on Erie, for the Michigan-Erie corporation, represented by Baird & Warner. It will have six shops on the first floor. The upper floors will be arranged to suit tenants, either for offices or shops. It will cost approximately $200,000. The basement will be used for a restaurant.

REALTY BOARD MERGER TO BE DECIDED SOON

To merge or not to merge is a question that has been agitating the Chicago and Cook County Real Estate boards more or less for several years. It will be settled and announced next Wednesday at the Chicago Real Estate board rooms. At least so President L. M. Smith of the Chicago Real Estate board believes.

After long and weary discussions and much correspondence, Mr. Smith announced to the officers of the Cook county board that if they would submit the question directly to their members and 75 per cent accepted the head of the Cook County Real Estate board, President A. W. Stanmeyer, could at once become co-president with him of the Chicago Real Estate board, sharing with him all the powers and privileges of that position.

Mr. Stanmeyer said he would consider Mr. Smith's offer and give a reply next Wednesday.

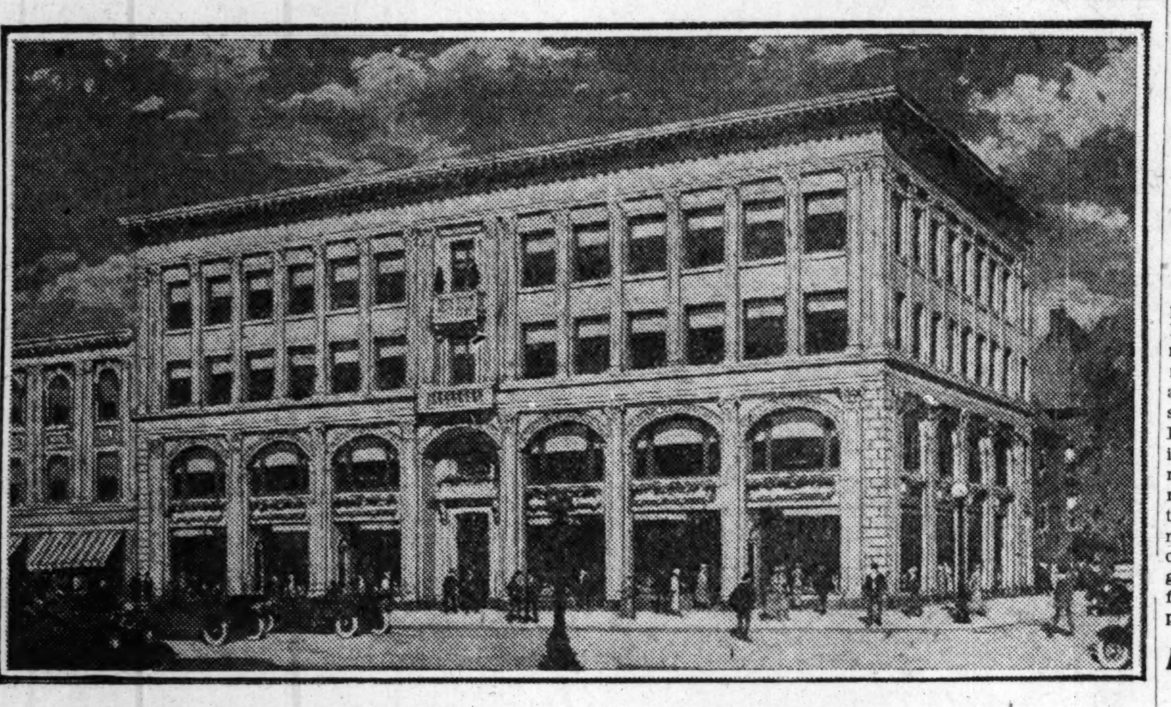
Upper Michigan avenue's first bank, the Lake Shore Trust and Savings, now in temporary quarters at the northwest corner of Michigan and Ohio, will soon have one of the most attractive buildings in the city directly across the boulevard at the northeast corner. Marshall & Fox have designed a four story building which with the bank fittings will cost $364,000. Winston & Co. will handle the property.



Architect Robert S. De Golyer has designed the four story Michigan-Erie building to be erected at the southwest corner of the boulevard and Erie street, in the Italian type of architecture. The exterior will be Bedford stone and gray brick, with iron grills, flower boxes, etc., to bring out the life and color of the period. It will cost $200,000. Baird & Warner will be the agents of the property.

TELLS REALTOR HOW TO GET HIS NEWS IN PRINT

As relatively few realtors seem to understand how to get news of their deals before the public through the papers or know what constitutes news value in a realty sale, we would suggest to every broker who wonders why he doesn't get the publicity that some one else seems to be getting, to read what Don Goss, publicity director for the National Association of Real Estate Boards, has to say. Mr. Goss, who has been reporter, city editor, and special writer on real estate and finance for ten years, wrote about "Getting Real Estate News Into the Press" in a recent issue of the National Real Estate Journal, a Chicago publication. We give below some excerpts from it. We wish every Cook county realtor would not only read what follows but would get a copy of the National Real Estate Journal for April 25 and read the entire article. It's worth while.

REAL ESTATE EDITOR OF THE TRIBUNE.

BY DON GOSS.

DON GOSS.

Real estate boards and the real estate business generally speaking do not obtain the publicity to which they are entitled. In a large measure failure to obtain this publicity is due to a lack of knowledge on the part of real estate men of some of the fundamentals and the technique of publicity, and a failure to appreciate the relationship that should be maintained with those whose business it is to keep the public informed.

The news columns of the daily newspapers are the greatest and most effective media of publicity. Newspapers generally consider worth printing any information that will interest a considerable part of the public.

To be effective in a big way, the real estate business and real estate boards must have the support of the public. To this end intelligent publicity is a powerful force. There is no human endeavor that cannot be materially assisted or injured by publicity. For this reason it is well worth while for real estate men to study publicity and to acquaint themselves with at least some of its fundamental principles.

Always Tell the Truth.

Of first importance is the matter of establishing confidence between yourself and the real estate editor. Always "come clean." You might victimize a newspaper one time with an inaccurate statement of facts, but your loss in prestige and subsequent publicity would much more than offset any temporary advantage of that nature. Strive to bring about such a relationship that the real estate editor will have implicit faith in any statement of fact, because you make it. This can be brought about by scrutinizing closely for absolute accuracy all matter you submit for publication.

Don't attempt to force your way into the news columns with matter that is purely advertising or relatively unimportant news on the ground that you pay for a certain amount of advertising. Buying advertising space is not purchasing an editorial privilege.

Take the real estate editor into your confidence in regard to deals pending. With advance knowledge of deals pending, the newspaper man can be properly prepared to take care of the story and often he can give you publicity advice of material benefit, such as in the use of pictures, and he will cooperate to your advantage in other respects.

How to Get Publicity.

A realtor who understands the proper employment of publicity, recently called the real estate editor of a metropolitan afternoon paper to his office and told him of a sale he was negotiating of the home of one of the best known authors in America. The newspaper man had pictures of the property prepared in advance and dug up interesting bits of human interest in regard to the property and the author owner.

With the signing of the contract for the sale of the property the story, with the pictures, appeared on the front page of the paper, as did the name of the realtor who negotiated the deal.

Late the same day the real estate editor, through a banker friend, learned that one of the most valuable country estates in the state had been sold for half a million. A hurried investigation revealed the buyers and a few moments before going to press two short paragraphs were inserted in the news columns.

Later that day a realtor called up the real estate editor and said he had negotiated the sale and was deeply hurt that he had not obtained as much or more publicity than the first realtor. It was the first time the second realtor had mentioned the deal to the newspaper man.

Tell About the Other Fellow.

Go further with the real estate editor than just the activities in which you alone are concerned. Give him tips about the other fellow.

A live real estate editor will see publicity for you in ways you never dreamed of, often in little facts of human interest in connection with the property or the people involved. Then too, news of activity in the realty market stimulates public confidence in investments in real property, which helps your business.

Realtor Notes

De Forrest A. Matteson, builder, and Walter A. Conran, formerly operating as Walter A. Conran & Co., have formed the new firm of Matteson & Conran, to conduct a general real estate brokerage and mortgage business, with new offices in the Boyce building, 30 North Dearborn street. Telephones are Central 3600 and 5190.

The Continental First Mortgage Bond company announces its entry into the mortgage bond field, with offices at 20 West Jackson boulevard.

BUYS WEST SIDE FACTORY.

The three story brick factory, containing 73,000 square feet of floor space, at 2515-25 West Taylor street, has been sold by Frank W. Williams to Isador F. Lieberman and Kelley Goldboss, through J. H. Van Vlissingen & Co., for a reported $107,500. The ground fronts 210 feet on Taylor and is 126 feet deep. The buyers will occupy it for the manufacture of furniture.

ARGYLE AND TROY CORNER SOLD.

Grace Salomon paid an indicated $82,300, subject to $50,300, for the eighteen flat building at the southeast corner of Troy and Argyle, lot 58x125. Stephen A. Clifford and George Pfluegner were grantors.

ALL READY FOR $500,000 HOME BUILDING PLAN

Winnetka Concern Soon to Start Work.

"Wanted—vacant property" is the unusual sign to be seen scattered about Winnetka. It is part of a $500,000 house building program for that town which Whiteson & Johnston intend to put through as soon as building conditions improve. According to I. Whiteson, practically all the necessary sites for the proposed residences have been secured. Sites in Wilmette and Evanston also have been purchased and a big building campaign in those towns will be announced later.

The houses planned by Architect William Parker Whitney are to be sold at from $10,000 to $15,000 with a cash payment as low as $2,500, the balance to be paid in five years, with interest at 6 per cent. They will be sold only to individuals.

The houses will be on the unit plan, so arranged that later on additions such as sleeping porches, garages, etc., may be built on without destroying the symmetry of the original design.

The first residence will be on Warwick avenue, just south of the New Trier Township high school, to be followed by other Winnetka houses at Abbottsford road and Winnetka. Some other sites are on Elder lane, Fir street, Willow street, Garland avenue and Walden road.

Congregation Dorshe Tov Plans $150,000 Temple

Congregation Dorshe Tov has had plans drawn by Architect David Saul Klafter for a new temple and community building at the northwest corner of North Hoyne and Evergreen avenues, to cost around $150,000. The synagogue will be designed in the Byzantine style of architecture. The interior will be paneled in walnut with marble base, with walls and ceiling of modeled plaster. The building now on the lot will be moved to the rear and remodeled into a complete and modern community house with schoolrooms, gymnasium, kitchen, and provision for social activities. S. Friedman is president of the congregation.

Daylight Saving at Last Reaches County Building

Daylight saving—that innovation which has caused as much profanity, due to time mixups, as the telephone or crossing cop—has at last, after much argument, reached the county building.

County Recorder Haas announces that from now until we get back to clock normalcy the time for filing documents of record will be from 8 a. m. to 4 p. m. instead of 5 o'clock. The other county departments will be open until 5 o'clock as formerly.

Rippling the Surface or Sounding the Depths?

There is a limit to the average owner's analysis of the adaptability of his business property. Likewise the same limit exists in the tenant's analysis of the potential features of his new location. Thus these limitations confine both owner and tenant to merely "rippling the surface" in their investigation of each other.

As a business property specialist, Joseph O. Kaplan has devoted many years to the task of placing the right tenant in the right location! He "sounds the depths" by virtue of his constant study of business properties. His knowledge of the possibilities each location affords various lines of business—has been expressively termed "uncanny."

Mr. Kaplan will be pleased to confer with you on your particular realty problem.

A booklet, "A Brief Study of Business Property," is now in process of compilation. It will be sent to you gratis, upon request on your letterhead.
